MISDIRECTIONS.

One of the important things to do is to be sure of your addresses. Perpetual annoyance is the result of the tendency to carelessness in this regard. In both the retail and wholesale branches of the business stock is sent out times without number with wrong addresses. When a retailer makes such a mistake the consequences usually are not serious. If the delivery is local, when the messenger finds he has been wrongly instructed he calls the store on the telephone and is set right, so that no great amount of time is lost. But when a retailer ships for his customers to their friends out of town and gets the address wrong he frequently not only loses the stock shipped, but the customer as well, and the customer's friends. When wholesalers ship plants or cut flowers by express to wrong addresses loss is pretty certain to ensue. In the larger cities the express company employees have been fairly well educated to take prompt action on undeliverable plant and cut flower shipments, but a case came to light the other day where a shipment of live plants from Massachusetts had reposed quietly in one California town for sixty days, while a florist in another town of somewhat similar name had been looking and wiring for the stock that never came. Another case developed where a box of plants went to the wrong town (only a couple of letters difference in the names) and is still there months later, waiting for responsibility to be determined. A fertile source of trouble lies in the number of towns of the same name in the different states—he is a careful shipping clerk who never writes Newark, N. J., where Newark, N. Y., is meant.

OTTUMWA, IA.

C. Kranz, who has a store at 107 North Market street and about 45,000 square feet of glass along Sugar creek, two and a half miles east of the city, now finds that the greenhouses, though they occupy all the available ground at the present location, are much too small to supply the needed stock. He has therefore secured a larger tract of land at the south side of the city, on Hamilton, Webster and Wapello streets and Finley avenue, and will at once build four greenhouses there, each 23x300 feet. He will also remove the present greenhouses to the new location, and the entire range, when completed, will contain at least 70,000 square feet of glass. He is also erecting an eight-room residence on the new site. It is expected that the whole establishment will be ready for operation by October 1.

Mr. Kranz came here eighteen years ago, from Muscatine, Ia., where he, with his father and brothers, had built up a large trade as florists. For a time after coming here Mr. Kranz grew garden produce, but the expansion of the flower business caused him to give up the garden truck and devote his attention entirely to flowers. About one-third of the output of his houses is shipped to points outside of the city.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

Percy Herbert, grower for the Yuess Gardens Co., at Newburgh, N. Y., finds the 'refuse from carboys makes excellent shading. When mixed with water and sprayed upon glass, an ordinary rain will not wash it off. Frost makes it curl up, avoiding the necessity for cleaning it off. This firm's Easter stock was in fine shape. Liliun giganteum was just right and has jumped into front rank, surpassing Harrisii and Formosas. The new stock, Sunrise, makes an excellent pot plant; its brilliant rose color and double flower are attractive. President Cathcart reports store business away ahead of previous years.

The Schaefer Co., of Newburgh, announced an all-day reception for visitors on Palm Sunday, and was well pleased with the record-breaking attendance. This firm had a capital lot of Easter stock, which was going at good prices.

George Crawshaw, of Newburgh, finds funeral work in plenty at all times.

The Newburgh Floral Co. has made a big reputation in carnations and expects to make large additions to its plant. The new bench frame, patented by Dr. Wait, will probably be extensively put to the test at that time.

Wood Bros., of Fishkill, N. Y., supply a large proportion of the single violets sold in the Hudson valley, being both wholesalers and retailers. It keeps them hustling to supply the demand.

This is The Florists' Manual

By William Scott

SECOND EDITION

THOROUGHLY REVISED AND BROUGHT UP TO DATE

NO SCIENCE, BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE

"I have several times been consulted by those who would make a beginning in the Florists' business. In each case I have said that the first step is to subscribe for a Trade Paper, and the next to procure a copy of the Florists' Manual." —J. A. VALENTINE, Pres. Park Floral Co., Denver, Colo.

"Find enclosed $5 for the Florists' Manual, by William Scott. It is the best book of the age on commercial floriculture and should be in the home of every gardener." —CONRAD FORBACH, Buffalo, N. Y.

No dry-as-dust botanical classifications, but tells you just how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

Various Notes.

At Theo. A. Greeve's new place, near the cemetery, the stock is in fine shape, and the orders already on the books for plants for the coming spring will tax the place to its full capacity. Plenty of good local capital is behind this place and more houses are planned for the coming spring.

well-grown lot of cyclamens. For Easter they had the cleanest lot of lilies the writer has seen this year. Their L. giganteum, then in the cool house to prepare for shipping, was in fine shape. They have added mushrooms to their many specialties and have had wonderful success, cutting easily two pounds per square foot of bed, and this in their cold house.
When mushrooms can be grown as the Kemble Floral Co. can grow them, they are perhaps the most profitable crop a florist can handle. This firm is thinking of adding more glass this spring.

The Market.

The week is opening with delightful weather, which, if it only continues, will certainly make this a banner plant year.
Trade has been good along all lines, taking up everything that came in and causing a shortage of carnations all of last week. All of these things make the trade feel that they are going to have an old-time Easter.

There are some unusually handsome arrangements of plants in all of the stores, and such quantities of them that one wonders where there will be room for the cut flowers. However, there is no doubt but that the usual demand for cut flowers will be there when the time comes.

The wholesalers cleaned up practically everything each day last week, and had great expectations for this week. There were a few southern narcissi in the market March 21, but they were not of much account. There is, however, lots of fine home-grown bulb stock coming every day.

The growers should be thankful for the kind of weather we have had this month, for had it not been bright, most of them would have missed it with their lilies. Even as it is, it is doubtful if there will be enough. The people who

Pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE United States government has decided that "the Rocky Ford melon is not a new variety of melon, but is one of the older varieties which in the environment of Rocky Ford, Colo., has attained particular excellence."

THE March issue of the government's Crop Reporter contains the full report on the purity tests of seeds for the year 1909, with list of those from whom adulterated or misbranded seeds were obtained. The report was summarized in the REVIEW several weeks ago.

ACCORDING to the Illinois State Board of Agriculture, the clover seed crop of the state in 1909 was 43,041 bushels, compared with the banner crop of 193,509 bushels in 1897. The price for last year's crop is put down as worth $6.50 per bushel, while the big crop brought $3.15.

IN the Channel Islands, which are to the London market what tidewater Virginia is to the Philadelphia and New York flower centers, it is said that "buyers of Guernsey bulbs can always rely on their flowering at least twelve or fourteen days before the Dutch bulbs of the same varieties which may have been put in the same field at the same time."

THE Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O., has established a house organ, called "Livingston's Seasonable Garden Suggestions," and edited by Adolph Kruhm. It consists of eight pages and cover, size 4½x6. The covers of the first issue, front and back, are from a photo showing the harvesting of the Ohio Yellow Globe onions that will give the seed crop of 1910.

CALIFORNIA CONDITIONS.

Writing at Gilroy, Cal., March 16, Waldo Rohnert had the following to say of interest to the seed trade in general regarding conditions in the California growing territory:

"In regard to the conditions of seed crops, will say that the winter has been ideal for the seed grower. Rains came in sufficient quantity and at just the right time to give the growers ample time to prepare their land and get in the crop early. On my 1,000 acres that I have in seed crops this season we had no trouble in getting a stand with the ex-

AMMONIATED LAWN LIME

Kills Weeds—Makes Grass Grow

Applied as a light top dressing to lawns, it kills all flat leaved weeds, such as Dandelion, Daisy, Plantain, Sorrel, Chickweed, Moss, etc., in 48 hours and without other fertilizer produces a wonderful, luxuriant, rich green growth of lawn grass—which is distinctly noticeable 50 feet away.

The use of Ammoniated Lawn Lime supersedes hand weeding of lawns, putting greens, etc. It saves the grass from being pulled up and in many cases ruined. Grasses take a new, vigorous growth, avoiding probable trouble in future.

Quantities: If very weedy, 1 lb. to 40 sq. ft.; 25 lbs. to 1000 sq. ft. (20 x 50). Half to one-quarter amount if moderately weedy.

Absolutely Guaranteed

Money Refunded if Not Satisfactory

"NOT HOW CHEAP—
BUT HOW GOOD"

If a market is flooded with a common, cheap article, it must have some effect upon higher grade products, which in a degree it can substitute. This cheap product often falls into the hands of purchasers who become disappointed with their bargain, and is consequently a detriment to the business. Are you going to supply the cheap product or the best you can grow? If you want to build the best kind of a business, you must buy the best you can get and produce the best flowers.

ception of a few acres of radish that the frost took in early January, and a few acres of lettuce that had to be resowed on account of cutworms.

"While stuff is still small, we are a long ways from the harvest and many mishaps can befall the crop before the seed is in the bag.

"Our main effort now is in getting the crop cleaned and, owing to the scarcity of labor, this seems to go slower this year than in any previous years."

ROCKY FORD MELON RULING.

A Rocky Ford melon must be grown at Rocky Ford, and not elsewhere, to be sold under that name.

The United States Board of Food and Drug Inspection has issued a decision (No. 115) relative to the use of geographical names for food products that is of large interest to the seed trade. It results in an anomaly:

A seedsman legally may sell seeds as Rocky Ford melon seeds, no matter where the seeds were grown, but the planter cannot legally sell in interstate commerce the product of those seeds as Rocky Ford melons except if the seeds actually were planted and the melons grown in the Rocky Ford district of Colorado; nor can the melons be sold as Rocky Ford Seed melons.

A former decision of the Board of Food and Drug Inspection ruled that geographical names shall not be used upon those products which were not produced in the territory so indicated unless by long usage such a name has come to represent a generic term, when, in addition to the geographical name of the product, should be added the state or territory where such an article was actually manufactured or produced. The new decision, which is in fact an amplification of this ruling, reads as follows:

"There are many cases which have been considered by the Board of Food and Drug Inspection in which it has been necessary to decide whether or not, in its opinion, certain geographical names have been sufficiently generic to indicate a style, type, or brand, and in consequence might be used without offending any of the provisions of the Food and ASTER. Hercules. White. Remarkable new introduction, semi-dwarf, huge pure white flowers of most refined shape; the best white flowering Aster we have ever seen, pkt., 25c; ¼ oz., $1.00; ½ oz., $3.50; oz., $7.00.

ASTER. Splendor. Upright flesh pink. In this variety we have one of great value. It has many qualities which commend it highly, not only in the habit of growth, but in size, form of flower, and in color, which is one of the most desirable in an Aster, being of a beautiful light flesh pink, a shade which can be used in nearly all floral work. The plant has the ideal habit of an upright growing sort, pkt., 25c; ¼ oz., $1.75; oz., $5.00.

ASTER. Vick's Violet King. The peer of the grandest Chrysanthemum. The habit is similar to the popular Vick's Branching, vigorous in growth, long, stiff stems; petals somewhat resemble the quilled varieties but much larger and broader, completely covering the crown. In shape and size the bloom is round, full and large, many of the flowers 4 to 5 inches. Its color is a soft violet-lilac, trade pkt., 25c; oz., $1.50.

Drugs act. Among the geographical names which have been under consideration are Rocky Ford as applied to cantaloupes and Indian River as applied to oranges.

"The Rocky Ford melon is not a new variety of melon, but is one of the older varieties of melons, which in the environment of Rocky Ford, Colo., has attained particular excellence.

"The same remark applies to the Indian River oranges of Florida. They are not a new variety, but various varieties which in the environment of the Indian river have attained unusual excellence.

"The board holds that the terms Rocky Ford and Indian River have not become sufficiently generic to indicate styles, types, or brands of melons and oranges, respectively, but that these geographical names are only properly applied to the product of the restricted area for the melons which are grown in or near Rocky Ford, and for the product grown in or near the Indian river. Inasmuch as the term Rocky Ford has thus become associated with a melon of peculiar excellence of a certain geographical locality, the board holds that it is unlawful to sell in interstate commerce melons not grown in the Rocky Ford district as Rocky Ford Seed melons. The terms are nearly alike, the intent is to deceive, and the law provides that a label should not be false or deceptive in any particular."

ROCHESTER SEED TRADE NOTES.

James Vick's Sons report a large increase of business this spring. The general business, including the retail mail order and wholesale departments and retail store, surpasses that of any previous season for many years. W. H. Dildine, superintendent, states that during the first three weeks in March the actual increase in number of wholesale orders over any similar previous period in the history of the concern is thirty-two and one-half per cent. Owing to this enormous increase, the wholesale department fell a little behind in filling orders until it necessitated a complete rearrangement of the filling and packing departments, putting on a double force. By working overtime they have caught up, so that now they are filling nearly all orders the day they arrive.

Fred B. King, of Mandeville & King, is enjoying a needed rest in Cuba. Mr. King will visit Havana, Isle of Pines, Nassau, thence to New Orleans and some points in Florida, returning to Rochester about the middle of April.

Crosman Bros. are about to move their retail store from 275 Main street, East, to larger and more convenient quarters in the Cutler building, 375 Main street, East. W. T. Logan will still remain in charge. E. F. R.

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $21,485; peas, $6,038, and beans, $39,101.

GREGORY'S WILL.

The will of the late James J. H. Gregory, the seedsman of Marblehead, Mass., which has been filed for probate, is a unique document, characteristic of Mr. Gregory, and illustrating his world-wide interest in humanity and his practical nature. Perhaps the most unique provision is a fund for the benefit of mothers of twins, and next his gifts to all the churches of Marblehead, regardless of denomination.

Most of his estate goes to his wife during her life, and on her death it goes to the American Home Missionary Society, as a fund, the income of which is to be used to purchase some character-forming books to be given to graduates of normal and high classes among the people of the south known as "mountain whites," "whose noble patriotism during the Civil war I wish to honor."

He gives the sum of $1,000 to the town of Marblehead in trust, in these words: "Having had my sympathy deeply moved by reason of burdens entailed on loving mothers (poor in the things of this world) who have had twins brought into this world, as an expression of that sympathy, I hereby leave in trust to my beloved town the sum of $1,000." He provides that the income shall be equally divided among the mothers of twins born in the town during the preceding year, where the parents do not own the houses in which they live and if the twins survive for three months.

He gives $100 each to the Episcopal, Catholic, Methodist, Baptist and Univer-

RAWSON'S LEADING ASTERS

Queen of the Market Asters

This is the best early out-of-door Aster. In colors as follows: Dark blue, light blue, white, rose, peach blossom, crimson. Per ¼ oz., 20c; per oz., 60c. All colors mixed, per ¼ oz., 15c; per oz., 50c.

Rawson's New Midsummer Aster

This is one of the best Asters for midsummer or late crop and we recommend it highly. Flowers are large and are borne on erect, long stems, often 2 feet in length. We offer the following colors: Pure white, delicate shell pink, royal purple, true lavender and bright rose. ¼ oz., 60c; oz., $2.00. All colors mixed, ¼ oz., 50c; oz., $1.50.

Rawson's Late Branching Aster

This is the best American Branching Aster grown today. It is a late cropper and a money maker. Flowers grown from our seed invariably bring from ½ to 1c a flower more in the wholesale market than other similar strains. We can furnish the following separate colors: Crimson, dark blue, light blue, rose pink, shell pink, scarlet and white. ¼ oz., 30c; oz., $1.00. All colors mixed, ¼ oz., 25c; oz., 75c.

We have many other good strains of Asters and Specialties for Florists, all described in our Special Catalogue to Florists (mailed free).

Of early blooming narcissi the new one sent out by the Hubert Bulb Co., of the Doyle Road Nurseries, Guernsey, and of Portsmouth, Va., and named Guernsey Silver Spur is well worthy all bulb-growers' attention; says a writer of Channel Islands gossip in an English trade paper. It is quite the earliest of all the bicolor trumpets, flowering just as early as Golden Spur and like Golden Spur a good inside early variety. The Guernsey Silver Spur is an exact counterpart of the Golden Spur except in the perianth, and that is a beautiful silvery white, delicate and pretty. This should prove one of the most valuable of recent novelties. It is somewhat like Empress but has longer stems and is much more upright. I believe that the Hubert Bulb Co. did not raise the variety, but that Frank J. Hubert saw it in a Dutch nursery and purchased the whole stock. All the Guernsey bulb merchants now catalogue it.

Beet tops, 75c box; cucumbers, $1 to $1.50 doz.; lettuce, $2 to $2.75 strap; mint, 25c to 50c dozen bunches; mushrooms, 20c to 45c lb.; radishes, $2 to $3.50 hundred bunches; rhubarb, $4.50 to $5.50 hundred bunches; tomatoes, 10c to 25c lb.

DISEASED LETTUCE.

Will you kindly tell me what is the trouble with my lettuce? I fumigate the lettuce house twice a week, feed once a week with liquid cow manure and also with nitrate of soda, give plenty of ventilation whenever it is necessary and keep the temperature at 45 degrees at night and 55 degrees during the day. The first four or five crops I grew were all right, but after that this kind of disease appeared. R. B. K.

Your temperature has been all right, but your fumigating has been overplentiful. Light doses once a week are usually sufficient to keep lice from getting started. Too much or too strong fumigating will sometimes burn the edges of the leaves.

You have also been too liberal with feed. If the soil was new and good last fall, you would need but little liquid fertilizer for lettuce. Nitrate of soda, in weak solution, would be a little the best. Of course, if your soil is old and worn out it takes more feed, but the soil should be changed every summer and new, fresh soil put in, which has had some well rotted manure mixed with it.

At first glance I thought the samples looked as if they had been injured by something, but if they are not affected in all parts of the house it would hardly be from injury by fumigating or from too strong a sprinkling of nitrate of soda. I concluded that the trouble is the common fungous disease, which gives lettuce growers considerable annoyance.

One of the remedies is plenty of fresh air. Keep a little ventilation on at all times and keep the foliage as dry as possible, to prevent the disease from spreading. Water well when you do water, but not again until really needed. Watering frequently or late in the day has the effect of keeping the leaves wet all the time. Remove all the diseased plants and scrape the top off the soil of the beds where they were, so as to get the disease spores out of the house.

If you would change the soil, it would probably rid you of the disease, temporarily, at least. H. G.

PLANTS FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

We should like to know the best way to get our fuchsias in flower for Memorial day, also our heliotropes and geraniums. We have our house 50 degrees at night and 60 degrees in the day time, and are located in Pittsburg. D. & B.

You do not state what size of plants you have. Geraniums should now go in 4-inch pots if nicely established in 3-inch pots. Such a house as you have will suit them well. Discontinue any pinching of the fuchsias after this time. They should be moved into the pots they are to flower in not later than the end of the present month. Use a rather light but rich soil and press this firmly in the pots. Heliotropes will not require any further pinching after the first week in April and should go into their flowering pots by the middle of that month. They are strong rooting plants and speedily become starved if allowed to become much matted at the root. Use a little nitrate of soda water in May if any show signs of starvation. This will color them up. Do not, however, keep on using this, as it promotes too rank and soft a growth; one or two applications should suffice. C. W.

SHERIDAN, WYO.—L. M. Best, who recently sold out his interest in the McCook Greenhouse Co., McCook, Neb., has bought land here and will put up a range of greenhouses in the spring. He will grow cut flowers, plants and vegetables under glass.

TROY, O.

PACIFIC COAST.

EUGENE, ORE.—In addition to the two greenhouses that H. A. Newton is building on South Willamette street, he will also build a violet house, making a total of about 6,000 square feet of glass.

BRIGHTON, WASH.—G. W. Scott & Son started business here as carnation growers in 1908. They have two and one-half acres of ground and 8,200 square feet of glass.

STOCKTON, CAL.—The Flower Shop is the name of a new store opened in the Idle Hour theater building, on North Sutter street, by Mrs. Will Davis and Mrs. J. A. Louttit.

PORTLAND, ORE.—Clarke Bros. have purchased five acres of ground near Division street, between East Forty-sixth and East Forty-seventh streets, for $7,500. The firm has had the ground under lease for several years, and will continue to use it for roses and other outdoor stock.

SUMNER, WASH.—The Woodland Floral Co. has purchased ten acres of ground about two miles east of this place and will put a large part of it under cultivation as soon as the weather will permit. The new tract is about a mile north of the present extensive gardens of the company and seems to be especially adapted to the growing of dahlias and other flowers of similar species.

MENLO PARK, CAL.—It is reported in the newspapers that Michael Payton Lynch, who was formerly a florist here and is heir to his father's $100,000 estate, is being sought by the sheriff of San Mateo county on suspicion of being implicated in the mysterious theft of a trunk from the Menlo station last January. The stolen trunk contained Parisian gowns to the value of $2,000, belonging to a society woman.

SPOKANE, WASH.—W. J. and Thos. W. Burnette have purchased two and one-half acres of land here and will conduct a business as general florists and gardeners, under the firm name of Burnette Bros. They have most of the material on the ground for the erection of some houses. W. J. Burnette formerly had charge of the greenhouses of the Hoyt Bros. Co., of this city. His brother was a resident of Colorado City and sold his property there before coming here.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Everyone is rejoicing over the rain which fell for a few hours Sunday night, March 13, and all are eagerly looking for more, as there have been no showers of any consequence since the middle of January. While the rainfall was not heavy, only .22 of an inch, it meant much to the growers of southern California. The hay and grain crops have been especially affected by the drought.

Flowers of all kinds are exceedingly plentiful and sell well. Lent does not seem to make any noticeable difference here in the call for flowers. Weddings, receptions, luncheons and dinners go on just the same, and funerals are always with us. For the opening of a clothing store, an elegant new establishment on Broadway, an unusually large number of designs and baskets were sent, some of them being six feet in height. Most of the florists had a share of the work.

All of the seed stores are doing a rushing business with fruit trees and other nursery stock, as well as seeds. Fruit trees bring about the same prices as in the east.

Beautiful beds of ruffled giant petunias, spring anemones, hyacinths, etc., are seen in some of the home grounds in Hollywood. A few tulips are seen in the stores, but the stems are rather short. We do not get them in bloom as early as in the east.

Various Notes.

It is Charles Morton, not Frank Morton, who has opened a flower store on West Third street. His business is going along with a rush.

At the Angelus many boxes of flowers were being sent out.

J. W. Wolfskill was showing some fine, long Beauties.

Wright's window was especially attractive with shamrocks, valley, white lilac, Easter lilies and orchids.

M. Goldenson's window was filled with single yellow daffodils, freesias and sweet peas.

The Market.

The weather continues to be the best ever seen here in the month of March. Warm, bright days and light showers during the night give an ideal condition, both for growing and selling. Within a few days Easter will be upon us and already the growers and retailers who cater to out-of-town orders are busy. In San Francisco and vicinity during the Lenten season business remained quiet, with the exception of funeral orders, and these kept the store men hustling.

Flowers of all kinds are cheap and plentiful. Easter lilies have been in larger supply for the last few weeks than the occasion called for, and it is evident now that they will be in oversupply for Easter. The price is about twenty-five per cent less than that received by the growers a year ago and the sale has been rather slow. Carnations and roses, owing to the favorable weather, have dropped considerably in price. There was a slight effort made by some of the growers to stiffen prices this week, but the quantities of almost all kinds of stock brought into town quickly squelched it. Good violets are scarcer than anything else and a few more days will finish them for the season. Wild flowers and fruit blossoms are being used lavishly for window decorations and wild maidenhair is closely crowding the cultivated variety. There is considerable inquiry for azaleas. The warm weather brought a great many plants into full flower and the available Easter supply will certainly be short. Tulips are not moving as fast as the growers would like, the public apparently being rather tired of them.

Various Notes.

The Piedmont Seed & Floral Co. has moved to 64 San Pablo avenue, Oakland.

The Shibley-Mann Co. reports a heavy demand for Easter goods and novelties in interior and coast towns. This firm has one of the largest cut flower shipping trades in San Francisco.

Albert Hills, formerly propagator with C. C. Morse & Co., has departed on a trip to the eastern states.

Domoto Bros. are concentrating their shipping trade at their San Francisco depot, 26 Lick place.

The retail and wholesale florists and growers met at the office of E. W. McLellan & Co. March 14 to perfect an AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June, 1910.

THERE is a surplus of Catalpa speciosa in the west.

THERE apparently is a good lot of grape vines awaiting a call.

CHANGES in classification, one item at a time, are steadily advancing freight rates on nursery stock, especially on less than car lots.

NOWADAYS there is no nurseryman or orchardist but recognizes the value of spraying, though some do not appear to recognize its necessity.

W. A. PETERSON, Chicago, has invested in a new Franklin touring car, the third machine he has owned since he caught the automobile fever.

T. W. DENNINGTON is starting a nursery at Athens, Ga. The land which he has secured for the purpose is on the Jefferson road, several miles out from the city, and his residence is at 198 Prince avenue.

THE ROSE AND ITS HISTORY.

blackberry, is another of this type. It is a native of China, Japan, Korea, etc. It is one of the parents of several summer-flowering hybrids, as Crimson Rambler. Crossed with Rosa Indica, it has produced the class of perpetual flowering dwarf miniature roses known as polyantha. Rosa sempervirens is known as the evergreen rose, not because it is strictly evergreen, but because it holds its leaves longer than most roses do. It is a native of middle Europe, Greece and the Balearic Islands. It is not as hardy in this latitude as some of its relatives. Rosa Wichuraiana is a native of China and Japan. It was introduced into cultivation about 1887. It is especially useful for covering masses of rocks and is perfectly hardy. One must not forget Jersey Beauty when thinking of this rose. Rosa Banksiae, a native of southern China, was named in honor of Lady Banks. Unfortunately, this requires the protection of a greenhouse in northern latitudes. There is a yellow and a white form.

Passing to the canina group, we have Rosa canina itself, the dog rose, a native of Europe and temperate Asia. It is sometimes found growing as an introduction in the eastern parts of the United States. Rosa rubiginosa is another species of this same group, a native of Europe. This is familiar to you all as the sweet brier, receiving this name from

WHITE KILLARNEY

(Waban Strain)

White Killarney has most successfully advertised itself. Like its parent, the Pink Killarney, it has become one of the most popular Roses grown today. As an all the year round white it has no equal. It has proved all that its best friends ever claimed for it, both in quality and productiveness. It was a standard from the first.

Grafted Stock: $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

Own Root Stock: $1.50 per doz., $8.00 per 100, $75.00 per 1000.

MY MARYLAND

Among the newer varieties of Roses there is none more worthy of consideration than this. The pleasing shade of pink which attracts the patrons of the retailer and its wonderfully productive ability make it a general favorite. As a commercial proposition My Maryland has made good.

Grafted Stock: $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

KILLARNEY

The finest pink Rose grown today, for commercial purposes.

Grafted Stock: 2 1/4-inch pots, 20c each, $2.00 per doz., $15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

Own Root Stock: 2 1/2-inch pots, $1.00 per doz., $5.00 per 100, $45.00 per 1000.

among rocks. Rosa rugosa, of Asia, is a sturdy representative, and one perhaps destined to play an important part in the future in hybrid work.

The swamp rose, Rosa Carolina, delights the eye when forming groups in its favorite haunts, the shores of lakes and streams or in swamps.

The Burnet or single Scotch rose, Rosa spinosissima, is a European resident. There are many forms of this, one known as the variety Altaica.

Rosa lutea, a native of western Asia, Italy and Austria, is known as the Austrian brier, and has been known in cultivation as far back as 1586.

Rosa bracteata, the Macartney rose, wild in southern China and Formosa, unfortunately is not hardy in the north, and from its range this is to be expected. It is just as unfortunate, however, as it is a lovely rose. It has become naturalized in Florida and Louisiana.

Rosa laevigata, the Cherokee rose, is a native of China, Formosa and Japan. This is practically the range of Rosa bracteata, so of course it is not hardy in the north. It is, however, extensively naturalized in the south, and I recall with delight the beauties of this charming rose as I saw it growing wild on the fences in Florida.

We usually think of the rose leaf as being made up of three or more divisions or leaflets, but in far-off Persia there is a rose with only one leaflet. This hardly seems like a rose at all. It is known as Rosa berberifolia, the barberry-leaved rose. Some botanists keep it separate from the genus Rosa, calling it Hulthemia berberifolia.

Two Great Progenitors.

I have left for consideration until the last these two roses, Rosa Indica, the China rose, and Rosa Gallica, the French rose, for they are the progenitors of the great majority of the roses in cultivation. Is it not odd that, of all the forms which have been mentioned, only two have entered largely into the production of what is known as the garden rose? But such is the case. What wonders may await us, when combinations which are possible with all the others are tried, only time and experience can tell.

Rosa Indica, the China rose, in which is usually included by botanists Rosa semperflorens, is well known to you all. It is the autumn-blooming qualities of this rose which have given us our most valuable roses, and raised the rose from a mere summer visitor to a perpetual delight. The form known as the true Rosa Indica is the old blush monthly, and was introduced into cultivation in 1718; the other form, known as the old crimson, was not introduced until 1789. As the history of the rose develops, the

Ramblers and Other Climbing Roses

PAUL'S CARMINE PILLAR. Flowers large and free; color rosy carmine. Two-year-old, field grown. 85c for 5, $15.00 per 100.

CRIMSON RAMBLER. American Grown. The only stock for forcing. Large heavy plants, two years old, mossed and packed in bundles of 10, 3 to 4 feet, $1.25 for 10, $12.00 per 100; 4 to 5 feet, $1.75 for 10, $15.00 per 100; 5 to 6 feet, extra heavy, $2.25 for 10, $20.00 per 100.

DOROTHY PERKINS. Lovely shell-pink color. $1.25 for 10, $12.00 per 100.

TAUSENDSCHON. The new Rambler Rose. The name translated means a "thousand beauties." Color beautiful rose, shading to pink. $2.25 for 10, $20.00 per 100.

LADY GAY. A seedling from the popular Crimson Rambler, which it resembles in habit and general effect. The flowers are of a delicate cherry-pink color, which fades to soft white. Strong plants, field-grown, 4 to 5 feet. $1.75 for 10, $15.00 per 100.

Flower of Fairfield The Everblooming Crimson Rambler

This variety is a sport from the beautiful Crimson Rambler, is similar in color, more brilliant and lasting than the old favorite. It also possesses the further advantage over the Crimson Rambler in the fact that it flowers profusely on the young wood the first year. Flower of Fairfield is a vigorous grower and free bloomer. It starts to bloom early in the Spring and continues until late in the Autumn. It is rightly termed "perpetual blooming." 40c each, $3.50 for 10, $30.00 per 100.

Veilchenblau (Violet-Blue)

It has long been the desire of rosarians to secure a blue Rose. In Veilchenblau we have practically approached this color. The steel-blue flowers of this new Rose appear in large clusters, are semi-double, of medium size and keep in bloom a long time. The showy yellow stamens, contrasting with the blue flower, give the whole a striking appearance. 60c each, $5.75 for 10, $55.00 per 100.

Baby Rambler Roses

BABY DOROTHY. The same in habit as Baby Rambler, but the color of the flowers is similar to Dorothy Perkins. It makes an excellent pot plant for forcing. Price for strong, field-grown plants, 85c for 5, $16.00 per 100.

CATHERINE SEIMETH. A White Baby Rambler Rose, larger and better flowers than the type. White with yellowish center. 85c for 5, $15.00 per 100.

MRS. WM. H. CUTBUSH. Color intense crimson and exceptionally free-flowering. 85c for 5, $15.00 per 100.

MME. NORBERT LEVAVASSEUR (Baby Rambler). Strong, field-grown plants. 85c for 5, $15.00 per 100.

THE TREE BABY RAMBLER. (Grown as a Standard). The popularity of the Baby Rambler has suggested the growing of it as a tree or standard. 40c each, $3.75 for 10, $35.00 per 100.

BABY DOROTHY. (Grown as a Standard.) For description, see above. 75c each, $6.25 for 10, $60.00 per 100.

Something New in Roses for Florists

HALF STANDARD BABY RAMBLERS

These are Baby Ramblers, grown on stems or standards about one and one-half feet high, and will be a novelty for your trade you cannot profitably overlook. They are offered for the first time in this country in the following varieties:

BABY DOROTHY (Half standard). Deep pink. 60c each, $6.00 per doz., $45.00 per 100.

BABY RAMBLER (Half standard). Crimson. 45c each, $4.50 per doz., $35.00 per 100.

BABY CATHERINE SEIMETH (Half standard). White. 45c each, $4.50 per doz., $35.00 per 100.

BABY "STARS AND STRIPES" (Half standard). White and red grafted on the same plant; most attractive. 50c each, $5.00 per doz., $40.00 per 100.

great importance of this rose will be evident.

Rosa Gallica, the French rose, is a native of France, Switzerland, Italy and Austria. It is supposed to be the Rosa Mulesiana of Pliny. Rosa Damascena, R. centifolia, R. muscosa and R. alba are supposed to be derived from this.

Cabbage Rose, Damask and Moss Rose.

We now come to a time in the history of the rose, the early part of the nineteenth century, when rose culture, as we now know it, really began. This was the day of the old Provence or cabbage rose, Rosa centifolia, or Rosa provincialis, as it was often called. This was the rose which delighted the heart of our grandmothers, and which added the rose charm to their gardens. It was the queen of the rose world in those days, and something over seventy varieties are said to have been listed in the rose catalogues at that time. It is found commonly in the south of France, but its origin is lost in oblivion. It was the popular rose of ancient Rome, being a prominent feature in their feasts and decorations. It is probably the 100-leaved rose of Pliny. It is the blood of this rose which has mingled itself with others, infusing its strong habit of growth into the progeny.

The moss rose, Rosa muscosa, is considered to be a derivative of Rosa centifolia. Whatever its derivation, however, it is a lovely rose and holds a warm place in the hearts of most of us. There are several forms of it, the single, double and perpetual.

Rosa Damascena, the damask rose or rose of Damascus, is a native of Syria. It is said to have been known to Europeans first at the time of the crusades. It was reported of Saladin that in 1187, when he recovered Jerusalem from the crusaders, he used rose water with which to purify the Mosque of Omar after it had been defiled, in his estimation, by the Christians' use of it for a church. It is said that 500 camel loads of roses were brought from Damascus for this purpose.

The Coming of the Hybrids.

The hybrid China roses made their appearance in the early part of the nineteenth century, while the Provence roses were at their prime and in the height of their glory. This hybrid was the result of crossing the China rose, Rosa Indica, with varieties of the French and Provence roses. The autumn-flowering quality of the China rose, however, did not impress itself upon these hybrids. It required still another cross to accomplish this.

The hybrid Bourbon was also a product of the early part of this century. It resulted from the crossing of the French and Provence roses with an autumn-flowering variety found on the Isle of Bourbon. Then came the Bourbon perpetual, crosses of the hybrid Bourbon with hybrids of Rosa Indica, the China rose. These came some ten years before the advent of the hybrid perpetual.

About this time another race of hybrids was introduced. This was obtained by crossing the musk rose, Rosa moschata, and the common blush China rose. This produced the famous Noisette rose, Rosa Noisettiana. The first of this race was raised by Philippe Noisette, in this country. He sent it to his brother Louis, in Paris, about 1817, by whom it was propagated. A number of varieties were produced. It was later crossed with the tea-scented rose, and such forms as Marechal Niel produced, which are difficult to distinguish from the tea roses.

Still the rose remained, with few sporadic exceptions, a flower of the summer only. The instillation of the China blood into the old-time roses did not produce progeny with a flowering period extending into the fall.

The great desire now was to procure roses which would flower in the autumn. The China rose, of course, did this, but it did not come up to the mark in other respects. What was needed was the late flowering of the China and the form and scent of the other roses.

The Hybrid Perpetuals.

We now come to the day of the hybrid perpetual. This was produced by crossing the damask rose, Rosa Damascena, with the hybrid China. Here we have a mixture indeed—the elements of the hybrid China (varieties of the French and Provence roses crossed with the China rose) and the damask rose. It took, therefore, two infusions of the China rose blood to overcome the more sturdy qualities of the other parents and produce a longer flowering period of the rose. The first fruits in this line were not entirely successful, and before a really hybrid perpetual rose, such as we know it now, could be produced, it was necessary to cross these so-called perpetuals with the Bourbon and still again with the China roses. This was done by M. Laffey. The influence of this new race of roses was first felt about 1840, and it reigned supreme from about 1860 to 1890.

delivery—which, from past experience, however, won't last long.

You still have ONE opportunity to get a stock of rooted cuttings of our splendid new Carnation, Dorothy Gordon, for fall and winter trade. Early orders took our entire stock during February and March, but we offer a limited quantity of fine rooted cuttings for April

Carnation Dorothy Gordon

Has added to its laurels: At the Toronto show, just closed, a gold medal was awarded this Carnation when exhibited in competition with others. Carnation Dorothy Gordon IS a winner—a winner of prizes and a winner of profits, as our customers are learning.

Some of its merits are: Strong constitution—absolutely free from diseases; wonderful productiveness—50 per cent more flowers than Enchantress; good color—clear, uniform pink; splendid form and keeping qualities—flowers last four and six days after cutting; and enormous size—averaging three inches in diameter. We know of no variety possessing all these strong qualities.

Order NOW some of the splendid stock we offer for April. Prices remain the same—$10 per 100; $75 per 1000—and you'll find, long before the season is over, that it was the best investment you made this year. If you want to investigate first, come to see us, or write for particulars—but don't delay, for the stock won't last.

to the early part of the century—about 1810 a little rose from China made its appearance in England. It was known as the blush tea-scented. In 1824 another similar rose appeared in the same country, and this, on account of its color, was known as the yellow tea-scented. These two visitors did not seem to take kindly to the bleaker climate of old England, and it was not until they were transported to sunny France that they developed really what was in them. From these two has arisen the group of tea-scented roses. It was about 1830 that these deliciously scented roses came into notice. Gloire de Dijon owes its origin here, but probably with an admixture of the Bourbon rose or some other hardy sort, for this newcomer was unusual among the tea-scented roses in being hardy.

The Hybrid Teas.

Next upon the scene was the hybrid tea, whose recognition as a distinct class was made about 1890. These were produced by crossing the hybrid perpetual and the tea-scented. They have been increasing rapidly and now number many among their ranks. The first hybrid tea is said to have been raised by Paul & Son, of Cheshunt, in 1873, and sent out as Cheshunt Hybrid. At first the full meaning of these new hybrids was not realized; it was not until some years after their first appearance that it dawned upon the people that there was a new race of roses destined to make startling changes. La France, at one time one of the most popular roses, belongs here, although sent out first as a hybrid perpetual.

We have now brought the rose up to our own times, the history of which is known to you all. Perhaps it is better not to call these present times history, and so I can leave the chronicle of our present roses for others. We can see the marvels of recent production beautifully represented in the fine exhibits made at the exhibition now in progress. Here we have the best examples of the cultivator's art. With My Maryland, Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond and many others, it would seem that the possibilities along the line of hybrid teas must be exhausted, but we thought this ten years ago, and were mistaken. What will the next ten years bring to us?

There are many popular flowers, but what one other than the rose can awaken that keen delight, can recall those pleasant memories of childhood when we visited grandmother and reveled in her rose garden? The rose has its great hold upon us because it touches us closely at so many points. We can have it indoors or out, summer or winter, and it is always just "A rose for every home,

A bush for every garden."

SCARLET GLOW. (New) an extra good bright scarlet, a large flower and exceptional keeping qualities. It is in perfect health, and has that early and free flowering habit that characterizes a paying commercial variety. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. March Delivery.

PINK DELIGHT. Clear waxy shell pink. The variety that won over Enchantress at the A. C. S. meetings, Indianapolis and Pittsburg, January, 1909 and 1910. It has all the good points to make it the leader and with its unequaled substance, the best keeping and shipping carnation in the light pink class.

All of our March and early April delivery is sold. We are booking orders for late April delivery only. Pink Delight makes a quick and well shaped growth, and the April cuttings of this variety are as good as February and March of most all other varieties. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

SANGAMO BRILLIANT PINK

Experienced carnation growers who have visited our place, and have carefully watched Sangamo this season, claim it will produce twice as many blooms as any other variety grown today. It is not only the most prolific carnation, but the calyx does not burst, and the stem is always long and stiff; therefore, Sangamo increases your profits more than two-fold. We not only invite growers to visit our place to see for their own satisfaction, but we will pay your railroad fare from Chicago to our place and back again, if you will only come. It is not too late for Sangamo. Our best plants were propagated in March and April last year.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

There was a decided improvement in business last week. The best quality of roses and carnations was quite scarce and was quickly disposed of. Good carnations are meeting with large demands, especially white, which seemed to be exceedingly scarce here Saturday, March 19.

Bulbous stock has sold especially well this week. There is not such a large amount grown this season; in fact, one department store wanted to place an order for 3,000 purple hyacinths in 4-inch pots, but was not even able to get 1,000 here. The blooms, also, do not seem to be as large this season as usual. Tulips are exceedingly good, especially the Murillo and Couleur Cardinal, which are exceptionally fine. Violets have enjoyed an unusually fine season, and there is a heavy demand, but for singles only.

Shamrocks had a good call this season, which was caused by one of the largest parades for fifteen years being held here on St. Patrick's day. Each one in line had small pieces pinned on his coat.

Jonquils have been in heavy supply for the last three weeks and could be had for 5 cents a dozen. They are from the south and are grown outside.

Various Notes.

The Gardeners' Club of Baltimore held its annual banquet Monday, March 14, with about seventy-five members of the club participating. Robert L. Graham acted as toastmaster, and among those who responded to toasts were: George Morrison, George O. Brown, William Christie, N. F. Flitton, William Fraser, James Hamilton, Wm. J. Johnson, Geo. S. Kalt, I. H. Moss, J. J. Perry, Chas. L. Seybold, E. A. Seidewitz and Philip B. Welsh. Before the banquet, the annual election was held, and the following officers were chosen for the ensuing year: President, George Morrison; vice-president, William Christie; secretary, N. F. Flitton; financial secretary, George Talbott; treasurer, F. G. Burger; librarian, C. M. Wagner.

Richard Vincent, of White Marsh, will visit the Belgium and Holland spring show. He will start April 9, on the Caledonia from New York to Glasgow, due there April 23, and will be accompanied by his wife and daughter. Mr. Vincent will be gone for two months, and although his trip is for pleasure, he expects to bring back a fine set of geraniums of an entirely new type.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

The Fates seem to have been propitious this year with regard to the Easter trade. The weather has been everything to be desired in bringing out the blooms and saving the fuel bill. Stock has never before looked as well as this season. There seems to be a fair supply of everything in plants and cut flowers, with perhaps the exception of carnations and white roses. Potted plants have sold rapidly, but there is no shortage. Cut lilies, lilacs, violets and all kinds of bulb stock are in fine shape.

St. Patrick's day brought the usual demand for green carnations, with the usual shortage for four or five days in advance. White carnations sold up to March 17 for $5 per hundred.

Various Notes.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. has been busy shipping out long distance freight orders. The express orders were all booked early for this week. This firm has a fine stock of plants of every description.

O. C. Swanson had a number of fine baskets in stock, all planted ready for the Easter trade. He has in his line all the baskets, from the imported novelties to the smaller domestic article, that grace the middleman's table.

James Souden, as manager of the flower store in the Hotel Radisson, has opened for business.

R. A. Latham finds business excellent and is well satisfied with the Easter trade.

The regular monthly meeting of the Minnesota State Florists' Association took place on the evening of March 15, in the hall on Snelling avenue. It has been decided that the flower show will be held November 10 to 16, in the Armory building. Premium lists and other information are being dispensed by the secretary, J. P. Jorgenson.

Visitors: Miss L. O'Sullivan, of Superior, Wis.; F. Kindler and Mr. Anderson, of St. Cloud, Minn. M. E. M.

WILMINGTON, O.—H. E. Mitting, who during the last two years conducted the business which bears the name of the Wilmington Floral Co., has surrendered his lease and George H. Moores is now in charge.

ROCHDALE, MASS.—Walter E. Draper, proprietor of the Maple Ridge greenhouses, at Greenville, has opened a store in Worcester. He will conduct the new store in connection with his brother, Arthur D. Draper.

GAS FOR WHITE FLY.

I am bothered with white fly and find I cannot kill it with any of the different kinds of fumigating tobacco, so thought I would try the new way of using hydrocyanic acid gas. I have a grapery 20x51, a palm house 24x26, a rose house 20x26 and a general greenhouse 18x40. The grapery is arched from floor to ridge and is twelve and one-half feet high. The palm house measures nine feet to the eaves and eighteen and one-half feet to the ridge. The rose house is six feet to the eaves and twelve feet to the ridge. The greenhouse is five feet to the eaves and eleven feet to the ridge. As I have never used the gas, would you please tell me the quantities required for each house? I can fumigate the grapery and palm house separately, but should have to fumigate the greenhouse and rose house together, as the entrance from the rose house to the greenhouse is partly open.

Does it make any difference what is the temperature of the houses when the gas is used, and does it kill mealy bug and scale at the same time? I have a fish pond in the rose house, about 7x16, with goldfish in it, and a stage over all to stand plants on. Some say it will kill the fish. Could I protect them by covering with canvas bags or paper? I have never thought it quite safe to use the gas, but the fly is becoming such a nuisance that I must try to get rid of it. The greenhouse and rose house both contain a mixture of Primula obconica, P. Chinensis, bougainvilleas, callas, salvias, carnations, geraniums and other bedding plants.

J. J. C.

Hydrocyanic acid gas is the only sure cure for white fly. It is deadly and it would be necessary for you to remove the goldfish from the tank when fumigating, or they will surely be killed. Secure some stone jars to hold the acid and cyanide; no metal or wooden ones will do. Secure as good a quality of sulphuric acid and potassium cyanide as you can. The lower the temperature, the less liability there will be of injury; for this reason select a cool night for the operation and have the atmosphere of the houses dry.

For the grapery use two jars, for the palm house two, and two will suffice for the rose house and greenhouse. A comparatively light dose will, I have found, clean out the white fly, and my experience has proved that if you use two ounces of sulphuric acid and six ounces of water in each jar and drop in each one ounce of the potassium cyanide, broken up into small lumps, you will generate a sufficiently powerful gas to clean out the fly. As all the eggs may not be killed by the first application, a second one two or three days later will make sure of them. Move right out of the houses as you drop in the cyanide. See that all ventilators are shut tight and let them remain so all night. Lock the doors securely, so that no one can enter the houses.

The above proportions will not kill out bug and scale; use treble the quantities for them. Antirrhinums are easily injured by gas, but adiantum ferns will withstand quite a dose of it. Tender tomato tops are liable to be scorched, but so few plants are damaged, especially in cold weather, that they are hardly worthy of mention.

Greenhouse Heating.

TWO SMALL HOUSES.

I am building two houses, each 12x40 feet, running east and west. One house is for violets and the other for sweet peas. Would two flows and six returns be sufficient in each house, for hot water heat, in this part of Illinois? H. C. O.

To heat a violet house, 12x40 feet, in central Illinois, it will only be necessary to use two 2-inch flows and four 2-inch returns. If it is preferred to use 1½-inch pipe, two flows and six returns will be required. It will probably be well to put in piping in the other house capable of maintaining 60 degrees. This will require two 2-inch flows and six 2-inch returns. All of the pipes can be on the walls.

MUSHROOM HOUSE AND LEAN-TO

Enclosed you will find a sketch of my mushroom plant and greenhouse. Please state how to pipe them and what size of hot water boiler will be required.

The buildings are located on a hill-side and run east and west, with the fermenting house on the highest ground. The fermenting house has brick walls and a shingle roof and should have a temperature of 40 to 50 degrees. The mushroom cellar is built of stone, underground, in the side bank. Its natural temperature in zero weather is 38 degrees, and I should like to heat it to about 50 or 55 degrees. The greenhouse is of lean-to form, facing south and leaning against the mushroom cellar. The front wall is of brick and is five feet high. This house needs a temperature of 60 degrees. In this part of Massachusetts the outside temperature sometimes drops to 15 degrees below zero. F. E.

The sketch and description are not clear enough to determine positively the size of the different houses, but it appears that the fermenting house is 20x68 feet, the mushroom house of the same floor dimensions and twelve feet high, and the greenhouse 21x72 feet, without any glass below the level of the plate. If that is correct, the desired temperature could be secured by using 300 square feet of radiation in the fermenting house, 200 feet in the mushroom house and 800 feet in the greenhouse.

To supply this amount of radiation, the boiler should have the capacity to heat 1,600 to 1,800 square feet of radiation. In the fermenting house it will be well to use two 2-inch flow pipes and six 2-inch returns; in the mushroom house use two 2-inch flows and four returns; in the greenhouse, three 2½-inch flows and fourteen 2-inch return pipes.

HEAT FROM COIL IN FURNACE.

We have four connected houses, each 25x70 feet, five feet to the gutter and twelve feet to the ridge. We intend to heat with hot water. We wish to heat three of the houses with a ten horsepower return tubular horizontal boiler, and the other house with a coil in the furnace. Will a boiler of that size heat three houses to 55 degrees in the coldest weather, which in this part of Oregon is about 16 degrees above zero? Will a coil of about twenty 1½-inch pipes, five feet long, heat the fourth house to 60 degrees in our coldest weather? We intend to put one coil of about ten pipes on each side of the furnace. If we cannot get enough heat from that size of coil, would it be advisable to enlarge the coil by putting in a pipe coil instead of grates in the furnace? We burn wood. What do you consider the best way of piping these houses? S. B.

Mention The Review when you write.

To heat three of the houses, about 1,- 600 square feet of radiation will be required. With plants of a large size it is customary to estimate that each horsepower of boiler capacity will heat 175 square feet of radiation, and, according to these figures, the ten horse-power boiler would be of about the right size. Since the amount of radiation is small, however, it will be safer to use one horse-power for 150 square feet of radiation.

If the heating coil for the other house is made from 1½-inch pipe, it would answer better than to put in a grate coil.

To heat the houses to 55 degrees, two 2½-inch flow pipes and nine 2-inch returns should be used. If the returns are well above the top of the heater, it will answer if the flows are carried on the walls at the plates. Part of the returns should be under the benches.

A COIL BOILER.

I am building two connected greenhouses, each 20x100 feet. The temperature in this part of Oregon seldom goes as low as 20 degrees above zero. I am using a hot water system. Will eight 2-inch pipes—four in each house—with a 2½-inch overhead flow, give enough heat? Is a coil of pipes set in brick satisfactory for a boiler, and what size of pipes should the coil be made of? H. A. N.

The question does not state what temperature is desired in the houses. If 50 degrees will be sufficient, it will answer to use one 2½-inch flow and ten 2-inch returns—five in each house. If a temperature of 60 degrees is desired, two 2½-inch flows and twelve 2-inch returns—six in each house—should be used.

The coil boilers do not last nearly as long as those of cast iron, but they are cheaply constructed and are quite efficient. If built of 1½-inch pipe, they will do good work and will last longer than when a smaller pipe is used.

RICHMOND, VA.

W. A. Hammond has sold his greenhouse plant to the Hammond Company (Inc.), which will conduct the florist business, and the adjoining real estate to the Suburban Development Corporation, which will cut up its section into lots for residential purposes. The entire tract contains about forty-two acres, and the price paid by the two companies was $90,000. Although the deals were made at the same time, the purchasing concerns are separate and distinct. Mr. Hammond retains his residence adjoining the property on Sherwood avenue.

The western portion of the tract, containing about twenty acres, and including the greenhouses, went to the Hammond Company at approximately $68,000. This company was recently incorporated for the purpose of acquiring this property and the business. J. Scott Parrish is president; H. A. Higason, vice-president, and F. F. Apt, secretary. The business will be carried on in the same way, and many of those now connected with it are men who were associated with Mr. Hammond.

The eastern portion of the property, containing twenty-two acres, brought $22,000. Its purchaser, the Suburban Development Corporation, which was organized for the purpose, will at once begin the work of development and dividing the land into lots to conform with the plan of Ginter Park.

ST. LOUIS.

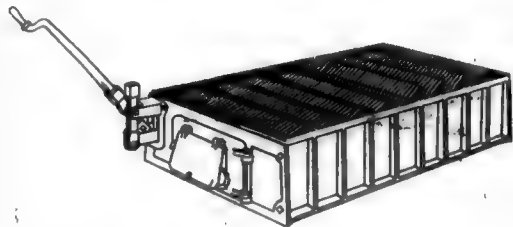

The Market.

Trade last week was good in all lines and the wholesalers report that stock sold well, except roses. In these, the market is at present overstocked, but carnations were selling almost clean the last of the week. The mild and pleasant weather all of last week, which bids fair to continue this week, had a most pleasing effect on the retail trade. There was nothing rushing, but the trade was quite steady, and there was a large amount of funeral work which used up considerable white stock. White carnations went up to 4 cents and 5 cents Thursday, to be used for dyeing green for St. Patrick's day, and, from reports, they sold as well as last year. It looks as though carnations will be off crop for Easter.

Roses are coming in quite heavily and considerable of the colored stock was left over last week, including long fancy Beauties. All white roses sold well. The wholesalers are looking for large consignments in these all of this week. Violets are becoming small, as the warm weather had a telling effect on them, and they will be scarce all of this week. The prospects are for a big supply of lilies, both callas and Harrisii, and other bulb stock is fine, especially valley and tulips. Romans are scarce, but there are plenty of Paper Whites, Von Sions and Dutch hyacinths. Sweet peas are of extra quality and Kirkwood will supply the bulk of them.

There is a great deal of talk as to Easter stock and business, but from appearances there need be no fear. There will be an abundance of cut flowers and plants, and if the weather holds out, business will be as good, if not better, than last year.

Various Notes.

E. W. Guy, of Belleville, Ill., was a visitor last week. Mr. Guy says that Easter stock in both plants and cut flowers will be fine with the Belleville florists.

Mrs. William Ellison made a business trip to Chicago recently and purchased her Easter stock. Mr. Ellison says trade has been good with them all during Lent.

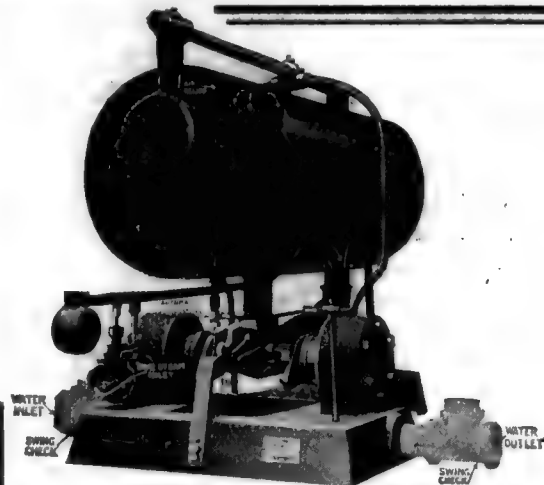

There were a great many store decorations going on last week. Among the largest was Barr's, by C. Young & Sons Co., and the Foster Floral Co. had Vandervort's. William Schray & Sons, Charles Beyer and Sanders were also busy with this kind of work.

C. Young & Sons Co. had a novel window display last week. The attraction was a complete line of garden seeds, tools and all implements used for the garden, also an incubator with a dozen or so young chickens running out and in.

Johnnie Peters, once a famous short-stop of the Chicago White Sox back in the eighties, is now employed as gardener at the Compton Hill park, under the guiding hand of Phil Giebel.

Fred C. Weber is out with a new 1910 model touring automobile, in which he expects to make short trips during the summer.

open and alive with plants of all varieties, and the warm spring-like days last week kept them all busy.

A. Brix reports that the Mead avenue greenhouses are again in his possession. The sale was made a few weeks back, but the buyer could not furnish the ready cash.

Phil Scanlan, park commissioner, has not as yet appointed a successor to the late George Ostertag, as superintendent of parks. Mr. Provenchire, who has been attending to the duties, will no doubt be retained until Mr. Scanlan's term expires next year.

C. De Wever says he will not call a meeting of his committee until after the Easter rush is over, as all would be too busy this week to attend a meeting of this kind.

The special bowling match between Messrs. Gerlach, Schreffer, Huettemann and Beneke did not take place, owing to some of them being busy at the appointed time. The match will, however, take place after Easter.

One has a hard time getting an interview with any of our seedsmen these days. In a trip through this district we found them all busy and the stores crowded with customers.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers, George Waldbart, Miss Newman, F. H. Weber, F. C. Weber, William Ellison, William Kalisch and others in the west end have a grand display of Easter plants. Their show-houses are stocked from top to the bottom, with hardly any room for buyers.

The executive committee of the St. Louis Horticultural Society held their monthly meeting Tuesday, March 15, in the rooms of the Missouri Athletic Club, Fourth and Washington avenue. The main work of this committee now is to make preparations for a fall flower show and work on the preliminary list.

The Ladies' Florist Home Circle held its monthly meeting Monday afternoon, March 14, in Trimp's hall. There were ten present. Miss T. Meinhardt entertained with a reading of a history of the tulip trade in Haarlem in 1635. After the meeting the ladies had a game at bowling, and lunch was served. The following ladies were present: Mesdames Weber, Miller, Steidle, Schitzle, Koenig, Berning, Beneke, and the Misses Meinhardt.

The Retail Protective Association held its second meeting Wednesday, March 16, at the Washington hotel. There were thirteen present and the election of officers resulted as follows: President, C. C. Sanders; vice-president, Theo. Miller; secretary, F. C. Weber, Jr.; treasurer, R. J. Windler; sergeant-at-arms, Max Herzog. Theo. Miller presided over the meeting. Lunch was served.

Frank A. Weber, of the H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., wishes to correct the statement in the last issue of the REVIEW in reference to his store having a branch office at the St. Louis Seed Co. The St. Louis Seed Co. was only taking orders for them, the same as all the local seed houses do.

Otto Sander, the Maryland hotel florist, reports that he is a proud father of a big boy, who arrived Monday, March 21, and says all is well. Mr. Sander was congratulated by his many friends in the trade. J. J. B.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Fire recently destroyed the heating plant and burned the ends of three greenhouses at the range of Michael J. McCabe, on Walker road. The loss is estimated at between $2,000 and $3,000.

CEDAR FALLS, IA.—The establishment of Joseph Bancroft & Son, one of the largest in northern Iowa, was founded by Bishop & Bancroft about 1876, in connection with a nursery, was bought out soon after by Joseph Bancroft and has been owned by him and his son ever since. For the last twelve years the firm name has been Joseph Bancroft & Son. The junior member of the firm now has almost the entire management.

TUBULAR BOILERS

Steam and Water

The most economical and efficient Boiler for Greenhouse Heating.

Centralize Your Heating Plant

The economy in heating large ranges of glass from a central plant is so great that the first cost is repaid in a few years.

Following are a few plants which we designed and installed:

THOMAS YOUNG, Jr.
Bound Brook, N. J.

150,000 square feet glass heated by steam from a central plant. The exhaust from pumps is passed through a condenser, which heats two 150-foot propagating houses with hot water.

F. R. PIERSON CO.
Scarborough on Hudson, N. Y.

150,000 square feet glass heated by steam from a central plant. The steam is passed through condensers and the water is forced through the houses with circulators.

JOHN N. MAY Summit, N. J.

75,000 square feet glass heated by steam from a central plant.

Electric Garden Hose gives longest and most satisfactory service.

"Electric" is the only Hose that is made of three or more jointless rubber tubes and two or more spiral woven seamless jackets, united into one homogeneous mass under high pressure.

Hose made to imitate the "Electric" can be detected by its tendency to kink or to curl up, twist or unwrap.

We specialize in Rubber Hose exclusively and thus outdistance in price and quality the product of the factories having multifarious lines.

The Market.

The weather conditions are encouraging, with plenty of sunshine. Easter stock is in fine condition and orders have been piling up. Lilacs, giganteum lilies and azaleas are making a fine appearance in the display windows. The local florists are ready for a heavy Easter trade.

Millinery openings added to the amount of business done by the florists last week.

Various Notes.

W. H. Robbins, representing the Batavia Nurseries, and C. S. Ford, representing A. Herrmann, of New York, were recent visitors in this city.

Miss Thekla Baur will spend the Easter holidays with her sister, Mrs. Lewis Perkins, in Welland, Ont.

Samuel Seligman, representing Wertheimer Bros., New York, was in Erie March 12. He reports a large business in waterproof chiffon and violet shields on his western trip.

Miss Margaret Crotty and Miss Elva Shaefer have accepted positions with the Baur Floral Co. B. P.

STILLWATER, OKLA.—The plans for the proposed greenhouse of the Oklahoma A. and M. College have been completed. The building will be concrete, 56x112, and the roof will be in three sections. A potting shed, 12x40, will also be made in connection with the building. The roof of the entire structure will be supported by iron pipes. The latest design of drainage, heating and other necessities will be used. These plans were approved by the board of regents February 24.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

NEW YORK BELTING

PACKING CO. LTD
91-93 CHAMBERS ST. NEW YORK

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet.
An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

THE MASTIN AUTOMATIC WHITEWASH AND SPRAYING MACHINE IS RELIABLE, PRACTICAL AND DURABLE

The tank is made of galvanized sheet steel, and in brass.
The pump is of brass throughout, simple and powerful.
The mixing device keeps the contents of the tank well stirred up from start to finish.

When the machine is filled to within six inches of the top, a few strokes of the pump will compress enough air in the tank to produce a continuous mist-like spray for 15 minutes.

All parts are made to gauge and may be had for repairs.
Ask your dealer about our Extension Hose, Extension Rods, and the Mastin Whitewash Nozzle for Bordeaux mixture.

Sold through seedsmen, dealers in florists' and poultry supplies.

TORONTO.

The Market.

Trade has been good during the last two weeks, with lots of good stock to be had. Prices kept up on everything except violets, but they dropped almost to the bottom. Sweet peas are selling better this year than for the last two years at this season.

There has been some demand during the last week for perennial plants and shrubs. That is a sure sign of spring in this locality.

Various Notes.

Tuesday evening, March 15, was ladies' night with the Gardeners' and Florists' Association and there was a large turnout. A good program of music, etc., followed by refreshments and a social hour, made it a most enjoyable evening.

A visit to Robert Abbs found him busy cutting his fine stock of sweet peas. He has had a grand crop, both as to quantity and quality, and he is now figuring out what is best to grow to keep his houses in use through the year. He does not like lettuce and has not found chrysanthemums to be profitable with him. He thinks he may try tomatoes.

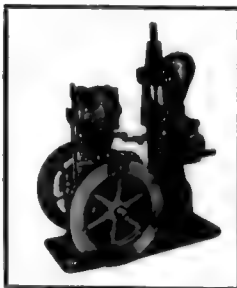

At Albert Houles' we found everything in first-class shape. It is not a large establishment, but the stock is always in good condition for inspection.

S. A. Frost, the College street florist, reports one of the best days in his experience, March 17, on account of St. Patrick's day.

Mr. Tidy had the finest shamrock plants to be seen in town.

Thomas Manton has just returned from his trip to Montreal, Ottawa, etc., in the interest of Low & Co., the English nurserymen, and reports good business all along the line. MAC.

A Better Water Supply is what you will need when the dry, hot summer follows this long winter, and the best obtainable is a Standard Pumping Engine because it takes the water from the source of supply and puts it into the pipe line by direct pressure.

THE EASTER

TRADE REPORTS

SUMMARY OF THE SEASON.

Was It Hot Enough For You?

Never in the history of the flower business has there been an Easter just like that of 1910. In 1909 Easter occurred April 11, and the highest temperature registered anywhere in the lake region in the week preceding was 74 degrees, with the mean temperature of Good Friday 30 degrees, and as low as 25 degrees registered at Chicago the night before Easter. This year almost the entire country had summer temperatures for the entire week before Easter. Good Friday over the entire eastern half of the United States was the warmest March day the weather bureau has recorded in its entire forty years' history. The official readings Good Friday ran up to 80 and 82 degrees, while unofficial thermometers made it even more than that. In the weather bureau office that recorded a mean temperature of 30 degrees on Good Friday, 1909, the mean temperature was 67 degrees Good Friday of 1910. The heat under glass was intense.

Of course no such torridity had been counted on by those who were pushing along their crops to have them ready in time for an early Easter—the earliest Easter in many years. The heat may have saved the day for some who were behind with their crops, but it made an immense amount of trouble for those who would have been in time under seasonable weather conditions. It emphasized the need of one thing that the average grower has neglected. While no thought or expense has been spared to provide the means for forcing the stock into bloom, not many growers have provided means for handling it to best advantage after it is ready; especially have they neglected provision for caring for forced stock ready a little too soon. Cool cellars, cool houses and adequate sorting and packing facilities would have saved their entire cost for many a grower last week.

Where a shortage of lilies had been thought quite possible, there turned out to be enough. The hot weather brought in thousands that otherwise would have been late. While lilies sold clean at fair prices in the smaller cities, the big wholesale markets generally were over-supplied, especially with short-stemmed stock. The bulbous stock suffered rather more than anything else from the heat. Many a man's tulips were ready days before Easter, and much beyond the proper stage when delivery hour arrived. The same was true of daffodils and hyacinths. The violets practically succumbed to the heat, and instead of the early Easter being in favor of the violet growers, it proved as bad a one as they have had in recent years. Carnations were abundant, but had spring fever—that droopy feeling. Roses were in large supply, but soft.

The Selling End.

In practically all the wholesale markets the supply of stock was far ahead of what had been expected, and the quality was much below what it would have been with seasonable temperature. The wholesalers found themselves compelled to revise their estimates of values, and at the same time were confronted with the necessity for a large amount of sorting at a time when they were coping with probably the largest volume of business they ever have handled in the limited period of a holiday rush. The wholesalers earned their commissions last week.

While the hot weather increased the troubles of the growers and wholesalers, and caused the retailers more or less difficulty because of the poor keeping quality of flowers, it was a wonderful help in the selling end of the business. Not in many years has there been an Easter season when the weather was so pleasant everywhere; hardly a cloud in the sky, and no rain anywhere. Though some cities report trade late in beginning, the retail sales for Easter certainly set a new high record, and a record that it will be hard to reach another year. Retail prices were not seriously affected by the heat; the retailer who bought his stock in the wholesale markets got it cheaper than usual, sold more of it, and made a better profit. It is the unanimous report that Saturday and Sunday were the biggest days the retail flower business ever has known. Saturday afternoon the stores everywhere, in the big cities and little towns, were loaded to the doors with flowering plants and cut flowers. Saturday afternoon served to clear out a big part of this, but a rain on Sunday would have wiped out many a retailer's profit. Sunday morning, however, proved as bright and warm as any of the days preceding, and the flower buyers everywhere were out in force. Many a retail store was compelled to close because everything salable was gone; but where stock sufficed, others kept open all day and did business every hour.

Of course it was a plant Easter; the term has become stereotyped. Had retailers foreseen the large supply of cut stock, and its moderate price, there would have been less for the plantmen. After all is said and done, the flower buyers, and particularly those who buy flowers only at holidays, would rather have cut blooms than flowering plants; all that they insist upon is fresh stock and moderate prices. But the retailers had looked for no such inundation of cut flowers as resulted from the summer weather; they had stocked up with plants which had to be paid for, and they were going to sell those plants first of all. Consequently many turned every possible buyer to plants, somewhat at the expense of the cut flower department. But practically all the plants sold, and the wholesalers in a few of the larger cities were the only ones who had any special quantities of cut stock left.

This is so big a country, and the flower business has become so large and so diversified, that it seldom is possible for a summary to show such uniform experience as the trade reports of this Easter. It is doubtless due to the uniformity of the weather conditions, for, after all, the weather is the biggest factor in the flower business.

UNIQUE WINDOW DISPLAY.

A novel window display, representing a modern amusement park, with various special features, was recently shown by the Beyer Floral Co., of South Bend, Ind.

The various mechanical arrangements shown in the illustration were operated by water and electricity in the following manner: Water was forced to the top of the tower, which occupied the center, and ran between two glass globes, the outer one of clear glass being stationary, while the inner one, of many-colored glass, revolved around an electric light, thereby giving to the water constantly changing hues, like an electric fountain. The water then fell on a large water-wheel enclosed in the tower, which put in motion the air swing and Ferris wheel, each of which held small figures representing pleasure seekers. As the water came from the tower it tumbled down a cascade of glass that had another colored globe revolving around an electric light and repeated the effect shown in the globes at the top. At the bottom of the cascade was a pool containing goldfish, on which floated toy rowboats, small ducks, swans, etc.

There was over thirty feet of three-rail electric track surrounding the park, on which ran a little electric car, with passengers, going in and out of a tunnel under the tower. The park, tower, etc., were illuminated by miniature electric lights, and in one corner of the park was a zoo and bird house, inhabited by toy animals and birds, while at another part of the grounds could be seen the boathouse and greenhouse. Floating in the air over the park was a kite, bearing an advertisement of the Beyer Floral Co.

There were a number of special features and exhibitions, operated with invisible wires by a person some ten or twelve feet distant, who was hidden from the onlookers. These features included a "Slide for Life," by a girl figure from the top of the tower; a "High Dive," by a boy figure from the top of the tower into the tank, where he then swam around; a "Balloon Ascension," a "Loop the Loop" in an automobile, etc.

These exhibitions were given about once an hour during the afternoon and evening, as long as the park was in operation. The display was kept in the window for about two weeks and attracted large crowds during all of that time. The Beyer Floral Co. says it was one of the most popular windows they ever had, and they consider that, as an advertisement, it was more than worth the cost and trouble involved in getting it up.

MANY STEAMER ORDERS.

Everybody get ready for a big season in steamer orders.

A record year in ocean travel is predicted by all the large steamship companies. Although the rush season for Europe does not begin until the latter part of April, bookings for passage to the other side have exceeded those at this date last year by one-third. It was the belief of many steamship men that the coming season would see an exodus of American tourists even greater than that of 1907, the summer before the panic, when European travel was the heaviest ever recorded. It will not be many weeks before throngs of summer tourists are on their way to the other side. Many of those who do not intend to sail until June or July have applied for cabin reservations in order to secure accommodations well in advance of the summer rush. The flow of outgoing tourists is expected to reach its height in July, at about the time that those who sailed earlier in the spring have begun to turn homeward.

The retail florists in New York and at other ports have made arrangements for the prompt filling and certain delivery of all orders for flowers intended for passengers on outgoing boats. This has become an exceedingly important part of the summer business at New York and with leading florists at inland cities—of course the inland florists are the ones who supply the orders. One of the large western retailers recently said that scarcely a day goes by without his wiring an order to

New York, on which the profit is twenty per cent, with no other work or expense besides the telegram. Any good store can increase its business in this line by a sign in the window or, better yet, an advertisement in the local newspaper. The orders resulting may be executed by wire to any of those whose cards appear in the department for Leading Retail Florists in the REVIEW.

GOLD BASKETS.

This was a gold Easter. In most of the stores that make up the plant combinations in baskets and boxes, gold was the predominant color of the receptacles. Last year the few gold baskets were of the highest class, and expensive; not so this Easter. Not only did the supply houses furnish a variety of moderate-priced gold baskets and boxes, but he was not an ingenious florist who could not take advantage of the passing fad for gold by gilding up a lot of old, shelf-worn stock. Not all is gold that glitters, and at Easter many a fly-specked basket of other years became brand-new with its new Easter suit of gold. The baskets that the florist gilded sold quite as well as the new stock, provided he did not get his color too light—the fashion is for old gold—and therein lies the danger that the popularity of the gold ware will be short-lived; when everyone uses gold the discriminating flower buyer chooses something else.

THE BUYER'S AGENT.

A discussion came up today regarding the shipment of flowers, and the point in question was this: Suppose the flowers were ordered from the shipper to be sent on a certain train, which is done, and there is an accident or wreck on the train and the flowers come in too late for use and are refused. In such a case would the obligation to pay the invoice rest upon the buyer? A. F. C.

It is well settled in law that where goods are sold f. o. b. shipping point, as probably always is the case with cut flowers sold in wholesale quantities, the transportation company is the agent of the buyer and the seller has no responsibility for what may occur after he has received the transportation company's receipt for the shipment in good order. In the case described it does not matter that the shipment actually was on the train designated; the shipper would have fulfilled his obligation in the matter by delivery to the express company within the time ordinarily required to insure shipment on the train specified. Had the delay occurred between the shipper's place of business and the railroad station the obligation to meet the bill would have rested on the buyer, who could of course look to the transportation company for his loss. The transportation company is no less the buyer's agent where the buyer does not name the carrier or route in his shipping directions. In the absence of such instructions all that the law requires of the shipper is that he make delivery to any company customarily employed for the carrying of such shipments. Such carrier so selected by the seller becomes the agent of the buyer just as though designated by the buyer to receive delivery of that particular shipment. Of course, in case the sale is made f. o. b. the buyer's station or place of business, the situation then is reversed; the transportation company becomes the agent of the seller, and the seller is responsible for the acts of his agent. But customarily merchandise is sold for delivery where it then is; a definite agreement must be made to suppose any other place of delivery, and in the absence of such agreement a sale is held to mean that the buyer's responsibility begins the moment he or his agent accepts delivery.

THE TREND IN TRADE.

It is well known that in England those engaged in the florist and nursery business are having a rather bad time of it—with few exceptions a mere living is all that the trade is returning to those who are engaged in it. The result is much discussion of the causes. A writer in the Horticultural Advertiser thinks it is cut prices that has brought the trade to its present condition and his views have much of interest to American readers, who may be able to recognize in their own localities tendencies toward a similar situation. He says in part:

"The man who stands out and states frankly that horticulture as a business is stationary, if indeed it is not degenerating, will appear a fool in the eyes of some, and well informed in the eyes of others. If the average nurseryman was asked concerning the present position of his business, and he answered truthfully, he would say, 'Bad; but I hope for better times.' 'Hope'! We as a trade live on hope. The market grower has hoped against hope for the last seven years, and is this the termination of it all? Anyone who is acquainted with the present prices and prospects of the cut flower market would naturally think so.

"Is the fault with us, or are we the slaves of circumstances? Is it overproduction, foreign competition, or our unbusinesslike methods? If the present depression is wholly and solely caused by the political situation, coupled with Lent, and if the general stagnant condition warrants such a slump, then we can at least see a silver lining to our dark cloud. But, on the other hand, if we can attribute prices to overproduction, things will be worse before they are better. Foreign competition must, of course, have a deep and far-reaching effect. If any market is flooded with a common, cheap article, it must have some effect upon higher grade products, which in a degree it can substitute; but when that market happens to be a flower market, where there can be no holding back of the stock in order to assist the market, then of course all grades are affected, not only cut flowers, but pot plants. We all know how true this is.

"Half-dead flowers, which can only last a few hours, being hawked on the streets, do not assist us as a trade, or relieve our markets to any extent, because there is always a surplus, and there always will be. Rather would I say that this cheap rubbish too often falls into the hands of casual purchasers, who are disappointed with their bargain, and hold all flowers and plants with suspicion.

"Does the evil and its remedy rest with us—ourselves? If the average horticulturist who is running a business was to ask himself the question, 'Do I run my business upon modern business lines?' how many could answer in the affirmative? Are we not too much like farmers, and too little like business men? Cheap. Cheap. Britain, the home of the cheap. Cheap clothes, cheap flowers, cheap everything! The one aim in the life of the average horticulturist seems to be to work hard from sunrise to sunset. For what? Why, to undercut his contemporaries in the same town, and to sell cheaper than his neighbor!

"That is, in the humble mind of the writer, one of the greatest causes of the present slump. For years our retail nurserymen and florists have been educating the public through a short-sighted, destructive practice of ruthless local competition, until the public now takes things as a matter of course; and we, as a trade, because the wholesale grower is proportionately affected, find ourselves in a depressed state.

"Almost every other walk in life has produced its millionaires. The gardener millionaire is yet to come. Some may think this is as things should be, but even the farmer in Britain prospers better as a class than the horticulturist. Are they becoming more businesslike?

"Perhaps, if instead of trying to serve the public cheap, we, for a change, tried to sell dear, some of our smaller and less fortunate brethren would have a better chance in life's battle, and we as a class would reap the harvest of our labors, and not present it free gratis to the public."

Telephoning the Florist

FLOWERS for Easter, dances and theatre parties, birthdays and weddings, flowers to cheer the sick and comfort those who mourn, may be ordered fresh from the florist at the last moment by the Bell telephone.

The goods will be on the way before you could have reached the first store if you had gone in person.

Bell service may be used in a myriad of ways that are just as helpful. Anyone, anywhere within its sphere of operation, has ample opportunity to appreciate this fact. Local and Long Distance Bell service is accessible to 20,000,000 people.

FLORISTS AND THE PHONE.

Publicity Precedes Profits.

The use of the telephone is as much a habit as is the use of flowers, and the big telephone companies, in their advertising campaign to extend the habit of using the phone, are helping the florists.

The telephone people took the week preceding Easter to advertise the facility with which flowers can be bought by 'phone. Without doubt the liberal advertising done for telephony did much to increase the sale of flowers, not only by 'phone, but to buyers who made their selections in person. All that it takes to increase the use of flowers for such special occasions as Christmas, Valentine's day, Easter, birthdays, etc., is to call the attention of the public to the adaptability of flowers for the purposes of these special days. The telephone companies helped not a little to do this, because they used generous spaces in leading papers in many cities. Reproduced herewith are the Easter flowers advertisements published last week by the New York Telephone Co. and the Chicago Telephone Co., each of which is a part of the Bell system.

The Retailer and the 'Phone.

"It is a fact," said a leading Chicago retail florist recently, "that the proportion of our business done by 'phone is increasing steadily. Time was when one 'phone answered our purpose; now we have three. We find it pays well to make special arrangements for handling the telephone trade. We take extra care to see that all telephone orders are filled to the best of our ability, in order to insure the future use of that means of buying. It does not take as long to wait on a customer over the 'phone as it does to wait on that same customer in person at the store.

"We get all kinds of orders over the 'phone. The lady of the house calls us up when she wants a few flowers for the dinner table or for her personal use. A large increase was made in our telephone trade when we undertook to carry in stock the engraved calling cards of our customers. With these on hand, the customer had only to 'phone us the order for a gift of flowers or for funeral flowers, and the matter was off the customer's mind; we had everything required for the satisfactory handling of the order.

"But there is another feature of the telephone trade that has impressed me. Desirable as the smaller sales are, and of course they far outnumber the large jobs, it nevertheless is a fact that practically all the big work now comes to us by 'phone. Usually the first intimation of a big funeral or wedding job, or other decoration, comes through a telephone request to have our estimator call. When a leading citizen dies his family seldom come to the store to order the flowers; they 'phone for their favorite salesman or decorator to come to the house and receive the order. The largest funeral orders we have had this season have been handled this way. And it's frequently the same with the big weddings. Sometimes the bride-to-be and her mother drop in with the news that there is a good order in prospect, but more often the voice in the 'phone invites us to call to offer suggestions for a decoration."

Buying by Phone.

With the retail florists on Fifth avenue in New York a decidedly important part of the business is done by 'phone, and in many cities the retail florist not only receives his orders over the wire, but he makes his purchases of stock in the same way. As competition has increased among the wholesalers, the delivery of purchases has come into vogue, thereby relieving the retailer of the necessity for visiting the wholesale market. In some wholesale houses it is the practice for certain clerks to call up a list of customers every morning, take the orders, and later see that they are filled. One wholesale house has at least six 'phones so employed every morning.

ELEPHONE Your Order for EASTER FLOWERS

"More than half of our orders are received by telephone," says a well-known Fifth Avenue florist.

"I cannot imagine doing business without telephone service. One of our young ladies devotes her entire time to handling telephone orders, and we are making a special effort to please our telephone customers. It would be poor business not to do so. Every up-to-date business house now recognizes the importance of telephone trade, and knows that telephone orders must receive prompt attention."

"Easter is the season for flowers, and it is always a busy time for us. I expect that this week telephone calls will be coming in faster than ever, and I have made special preparations in order that such calls may receive proper attention."

The florist is right. Easter is the season for flowers, so when you are making Easter eggs and bunnies for the little folk, do not forget Easter flowers for grown-ups. Just telephone the florist. He will aid you in your selection and deliver the flowers promptly.

Not only in ordering flowers, but in a hundred other ways the telephone demonstrates its usefulness.

By the way, have you a Telephone?

A Neglected Feature.

One of the features of the florists' telephone trade that has not been appreciated by the telephone companies is the long distance business. In the big cities where wholesale florists have shipping trade, a large part of the business comes by telegraph and the telegraph companies make special effort to see that prompt delivery is made on all messages to wholesale florists. In many instances they use the 'phone to do it. It is quite the regular thing for the telegraph company to deliver the message by 'phone if no boy is handy, and after business hours they deliver the messages by 'phone to the residence of some one connected with the wholesale florist's establishment.

Gradually the out-of-town florists are finding that the long distance 'phone is an exceedingly handy way of ordering from the city wholesaler. It is quite a little quicker than the telegraph and it has the added advantage that the buyer knows right then just what the wholesaler is going to be able to do on the order; if the exact article wanted cannot be supplied in time, the out-of-town florist has the opportunity of making his own selection of the substitute.

"We find a large part of our shipping orders now come by 'phone," said a large Philadelphia wholesaler. "The buyers, especially those who order only occasionally and for special articles, or when the market is short, like to know at once just what we are going to be able to do on the order. The long distance telephone trade had grown to be quite an important matter with us just before the telephone companies did away with the special night rate that used to go into effect at 6 o'clock. We have many trains leaving in the evening and customers found it fine business to wait until 6 o'clock, 'phone us their orders and receive the stock in the morning. We thought it would cut a big hole in this business when the companies abolished the night rate, and its effect was apparent at first, but customers soon got back into the habit of using the 'phone just the same, and now we are doing more than ever by long distance 'phone.'"

WREATH ON EASEL.

The accompanying illustration shows what excellent results one can obtain with a minimum quantity of material, and that such as ordinarily is at hand in an establishment where a general line of stock is grown for the retail trade. This is a large wreath on an easel and was made a few weeks ago by William F. Snyder, Hopkinsville, Ky. A few Bride roses were used for a cluster at the lower left side, with Enchantress carnations for the main part of the wreath, but these were not set closely together nor too close to the green. The balance of the space was loosely filled with primroses. Of course a considerable quantity of green was required, ferns for covering the moss and Asparagus plumosus with the flowers to give a well filled effect. With the cluster of roses, cut fronds of Boston and Whitmani ferns were used to form a generous-looking cluster. With the backing afforded by three cycas leaves, something that no retail place ever is without, it made a handsome piece.

cinth. Please tell me what can be the trouble with them. As soon as they get about this size and show color they fall over among the leaves or on to the bench or pots. I have lost so far about fifty per cent of this one variety, in pans and 4-inch pots both, but have had no such trouble with Gertrude, La Peyrouse, etc., from the same Holland firm, nor with any from another Holland firm. Such varieties as Gertrude, Grand Maitre, Mme. Vanderhoop and L'Innocence are all fine and in good condition. It is only this one variety that has given me this trouble, in second size as well as miniatures from this one firm. All were wintered in the same frames and housed at the same time. They were stood under benches a few days in 45 degrees, and after a week or ten days were placed on the benches at 50 to 55 degrees at night, with a higher temperature on bright days. Can it be that the bulbs of this one variety were diseased? Or what do you think is the cause of the trouble? The bulbs are well rooted and show no sign of decaying at the bottom.

The trouble is probably due either to disease or some inherent weakness of the bulbs. Baron Van Thuyll is an old and reliable hyacinth. Occasionally we have had one or two bulbs act in this way, but never any considerable number of this or any other variety. The fact that the bulbs rooted well, that the flowers received were in no way discolored and that others in the same batch flowered satisfactorily, is somewhat puzzling. Can any other bulb growers, who have had similar experiences, cast any light on this subject?

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Pansies.

March has proved a remarkably warm month, utterly belying its character. There has been an absence of cold, cutting winds and, with a temperature much above the normal, vegetation is much more advanced than the average. It is, of course, possible that April may have some disagreeable climatic changes, but with the increasing power of the sun the danger from late freezings and thawings is now much lessened. There is often a hurry to remove winter mulchings with the first burst of late winter heat. It is always well to go slowly in doing this. Pansies can now have their coverings gradually removed. They have wintered remarkably well, thanks to the heavy coating of snow during January and February. As soon as the mulch has been removed, look over and firm any plants which have been lifted by the action of frost; also stir the ground between the plants and they will grow at an accelerated rate.

Plants in coldframes should have a nice crop of flowers coming on them now. Keep these well soaked with water. All the members of the viola family love cool and moist conditions at the root. Many country florists do considerable outside work in the way of planting and caring for small estates. On such places a good many pansies, myosotis, daisies and other spring plants can be used up. It is always a good plan to have a stock of small handle baskets containing a dozen plants each. These invariably sell well. As a general rule, mixed colors please the majority, but some prefer baskets of blue, white and other shades separately.

Hardy Biennials.

Included in the category of hardy biennials are some plants which in some winters stand well outdoors, especially if the snow remains on the ground continuously; also some which are really perennials, but are more frequently treated as biennials. Among these plants are Canterbury bells, foxgloves, rockets, columbines, honesty, Coreopsis grandiflora, Gaillardia grandiflora, and in some localities Shasta daisies and Pyrethrum roseum. In the more northerly states, plants of these that were carried over winter under sashes should now be planted out. Those wintered outside should have their mulch removed. In some states all the foregoing plants will winter outdoors, but they cannot be relied upon in many sections.

Gladioli.

Just as soon as the ground is well dried out—and it has been in that condition for the last ten days in March—plant out a generous batch of gladioli. They are among the most useful and best selling of outdoor flowers, and to secure a long season with them it is better to plant the bulbs at intervals of a fortnight until June, always keeping the bulbs in a cold, dry cellar until they are wanted. Avoid using fresh barnyard manure for gladioli. Land that was well manured the previous year is all right, and 1,000 pounds of some good commercial fertilizer per acre will give good returns. Plant the corms four inches deep. Let the rows be sufficiently wide to permit easy cultivation. Large corms can go two or three inches apart, small ones closer. Do not be afraid of late frosts hurting the corms. Have you never noticed that they are practically hardy, and in well drained land will come through a quite severe winter unharmed if well mulched? Sod land, plowed last fall, is good for gladioli and they do specially well in ground of a sandy nature.

Dutch Bulbous Plants.

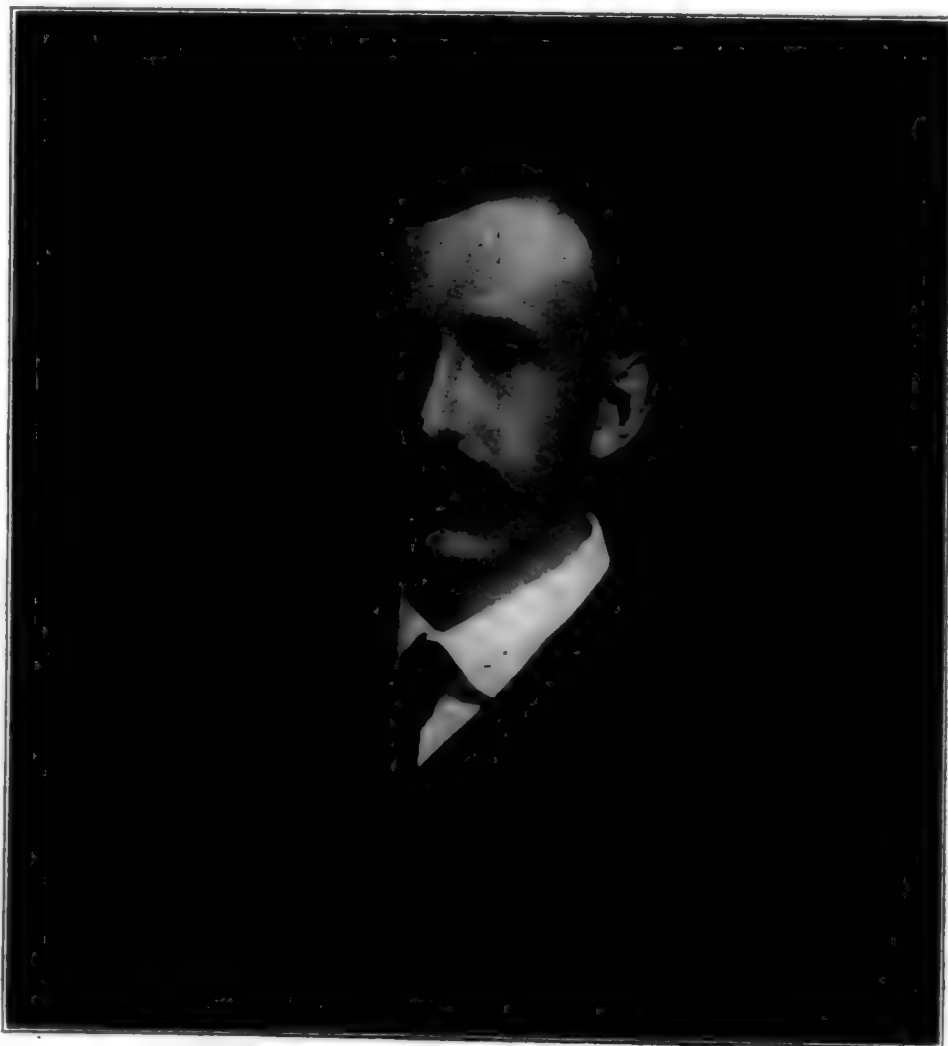

It has been so warm in March that we have been obliged to remove most of the covering from beds of hyacinths, tulips and narcissi. This is much earlier than usual and has been done because the continued warm weather was causing the shoots to develop rapidly under the mulch, and leaving it on longer would mean many broken shoots. Some covering is still, however, left on the beds, just enough to protect them somewhat in case of sudden late cold snaps. Narcissi, as the hardiest of the bulbs named, can well dispense with all covering now, but it is well not to be in too big a rush to fully expose the tulips and hyacinths. Just as soon as mulch is taken off, scratch the soil over, using a small hand fork.

Pruning Hardy Roses.

The early part of April is a good time for pruning hardy roses. It is unwise to do the work any sooner, as late frosts will sometimes seriously blast the breaks on the plants. In the case of hybrid perpetuals, such as Jacqueminot, Frau Karl Druschki, Mme. G. Luizet, Mrs. John Laing, etc., cut away all old and weak wood. Leave four to six of the strongest shoots to a plant. Never leave more than a foot of the previous season's growth on even the strongest, and in the case of weaker shoots half that length will suffice. If you want strong shoots and fine roses, prune hard. Nine out of ten growers are afraid to head back their plants sufficiently. If unconvinced of the merits of severe pruning, cut back a few plants lightly under the old method and cut the same number back as advised. When flowers appear you will speedily see which plan is the one to follow in the future.

Hybrid teas must be pruned much more lightly than the hybrid perpetuals. Merely remove dead and weak wood and shorten back the other shoots a few inches. In pruning ramblers, the old canes, which will yield few flowers, should be cut out clean, as well as all dead and weak wood. The shoots made last summer are those which will yield the finest trusses of flowers. Leave these their entire length, except that it is well to remove the thin or dead ends. Prune such varieties as Austrian Copper, Harrison's Yellow, Persian Yellow, multiflora and the various rugosas as lightly as you would hybrid teas. Among climbing varieties which withstood 10 to 15 degrees below zero without injury during the winter which has just closed, are: Crimson Rambler, Dorothy Perkins, Tausendschon, Lady Gay, Wedding Bells, Leuchstern, Mrs. W. C. Egan, Hiawatha and Goldfinch. As usual, the so-called yellow rambler, Aglaia, killed back badly.

Bedding Geraniums.

Geranium plants intended to be flowered in 4-inch pots should be got into that size as early as possible. For compost, avoid anything in the nature of fresh manure. Some thoroughly decomposed mushroom manure, or that from a spent hotbed, may form one-third of the whole. Add a 4-inch potful of fine bone to three bushels of compost. Use clean pots. If new, soak them well first. Be sure the balls are damp when the plants are potted.

Do not allow the flower trusses to remain on the plants for a while yet. Allow a month before sales-time for the trusses to develop. The plants cannot have too light a house. Preserve a sweet, pure atmosphere for them, giving ventilation on every possible opportunity. Keep later plants potted along before they can become matted at the roots. Care and cleanliness are essential to successful geranium culture. Remove all weeds. Loosen the surface soil of pots. Pick off all dead, decaying or diseased leaves and do not hose them over every time you feel like it. They should dry out well between waterings. Too much moisture produces soft plants, which will not flower satisfactorily.

Ten Weeks' Stocks.

Benched right away, ten weeks' stocks will be in flower for Memorial day. These always prove to be useful, cheap flowers for bouquets. Pull out plants with single flowers. They are of little use in the market, compared with doubles. A soil which will produce good carnations, roses or mums will answer well for stocks. In addition to the general run of ten weeks' stocks, such varieties as Beauty of Nice, delicate pink; White Column, Crimson Column and Empress Augusta Victoria, silvery lilac, are well adapted for bench culture.

Cannas.

There is still time to secure, start and grow nice salable plants of cannas for Memorial day or June sales. Carefully avoid an excess of moisture in the early stages of growth and there will be little likelihood of failure. Plants started and growing should be potted before they have made too many roots and too much top growth. Use a generous compost, as cannas are robust growers. Of course, they like a moderately warm house; 55 to 60 degrees now and 50 degrees a month hence will be found all right.

Amaryllis.

As the flowers on your amaryllis are cut, do not make the too common blunder of standing the pots below the benches or even laying them on their sides, as we have sometimes seen done. How anyone can ever hope to achieve success in amaryllis culture under such conditions, is beyond our imagination. The plants should be given a light, sunny house and be carefully watered. They should be encouraged to make a vigorous leaf growth. Achieving this will mean a much enlarged and improved bulb. There should be no drying off of the bulbs before fall; in fact, some of the best amaryllis growers hardly rest their plants at all, and they carry foliage while mums are in season. Keep seedlings growing constantly until they flower.

MOVING LARGE TREES.

The two photographs which are here reproduced illustrate the method used by George J. Langman, a landscape gardener of Colorado Springs, Colo., for the moving of large trees. The contrivance is a simple one and is attached to the running gear of an ordinary wagon. As the pictures show, the tree can be raised to any desired angle, and retained there, by means of the endless chains on the cog-wheels in the upper part of the framework and their connections with the block and tackle below. The old-fashioned guy ropes, usually fastened to the head of the tree, are discarded, as they have frequently proved to be injurious by disconnecting or loosening the roots from the ball of earth.

In order to get the wagon directly over the ball of the tree, and also over the hole where the tree is to be replanted, the rear axle of the wagon is removed, and the back of the truss or elevated framework upon which the tree is suspended keeps this part of the wagon together at any width required. To prevent damage to grass areas, wide tires are used. In the case illustrated, 14-inch tires were used on the rear wheels.

MY MARYLAND.

Last spring I bought 500 grafted My Maryland rose plants. They arrived in May and were potted into 3½-inch pots, to allow them to get a good start before planting on a raised bench July 1. When it came time to bench them I had 450 out of the 500 left, as it is almost impossible to make every plant live because of the change of climate from the north to the south.

The readers of this article can figure whether these 450 plants paid or not. W. J. Vesey, in his article in the REVIEW of March 3, gives his cut from 2,300 My Maryland plants as 26,540 salable blooms. He says, "to date." As the article is not dated, I presume he means March 1, so I will give the cut for the same dates. From September 1, 1909, to March 1, 1910, from 450 plants, 12,892 salable blooms (and they were sold), an average of twenty-eight and a half blooms per plant. They have cut steadily all winter. Of course the cut was not quite so heavy during January and February, but they are coming fast enough now. I give them almost the same treatment as Mr. Vesey, only run cooler temperature at night—62 to 63 degrees, and I suppose the day temperature runs a great deal higher, as it often goes over 80 degrees on clear days.

I find that My Maryland is a good shipper and keeper. They are not subject to mildew, can be cut quite tight, have good stiff necks, will stand lots of feeding and considerable rough usage. The one bad point I can see, is that they rot at the graft, so I am going to try own root stock this year. Of course, there is a tendency of own root stock to rest in midwinter, but all the same I am going to try it.

I should much like to hear from some of the middle south growers, stating how they fared with My Maryland roses. For my part I am more than satisfied.

SPIDER AND BLACK SPOT.

Enclosed you will find some sample rose leaves. If possible please tell us what the trouble is. The leaves keep turning yellow and dropping off. We have thought it might be red spider, but spraying seems to have no effect on them. The house has been run at 56 to 58 degrees at night and 65 to 75 degrees in the daytime. H. S. W.

The leaves show some effect of the work of red spider. They also show the presence of mildew, but that is not the cause of their turning yellow and dropping.

The chief cause is black spot. This is engendered by a cold, close atmosphere and sourness in the soil, by reason of overwatering, defective drainage or want of proper ventilation.

To remedy this, dry out the benches and ruffle the surface, give a sprinkling of air-slaked lime and give ventilation night and day when weather will permit (which is all the time unless during a storm), even at the expense of a few loads of fuel. Newly slaked hot lime, scattered under the benches, will have a beneficial effect on the atmosphere. Sulphur and air-slaked lime, in equal proportions, dusted on the foliage once a week, will prevent the trouble from spreading. RIBES.

MANURE FROM ALFALFA.

I should like to ask for information in regard to growing roses in the arid climate of western Montana. It seems that years ago the cows were fed on "blue joint grass" and the manure could be used successfully for roses, but now almost all cows are fed on alfalfa, as it is a better milk producer and is cheaper than hay or blue joint grass. Alfalfa manure has been used at this plant for the last few years for roses and mums, but the crops seem to be more or less of a failure. We are using the same soil as before, but there seems to be some harmful element in the alfalfa manure or a lack of the necessary elements. Could you tell us the difference in composition of the two sorts of manure I have mentioned, and what animal or chemical fertilizers we could use to react on the harmful element or to supply the missing elements?

The rose bushes have a stunted growth and all the new shoots go directly into buds, often before the shoots are an inch long. The flowers themselves are of little account, even for designing. The young growth on mums turns yellow and finally the plants die.

At present we are going through a series of experiments, but have not found anything to take the place of the old cow manure. We have found, however, that the roses and mums do far better in pure soil, without the alfalfa manure. If there are any florists who have had the same thing to contend with, we should greatly appreciate an account of their experience. J. F. D.

In regard to the quality of the manure from cows fed on alfalfa, I have not discovered, after many inquiries among farmers and others who have used it, that there is any marked difference between it and ordinary farmyard manure, and I am inclined to the belief that your failure is due to some other cause. By sending a sample to your state agricultural college for analysis you will learn whether the manure is fit for your purpose.

Many rose growers who find it next to impossible to secure a supply of cow manure are using sheep manure as a substitute, and a good substitute it is and not particularly expensive. Bone meal is also largely used as a fertilizer, with excellent results. Unleached wood ashes are also beneficial when used intelligently. RIBES.

CARRYING OVER ROSES.

Will you kindly tell us whether rose plants put on benches last spring will pay if carried over another year or not? Can they be transferred into another bench? If so, please give us directions as to proper treatment to give them in transferring, the date, etc. The varieties are Maid, Bride and Killarney. D. G.

These plants, if in good health, can be carried over another season profitably. This can be done either by leaving them where they are or by transferring them to another bench.

If they are growing on a table bench they should be ripened by gradually withholding water for a week or so in July, but not sufficient to cause wilting of the soft wood. They should then receive a partial pruning, removing all the small, strawy wood. A portion of the top soil should then be removed, just as much as can be done without injuring the roots. Give the bench a generous sprinkling of bone meal and then fill the bench with a compost of three parts good fibrous loam to one part decomposed cow manure, thoroughly incorporated.

Give the bench a thorough soaking and keep the house cool and moist until the buds swell, when ordinary treatment will suffice.

If the benches are solid, it takes a longer time to complete the ripening process. RIBES.

MOVING HARDY ROSES.

I have some rose bushes to move for a customer. They have been planted five or six years and the party wants to move them to another part of the grounds. Please tell me what time to transplant them and other information that will help to make a satisfactory job of it. The varieties are General Jacqueminot, Brunner and other hardy roses. F. M.

Dig up the roses as carefully as possible just as soon as you find the ground clear of frost. Preserve the roots as intact as you can. Cut off any broken ones. The new ground should previously have been well manured and spaded over. In planting, spread out the roots well, and if they are budded or grafted plants, cover the bud two to three inches. Tramp the soil about the bushes firmly.

Climbing Roses in California.

Cover the roots with some burlap to prevent drying out by wind or sun. If dry when planted, pour a little water over the roots after first covering with soil. Allow this to settle before filling in and giving the final tramping. Prune back quite severely from April 10 to 15. Allow three or four buds on strong shoots of last season's growth and two buds on weaker wood. Vigorous 2-year-old nursery stock would give better satisfaction than the older bushes you refer to.

CLIMBING ROSES IN CALIFORNIA.

The climbing roses shown in the accompanying pictures are all six years old from the cuttings, and illustrate the remarkably rapid growth made by roses in the vicinity of Monterey bay, California. They are principally Lamarque, though there are included a few Seven Sisters and Reine Marie Henriette.

But it should be stated that plenty of food was provided for the plants when set out. The planting holes were three to four feet in diameter and two feet deep, and in the bottom of each were placed two wheelbarrow loads of mixed cow and horse manure and a liberal allowance of broken bones and wood ashes. This was covered with four or five inches of soil and the soil used to fill around the plants was enriched by decayed cow manure. Further, each spring the soil around the plants was dug and then heavily mulched with manure.

The heavy layer of manure at the bottom of the hole was put in to help hold the moisture during the dry season, as well as to supply food, and it seems to have accomplished the purpose. Of course, the plants were watered during the dry season, but much less was required than is usually the case in that part of California.

A COLEUS SPORT.

I am sending you a coleus sport that has grown for the second season, and it has not changed back to the mother plant as yet. Please tell me whether I have anything new.

R. P. B.

The sport is not a new one and is a color which we think will not prove popular for bedding. There are a whole host of varieties similar to this one.

FAILURE WITH LILIES.

We are sending, under separate cover, some tops from Lilium Harrisii and L. candidum. We should like to know why the bulbs will not make more than about five per cent of flowers. Either they show no signs of flowers at all, or only a few poor looking buds, not much bigger than the head of a pin, and most of them disappear again. The leaves roll up and the majority of the leaves have a rolled-up, sickly appearance, with brown lines through them. One box of candidum lilies turned out well; the second box, with exactly the same treatment, made no flowers at all. Out of a full box, only six plants made a poor showing of tops. We have during the last five years always had about five per cent of diseased bulbs from Holland, but this time they are a complete failure. We got one box of Harrisii directly from Japan and this box contained extra fine bulbs. Kindly tell us where the trouble lies.

B. F. C.

The most probable cause of the failure of the bulbs is that they had been subjected to strong heat in transit and that, while the bulbs themselves may have looked plump and would make some growth, the embryo flower buds were killed. A similar case came to my notice only two or three days ago. A large retailer in an eastern city, who conducts a large growing establishment, stated that he had lost every longiflorum and candidum in the same way, although the soil, watering and other conditions were made as nearly perfect as possible.

In the case of candidums, another season demand north of France grown bulbs. These carry broader foliage than the type usually seen and carry double the number of flowers per stalk, the blooms being much broader and larger. Harrisii are now coming so diseased and are so uncertain a crop that Formosas are largely displacing them. The latter are clean, and, as they arrive early, can be bloomed five to six weeks ahead of any other longiflorums.

BOSTON.The Market.

While it is undoubtedly true that more plants and flowers were sold than ever before in Boston's history, the hot weather, particularly March 25, caused something of a glut of some varieties of flowers. With cooler weather everything would have been cleaned up, but everyone seems pretty well satisfied. It was more emphatically than ever a plant Easter, the cut flower trade being merely of secondary importance. Lilies, of course, were leaders and sold out well. The expected shortage did not materialize. Azaleas were in evidence everywhere and proved great sellers. Next to these in popularity came rambler roses. Among these, Dorothy Perkins, Tausendschon and Hiawatha were the favorites. Crimson and Baby Ramblers were not seen at all in some stores. How have the mighty fallen! Frau Karl Druschki and other hybrids and Clothilde Soupert had a good sale. Ericas sold well, but hydrangeas, even when beautifully flowered, were in poor demand. They seemed to be about the only flowering plant on the tabooed list. Acacias sold quite well, metrosideros in limited numbers, and lilacs in large quantities.

Rhododendrons, such as Pink Pearl and other choice sorts, sold quickly; kalmias only moderately; while quite a number of prunus, pyrus, Azalea mollis, weigelas and wistarias were sold. Genistas did not move quite so quickly as other better lasting flowers, but had a large sale. Bougainvilleas sold well.

Climbing Roses in California.

Among other plants, gardenias, cyclamens, boronias, lily of the valley and bulbous stock in variety sold well. Few good marguerites were seen, but there were plenty of spiræas (astilbes) and Primula obconica. There was a fairly good call for ferns, palms and other foliage plants. The warm weather on Good Friday and the fact that it was comparatively mild on the following day, made wrapping unnecessary, and this was a big saving of labor for the plantmen.

Coming to the cut flower trade, business during the whole of the week before Easter was excellent and nothing but the unseasonably hot wave could have caused a surplus. Roses, especially long-stemmed ones, were none too plentiful. There was but little advance in prices on these. Killarney, Richmond and Beauties were leaders. Of short-stemmed flowers there was a big supply, but even these cleaned up pretty well. Carnations made from $2 to $5 per hundred all the week, some fancies making $6. March 26 the arrivals were rather more than the market could digest and values declined in the afternoon. Violets came out in tremendous volume. Many showed the effects of the hot wave. Good singles, well bunched, and some doubles made $1 per hundred, others going at 75 cents and 50 cents. The present week will practically finish the singles. Sweet peas were seen in tens of thousands and sold well at from $1.50 down to 35 cents per hundred.

Tulips and narcissi were forthcoming in immense quantities, prices averaging from $1.50 to $2 per hundred, N. ornatus going at $1. Cut lilies made $10 per hundred, but declined late Saturday and were an oversupply. Pansies, primroses, myosotis, cornflowers, etc., sold quite well. Yellow wallflowers moved satisfactorily, but the blood-red variety hung fire. Callas had a good sale, as did lily of the valley. Mignonette and pleasing shades of snapdragon had a good call. Yellow marguerites sold better than the white. Gardenias were abundant; good flowers sold well; seconds poorly. Orchids cut little figure in the market. For adiantum, Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri, and smilax, trade was extra good.

March 28 saw an abundance of flowers and prices on the down grade. With cooler weather, such as we are now getting, the supply will be curtailed. Many growers look for good April prices, due to cold weather which we should have had in March.

Various Notes.

William Sim had two of his 360-foot houses and one 200 feet long in magnificent crop for Easter. From these he picked close to 150,000 stalks March 24. The plants were a veritable mass of bloom. He has also a house of the Spencer types coming on for late blooming. Violets held out in the houses for Easter this year. In addition, Mr. Sim had about 1,000 sashes of them in heavy crop, which yielded a multitude of flowers. Last fall he sowed two rows of sweet peas in these frames. The plants wintered well, although covered up so long, and as the violets and sashes are removed the peas will be given supports and Mr. Sim hopes to be cutting a fine crop from them outdoors for Memorial day.

Peirce Bros. had a nice lot of speciosum lilies, in addition to longiflorums, for Easter, also some good mignonette.

The veteran, William Miller, of West

Lynn, has been spending the last few weeks in Porto Rico, the climate of which island he enjoys in winter.

William H. Elliott had an extra heavy cut of roses for Easter, all of which sold readily. The variety, Beacon Hill, a seedling of E. G. Hill's, is being tried by him, both at Madbury, N. H., and Brighton. It is of similar color to Bridesmaid, but much larger, and Mr. Elliott thinks it may prove a useful summer variety. Some splendid flowers on long stems are being cut at present.

Philip L. Carbone's Boylston street store was artistically arranged for Easter. Among other plants noted here of special merit were Mme. Lemoine and Macrostachya lilacs, amaryllis, boronias, Erica Caffra densa, beautiful specimens of Dorothy Perkins and other roses, as well as many unique varieties of cut flowers.

The full premium list for the big orchid exhibition which opens in Boston May 26 is now ready and will be forwarded on application to the secretary of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, W. P. Rich, 300 Massachusetts avenue, Boston.

Thomas Roland describes the Easter plant trade as satisfactory. The poorest selling things were hydrangeas, which for some reason no one seemed to want this season, even though they were of splendid quality. Dorothy Perkins roses, pink and white, Tausendschon, boronias, acacias, ericas, genistas and other varieties sold well.

Wax Bros., on Tremont street, had some specially well grown specimens of pyramidal genistas last week, also an excellent assortment of rambler roses and other pot plants. In cut flowers, orchids were shown in good variety. They did a big business.

The New King Construction houses at Hadley, Mass., built for the Montgomery Co., are now ready for glazing. Alex. Montgomery, Jr., will go there April 1 with a force of glaziers.

At William E. Doyle's, on Boylston street, plant trade beat all records. Pretty bougainvilleas in 5-inch pots were noted here. Tausendschon and Dorothy Perkins were leaders among ramblers. Good gardenias and extra fine azaleas and lilies were also seen.

At the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, March 22, William Sim's new violet, Cyclops, attracted much attention. He imported it from England last year. The flowers are large, dark blue and stems long. The striking thing about the flower, however, is the large center, which in some cases reminds one of an anemone chrysanthemum. Mr. Sim showed eighteen splendid vases of sweet peas at the same meeting. E. O. Orpet secured a report of superior merit for Lælio-Cattleya Kerschoviae, a fine white form of Lælio-Cattleya Frederick Boyle.

At Thomas J. Clark's store, at the corner of Berkeley and Boylston streets, some nicely flowered Weigelia Eva Rathke were seen last week. Ericas were extra good and a splendid general line of pot plants was displayed. The only really good spikes of Lilium candidum were to be seen here.

A. Leuthy & Co. did a grand Easter trade. They had some extra fine lilies, gardenias, azaleas, acacias and forced deciduous shrubs, also having a good call for palms, ferns and other foliage plants.

Edward MacMulkin, on Boylston street, had his customary attractive window of white flowering plants for Easter. He had fine lots of Rhododendrons Kate Waterer and John Waterer, which sold fast. These, with Pink Pearl, he considers the cream of the rhododendrons for Easter trade. Fine specimens of Hia-watha and Tausendschon roses and a grand lot of specimen azaleas were included among a big assortment of other flowering plants.

The Willow Hill Greenhouses, of West Roxbury, were leaders with Spiræa Queen Alexandra for Easter. It netted double the price of the white varieties.

Paine Bros., of Randolph, had a charming and finely grown assortment of bulbous stock, in the culture of which they are well known specialists.

The J. A. Budlong Co., at Auburn, R. I., is having excellent success with My Maryland and is shipping large lots to Boston at present. Richmond and Killarney were also in heavy crop. They will increase their planting of White Killarney this season.

S. Hoffman, at his big Massachusetts avenue store, did a tremendous business and the quality of his plants was unsurpassed in Boston. His new State street store has "caught on" and is doing a rushing business in the heart of "financialdom."

Good Friday, 1910, was the hottest March day ever known in Massachusetts; 82 degrees was the maximum.

John McFarland, of North Easton, had a heavy crop of gardenias right for Easter and they sold well, also excellent valley.

H. R. Comley, on Park street, showed Gerbera Jamesoni (South African daisy). In pot plants boronias and Rose Tausendschon were noteworthy.

Julius A. Zinn, on Park street, had the best specimens of metrosideros and Bougainvillea Sanderiana seen.

Charles E. Holbrow, of Brighton, has just finished six weeks of duty as a jurymen. It came at a somewhat inopportune time and Mr. Holbrow had to do some hustling to dispose of his Easter stock. Spiræa Gladstone and Dorothy Perkins rose were well grown.

N. F. Comley had an immense pick of sweet peas for Easter and a host of bulbous flowers. I do not remember ever seeing so many sweet peas in the Boston markets, even in summer.

H. M. Robinson & Co. had night-and-day work prior to Easter to keep abreast of their orders. The cut flower and plant trade was exceptionally good, while orders for laurel wreathing and other greenery were unusually heavy.

Thomas F. Galvin had one window of acacias and one of genistas on Tremont street. They had wistarias, Prunus triloba, Pyrus Scheideckeri, a variety of lilac and other forced shrubs, and did an immense plant and cut flower trade at both their Back Bay and Tremont street stores.

James Wheeler leaves Brookline this week for his new commercial place at Natick and will rush work on his new greenhouse. The A. T. Stearns Lumber Co. will supply the lumber and the Boston Plate & Window Glass Co., the glass. The greenhouses which have been in Mr. Wheeler's care for so many years are to be demolished shortly. W. D. Nickerson, his assistant, succeeds him as gardener.

S. J. Goddard is sending in some extra fine pink antirrhinum to 6 Park street at present. He had the heaviest Easter trade in his experience, in both cut flowers and pot plants.

J. T. Butterworth did a good trade in pots of lily of the valley. He had a big cut of bulbous flowers. Orchids did not cut any special feature with him this Easter, but he will have some fine Cattleya Mossiae soon.

Patrick Welch is optimistic over the coming national flower show and is satisfied that America will see the finest exhibition in its history. The S. A. F. might do worse than elect Mr. Welch its president. He is in every way fitted for such a position. Easter trade with his firm was heavier than ever. In some lines of cut flowers the hot weather caused something of a glut. A big plant business was done.

D. J. Horrigan, of Foxboro, is still the leader among yellow marguerite growers, and his shipments of these are eagerly looked for and quickly snapped up.

Mann Bros. had about the only good candidum lilies seen in the wholesale markets. They did a heavy trade in both pot plants and cut flowers.

The committee on resolutions appointed by the Gardeners' and Florists' Club on the late treasurer, Edward Hatch, are: W. J. Stewart, P. Welch and William Downs. A successor to Mr. Hatch will be appointed April 19.

The long agitation over the Commonwealth avenue trees is at last ended and the two vigorous rows of English field elms were lifted and planted among the four rows of older trees last week. Shade at any price, with little thought for the future, seemed to be the main argument of the 4-row advocates.

John D. Duly, late of North Easton, has taken charge of the estate of Mrs. J. W. Andrews, Newport, R. I., and Daniel McFie, of the George Duncan estate, at Nahant, Mass.

William Nicholson is now cutting a fine lot of white and yellow marguerites, in the culture of which he has excellent success. He had some splendid mignonne for Easter and a big crop of high-grade carnations.

John Barr, of South Natick, sold the last of his finely grown cyclamens for Easter. His carnations were in heavy crop. He has a big lot of hydrangeas under way for Memorial day.

Everett Cummings, of Woburn, sold 50,000 Princess of Wales violets at top prices, March 26. Kidder Bros., who grow 8,000 plants, had splendid flowers. These, put up 200 in a bunch, were in great demand and all made $1 per hundred easily.

The floor of the main exhibition hall for the big orchid show in Horticultural hall is being removed. The passageways will be of cement instead of wood. A big outpouring of society is expected on the opening night. Other choice exhibits in addition to orchids will be made.

Welch Bros. are handling a fine line of seasonable orchids from Paul De Nave, of Fall River. Cattleya Schroederiana is good at present.

Spraying for San Jose scale has lately been carried out on a large scale in this section. Almost every orchardist and many gardeners and nurserymen are using either the lime-sulphur solution or one of the soluble oils, the latter being the most popular. W. N. CRAIG.

WILLIAM E. FISCHER.

William E. Fischer, recently elected one of the executive committee of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, has been an active worker in the club for many years. He served on the executive committee in 1899, and in 1901, 1902, 1903 and 1904 filled the office of secretary most acceptably. Mr. Fischer is a park man, having charge of one of the departments in the Boston park system

The Market.

No Easter just like this one ever happened before. A temperature of nearly 80 degrees on Good Friday tells the story of wilted violets, sleepy carnations and open roses, with such an abundance of cut flowers as was never seen at any date since Easters began. Naturally, results are disappointing to growers and wholesalers, while the retailers, at the time when the best cut stock could have been handled at a profit and no buyer antagonized, already had committed their energies to the sale of plants, and with the usual result of a complete clean-up of every flowering plant and combination, while cut stock in enormous surplus remained in the hands of the wholesalers or in the ice-boxes of the retailers, unsold. The extremely warm weather of the week accounts for it all. Nothing could withstand seven days of summer temperature in March. Every evidence of spring is already here. The trees are budding and the grass is green in the parks. Many think a cold April is presaged, and for this the nurserymen and the plant auctioneers are already praying. The present week opens with clouds and chill. It will take some days for the market to recover from the shock. Meantime the surplus goes at whatever it will bring.

The best lilies were selling at 4 cents March 28. They fell to 6 cents early Saturday, and even then there must have been 50,000 of them in the street unsold at midnight. The anticipated crowd of buyers after 10 p. m. did not materialize. There was no crowding. In some of the stores a single buyer was in evidence; so it went on until Sunday morning. Cart-loads of unsalable flowers were carried away early Monday. There was plenty of the usual pickling, where the unfortunate grower banked on the cold snap that never came. This year his lesson will be severe. Nothing kept over a day was salable. Only the best stock was in demand, and this was dispensed at prices that almost any good Saturday will equal.

The extreme top for Beauties was 60 cents. Few sold at that. From 50 cents down was almost universal, and many of the best were sold at $40 per hundred. A few Richmond reached 20 cents, but Killarney and My Maryland seldom went above 12 cents, while 8 cents was the average asking for the selected Bride and Maid. The shipments of these varieties were enormous. The hot weather was too much for the bulk of the carnations. Most of them went to sleep early; $3 per hundred was the usual quotation for good stock, and from that down.

The best violets jumped a little bit higher after midnight. So great was the supply of the small and wilted stock that came in Saturday, some of the wholesalers declared they handled a million of them. There must have been five millions of them here the last three days of the week. Over 1,000 hands were employed in picking them at Rhinebeck. Perfect stock was scarce and sold at 75 cents towards Sunday morning, while it lasted. With the second-rate stuff the streets were blue. In fact, all through the week the sidewalk men were legion. They are both a menace and a godsend. They are the bete noir of the retailer, and the outlet for the wholesale surplus. Where would the grower be without them? And perhaps they are fulfilling their mission in popularizing the wearing of flowers and keeping them always on exhibition.

Orchids were scarce and the prices satisfactory. The best cattleyas touched 75 cents. There were not enough for the John Barr, of South Natick, sold the last of his finely grown cyclamens for Easter. His carnations were in heavy crop. He has a big lot of hydrangeas under way for Memorial day.

Everett Cummings, of Woburn, sold 50,000 Princess of Wales violets at top prices, March 26. Kidder Bros., who grow 8,000 plants, had splendid flowers. These, put up 200 in a bunch, were in great demand and all made $1 per hundred easily.

The floor of the main exhibition hall for the big orchid show in Horticultural hall is being removed. The passageways will be of cement instead of wood. A big outpouring of society is expected on the opening night. Other choice exhibits in addition to orchids will be made.

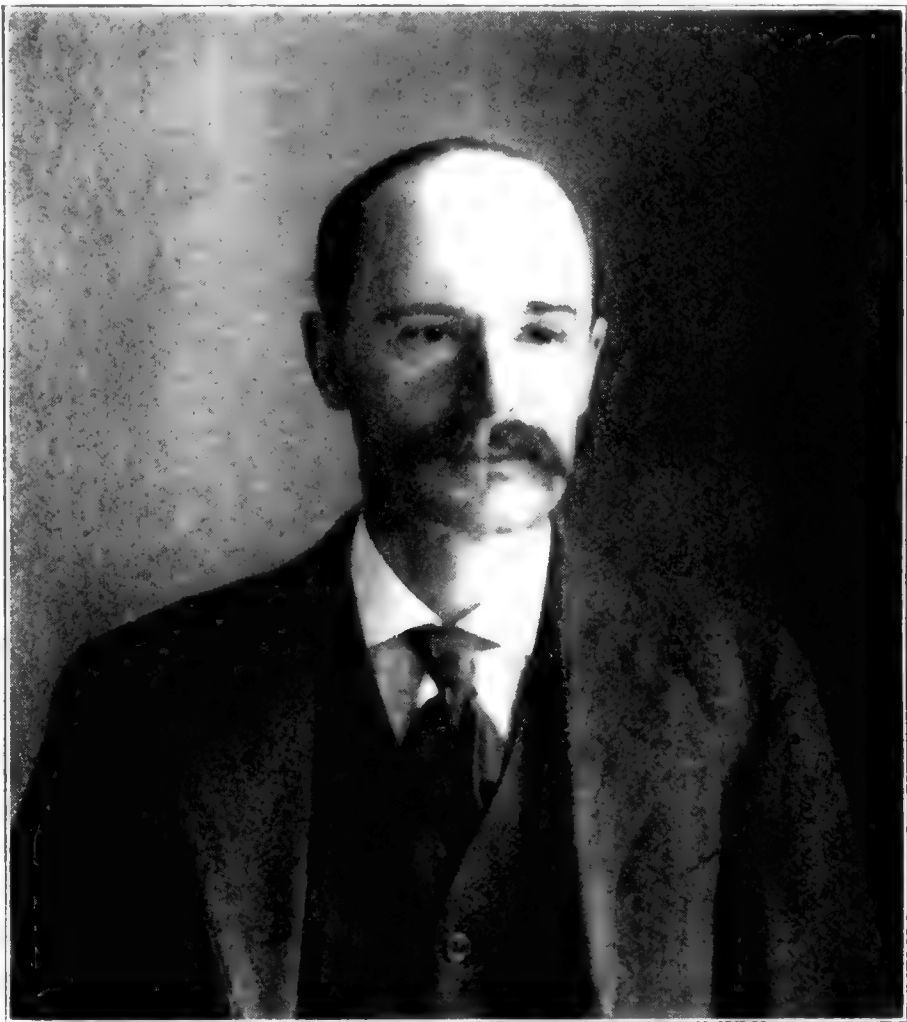

Welch Bros. are handling a fine line of seasonable orchids from Paul De Nave, of Fall River. Cattleya Schrederiana is good at present.

Spraying for San Jose scale has lately been carried out on a large scale in this section. Almost every orchardist and many gardeners and nurserymen are using either the lime-sulphur solution or one of the soluble oils, the latter being the most popular.

WILLIAM E. FISCHER.

William E. Fischer, recently elected one of the executive committee of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, has been an active worker in the club for many years. He served on the executive committee in 1899, and in 1901, 1902, 1903 and 1904 filled the office of secretary most acceptably. Mr. Fischer is a park man, having charge of one of the departments in the Boston park system

NEW YORK.

The Market.

No Easter just like this one ever happened before. A temperature of nearly 80 degrees on Good Friday tells the story of wilted violets, sleepy carnations and open roses, with such an abundance of cut flowers as was never seen at any date since Easters began. Naturally, results are disappointing to growers and wholesalers, while the retailers, at the time when the best cut stock could have been handled at a profit and no buyer antagonized, already had committed their energies to the sale of plants, and with the usual result of a complete clean-up of every flowering plant and combination, while cut stock in enormous surplus remained in the hands of the wholesalers or in the ice-boxes of the retailers, unsold. The extremely warm weather of the week accounts for it all. Nothing could withstand seven days of summer temperature in March. Every evidence of spring is already here. The trees are budding and the grass is green in the parks. Many think a cold April is presaged, and for this the nurserymen and the plant auctioneers are already praying. The present week opens with clouds and chill. It will take some days for the market to recover from the shock. Meantime the surplus goes at whatever it will bring.

The best lilies were selling at 4 cents March 28. They fell to 6 cents early Saturday, and even then there must have been 50,000 of them in the street unsold at midnight. The anticipated crowd of buyers after 10 p. m. did not materialize. There was no crowding. In some of the stores a single buyer was in evidence;

so it went on until Sunday morning. Cart-loads of unsalable flowers were carried away early Monday. There was plenty of the usual pickling, where the unfortunate grower banked on the cold snap that never came. This year his lesson will be severe. Nothing kept over a day was salable. Only the best stock was in demand, and this was dispensed at prices that almost any good Saturday will equal.

The extreme top for Beauties was 60 cents. Few sold at that. From 50 cents down was almost universal, and many of the best were sold at $40 per hundred. A few Richmond reached 20 cents, but Killarney and My Maryland seldom went above 12 cents, while 8 cents was the average asking for the selected Bride and Maid. The shipments of these varieties were enormous. The hot weather was too much for the bulk of the carnations. Most of them went to sleep early; $3 per hundred was the usual quotation for good stock, and from that down.

The best violets jumped a little bit higher after midnight. So great was the supply of the small and wilted stock that came in Saturday, some of the wholesalers declared they handled a million of them. There must have been five millions of them here the last three days of the week. Over 1,000 hands were employed in picking them at Rhinebeck. Perfect stock was scarce and sold at 75 cents towards Sunday morning, while it lasted. With the second-rate stuff the streets were blue. In fact, all through the week the sidewalk men were legion. They are both a menace and a godsend. They are the bete noir of the retailer, and the outlet for the wholesale surplus. Where would the grower be without them? And perhaps they are fulfilling their mission in popularizing the wearing of flowers and keeping them always on exhibition.

Orchids were scarce and the prices satisfactory. The best cattleyas touched 75 cents. There were not enough for the outsiders. Of green goods there was an abundance. Valley was lower than usual; 3 cents would buy the best of it. Gardenias held at winter rates and were perfect in quality. Callas, especially the fine stock, were firm at $2 per dozen.

The sweet pea shipments were liberal and some of the stock never excelled in the New York market. Some grand shipments also were offered by the Brooklyn wholesalers, where prices for almost everything were on a par with Twenty-eighth street. Daffodils, tulips, narcissi and hyacinths were all abundant and at no advance on regular rates. The market is flooded with southern shipments of daffodils, and even Bermuda was heard from. Cut lilies were selling at 10 cents a flower at retail in the department stores.

Wednesday, March 31.—With the temperature at 80 degrees, long Beauties are down to $20 per hundred. Other roses, straight slips, are going at $1 per hundred; carnations the same. Lilies are sold as low as $15 or even $10 per thousand. The market is without bottom anywhere.

Various Notes.

The remarkable total of $25,000 in plants and cut flowers was given, on good authority, as the total purchases of Mr. Trepel, of Brooklyn, for his stores in that city and New York. His conservatory in Bloomingdale's was filled to overflowing, and an enormous room at Lozier's, Brooklyn, was banked to the ceiling. Over 100 extra employees were engaged for the week, largely from the universities and high schools, and they proved the best of investments. For volume of business this young and enterprising man probably leads the entire country. He told me his sales for the week would aggregate over $50,000.

The retail stores of the two cities were never so elaborately decorated as this year. The stock of plants was selected with care, and nothing imperfect was accepted. Unique and original combinations and arrangements were everywhere. To specialize would make necessary the mention of names of everyone worth while in the retail business. To succeed in New York one must be an artist and individualize to become a permanent success. The larger stores were gorgeously clothed and made so attractive that resistance by the flower lover was useless.

The plant growers are happy. Everything worth while was sold at their own reasonable prices. All else went to the auctions, and even the imperfect stuff brought good prices there. One of the auction houses sold daily during Easter week. Crowds attended. From now on all the auctions will continue Tuesdays and Fridays. At Elliott's the big room was full to overflowing. Mr. Elliott was not quite satisfied with the bidding, but the suburbanites are waking up and from now until June there will be great quantities of nursery stock disposed of.

In Rutherford and Elizabeth and on Long Island the nurserymen have all begun their shipments. Never was there so wide and early a demand. All the big seed houses are handling nursery stock and report an unusual demand. These also, without exception, found a tremendous call at Easter for flowering plants. At A. T. Boddington's, over 600,000 cannas have been sold already. The firm's shipments of palm seeds have arrived. The plant cellars are filled with hardy roses, shrubs, etc. A trip through the establishment is a revelation.

The artistic cover of the H. H. Berger & Co. catalogue is the handiwork of Miss Berger. Mrs. Berger has been seriously ill, but her many friends will be glad to know of her recovery.

The poultry department of the Stumpp & Walter Co. is an interesting place, and a noisy one. The big windows are always deftly decorated with attractive novelties.

Many weddings are announced for this week. That should help some. Over 150 licenses were granted March 26. Some of the big stores have heavy bookings. Society is returning from Palm Beach and other southern fashionable resorts. The early weeks of April promise many elaborate decorations.

The Florists' Club will have its next meeting Monday, April 11. Full particulars will be given concerning the outing July 1 by Chairman H. A. Bunyard. Judging by the splendid company and the prevailing harmony at the club dinner, the attendance will break all records.

April 2 occurs the regular monthly meeting of the Cut Flower Exchange in the Coogan building.

The removal of several of the Twenty-eighth street wholesalers to the big building on Fourth avenue has been abandoned. Unless the exodus could have been general, the move would have been unwise. Concentration seems to be more likely. Large buildings are still available on both Twenty-eighth and Twenty-seventh streets, not far from Sixth avenue, so that an early securing of some desirable center seems now assured. Twenty-eighth street is somewhat torn asunder now in the completion of its subway entrances. What will it be when the skyscrapers begin to rise?

Julian H. Walter, of Stumpp & Walter Co., has returned from his European trip.

James McHutchison, of McHutchison & Co., sailed for Europe March 29.

Mrs. August Millang was back at her desk in time for the Easter rush.

B. S. Slinn, Jr., says he handled over a million violets Easter week.

Joseph Kushner, of Brooklyn, who has been ill with pneumonia, is recovering.

Paul Marconi is now in the retail business, with headquarters at 50 West Twenty-eighth street.

Kessler Bros., whose specialty is plants, emptied their store several times during Easter week and were entirely sold out.

Nicholas Lecakes, who has been a sufferer with the grippe, is again on deck.

Charles Millang has been on the sick list since Saturday, the result of overwork during the Easter rush. None of the wholesalers closed their stores Saturday night.

John Young, of Bedford Station, was a visitor in the wholesale section March 26 and enjoyed it much more than when he was himself a wholesaler.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

A new corporation, organized in this city for the purpose of dealing in flowers, seeds, etc., bears the original name of "Buds." The capital stock is $5,000. The incorporators are: Carl R. Gloeckner, of Jersey City, N. J.; Wm. F. O'Connor and Wm. H. Siebrecht, Jr., both of this city.

LEGISLATION FOR FLORISTS.

Readers of the REVIEW have already been informed about a bill, recently introduced in the state legislature at Albany, N. Y., which is of vast importance to the florists of New York state and of only a little less interest to florists throughout the country, since the results of the bill's passage would be national in more ways than one. The object of the bill, as stated in the REVIEW of March 24, is to secure an appropriation of $50,000 for the erection of a range of greenhouses at the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell University. These greenhouses and their equipment would be used, as the bill states, for "experimental and teaching work in floriculture." Moreover, if florists are sufficiently wide-awake and active in the promotion of the measure, the final outcome will be the establishment of a first-class school of floriculture, such as the whole country needs.

The bill, which was introduced by Assemblyman Wilkie, of Buffalo, has been read once and referred to the committee on ways and means. A copy of the bill, sent to the REVIEW by W. F. Kasting, has just been received. Mr. Kasting also expresses his own zeal in the matter by enclosing with the bill a personal, pointed appeal to the florists of his state, as follows:

"In order to get this bill out to the committee and not let it get asleep, I would urge every florist in New York state to write to the assemblyman or senator in his district, whoever he may be, and urge him to get this bill out of the committee. The state is doing considerable in the agricultural department, and I believe that we, as florists, should see that our interests are taken care of. It certainly will be a help to the floricultural part of our business. Do not wait, but do it at once."

The following is the text of the bill:

AN ACT

To build and equip a range of glass houses and service building for teaching floriculture at the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell University, and making an appropriation therefor.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Section 1. The sum of fifty thousand dollars ($50,000), or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated for the purpose of building and equipping, at Cornell University, a range of glass houses and service building, suitable for experimental and teaching work in floriculture. Such buildings shall be a part of the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell University, and shall be located on such portion of the land of the university as may be designated by the trustees of such university. Plans and specifications for such glass houses, service building and equipment shall be approved by the department of horticulture of such college of agriculture. Such buildings shall be built and equipped by such university and such appropriation shall be paid by the state treasurer on the warrant of the comptroller on the order of the treasurer of Cornell University, but no part of such appropriation shall be available, except for advertising and for plans, until such university has entered into a contract with a responsible party for the completion of such work within the amount appropriated.

Section 2. This act shall take effect immediately.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Mid-Lent Meeting of Executive Board.

[The following is the official report of the mid-lenten session, which was unofficially reported in the REVIEW of March 17.]

The regular mid-Lent meeting of the executive board was held at the Seneca hotel, Rochester, N. Y., March 12, 14 and 15. The entire executive board, consisting of President Pierson and Messrs. Asmus, Young, Vesey, Dailedouze, Rudd, Craig, Valentine, Vick, Kasting and Dorner, was present during the entire session. The usual routine of business was transacted.

The report of the treasurer, the financial report of the secretary for 1909 and also the supplementary reports for January and February, 1910, were received.

These reports were referred to a committee consisting of Messrs. Valentine and Dailedouze and were reported by them to be correct. They were then accepted by the board.

The treasurer was instructed to deposit all interest, received from the funds of the society, to the credit of the reserve or permanent fund.

Several changes in rules relating to the management of the annual trade exhibition were adopted. For floor space the rates are to be as follows:

Minimum charges..... $5.00
100 feet or less.....20c per sq. ft.
Excess over 100 ft. and not over 200 feet.....18c per sq. ft.
Excess over 200 feet.....15c per sq. ft.

All signs, in any exhibit, whether on the wall or elsewhere, shall not extend higher than six feet six inches above the floor. Sign space, outside exhibition space, shall be charged for at the same rate as floor space. For wall space for exhibition purposes and not for signs, the rates shall be one-half that for floor space. All signs used in the exhibition shall be black letters on a white ground. No other color shall be allowed to be used, either for lettering or for ornament.

A resolution was adopted providing that the public should be admitted to the exhibition every evening at 7 p. m. and on Thursday from 2 p. m. until closing time, and that at all other times the exhibition should be closed to the public. An admission fee of 25 cents will be charged. All arrangements attendant upon the admission of the public are to be under the control of a committee, consisting of F. W. Vick, Wm. Kasting and G. B. Hart.

Chas. H. Vick, on the recommendation of Vice-President Vick and the Rochester Florists' Association, was unanimously elected superintendent of the trade exhibition.

In connection with the committee of the local club, the board visited the large convention hall offered for the trade exhibition and meetings, and accepted it. This building contains about 48,000 square feet of floor space and was considered, by members of the board, to be the best hall ever offered for a trade exhibit.

President Pierson appointed John Westcott as chairman of the committee on convention sports, with A. F. Vick, R. G. Salter and J. M. Keller as the other members.

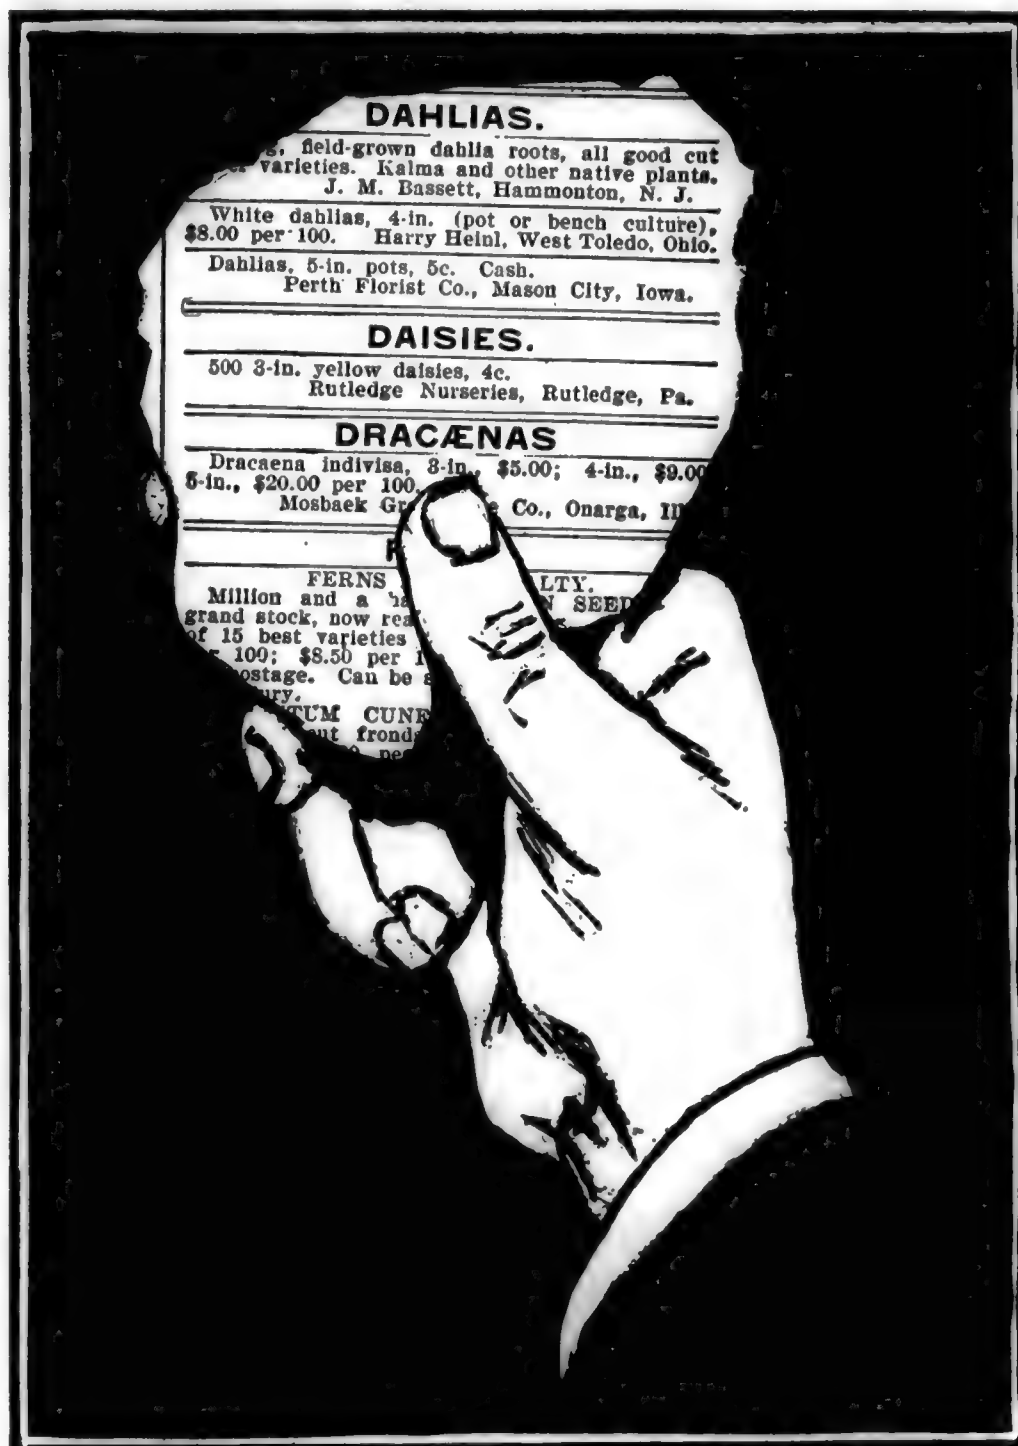

The usual appropriations were made for the year.

Mr. Valentine submitted to the board an outline for the organization of a retailers' section of the society. The plan, in general, provides that all members of this section must first become members of the society. It contemplates a trade arrangement by which business in distant towns may be exchanged on a safe basis as to quality of stock and credit. It was the unanimous opinion of the board that the idea is an excellent one for the society and will prove valuable to the retailers.

It was the unanimous opinion of the board that a special meeting of the society should be held during the time of the National Flower Show. A recommendation to that effect was made to the society.

The following resolution was adopted: "Resolved that if five or more members write to the secretary expressing an especial interest in any given floricultural topic, and request the organization of a section devoted to that subject, the secretary shall assign a place on the program to that topic and shall designate it by a suitable name as a separate section."

These Are the Little Liners That Do the Business

The object of this arrangement is to provide sections, so that members interested in these various subjects may get together and discuss them.

A tentative program for the coming meeting was adopted.

The executive board further indorsed the work of the experiment stations by passing resolutions commending the proposition for the state of New York to appropriate money for the erection of glass houses at Cornell University for experimental and teaching work in floriculture. A bill was recently introduced in the legislature at Albany embodying an appropriation of $50,000 for this purpose.

The tariff and legislative committee was directed to fully investigate the cause of the present high price of glass and to take whatever steps are necessary to relieve the situation. They were also requested to recommend such tariff legislation as will prevent a recurrence or continuation of the present conditions.

The following amendments to the constitution and by-laws were presented, ordered placed on record and printed in the program for action at the next annual meeting:

To amend Article V, Section 1, to read as follows: "The first annual meeting of the society shall be held at Buffalo, N. Y., on the first Tuesday of August, 1901. Subsequent meetings shall be held annually at such time and place as may be fixed by ballot at the morning session of the second day of each annual meeting and shall continue for at least three days."

To amend Article IV, Section 2, by striking out the figures 25.00 and inserting therefor 50.00, meaning to increase the life membership from $25.00 to $50.00.

On Monday night the members of the executive board were guests of the Rochester Florists' Association at its second annual banquet. The entertainment by the association was much appreciated.

The following final resolutions were adopted:

"The executive board of the S. A. F. desire to place upon record their appreciation of all the courtesies which have been shown them by the Florists' Association of Rochester, and to recognize the spirit of hearty cooperation shown by the members thereof. We can confidently look forward to an unusually successful convention next August. We recognize the liberality of the Chamber of Commerce in placing at the disposal of the society the finest hall we have ever had for our meetings and exhibition, entirely free of charge. We have enjoyed a most pleasant time at the banquet and are more than delighted with the cordial expressions of the various local speakers. We leave for our homes with the conviction that the earnest workers of Rochester will do their full share in making the convention of 1910 a complete success."

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS, MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
 Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

Results bring advertising.
 THE REVIEW brings results.

It was more than an exceptionally early Easter—it was an exceptionally hot one. Over the greater part of the country the thermometers registered in the 80's March 24 to 27.

EVERY advertisement in the Want department of the REVIEW represents a legitimate, actual need—and that the needs of the trade are many a glance at that section of the paper will show. Watch the Wants—and use them.

As recently as last August the Society of American Florists, in convention, voted down an amendment to the constitution and by-laws, raising the life membership fee from $25 to $50, but there apparently seems to the directors no good reason why the amendment should not be proposed every year until it finally gets through.

THE ONLY WAY.

To avoid unkind criticism:

Say nothing,
 Do nothing,
 Be nothing.

—Fra Elbertus.

THOSE GUILTY FLOWER BEDS.

Of all the amazing theories as to the cause of the high cost of living, that of John S. Green is the most wonderful. He lays it to the flower beds in people's back yards.

Mr. Green is a resident of Cleveland and is secretary of a national retail dealers' association. He recently appeared before the committee of the United States Senate that is investigating the cost of living. He is reported to have said that until recent years it was customary for people to plant vegetable gardens in their yards, but that year after year the tendency has been to substitute flowers and lawns; hence the higher prices of garden truck at the corner grocery.

If Mr. Green has been correctly reported, it only goes to show how farcical is the "investigation."

COURSES IN HORTICULTURE.

Correspondence courses for home study in agriculture, horticulture, poultry culture, domestic science and nature study are now provided by the School of Agriculture of the South Dakota State College, at Brookings, S. D. These courses are for all the members of the farm family, for school teachers and for everyone, everywhere, who wishes to learn. The courses of study, it is said, are not planned for financial profit, but to bring scientific and practical instruction within the reach of those who cannot attend college, yet are ambitious to gain instruction helpful in their work and life.

Four systematic courses are offered in horticulture, covering the subjects: First, Vegetable Gardening; second, Fruit Culture; third, Floriculture; fourth, Forestry.

A. A. Brigham is principal of the School of Agriculture and director of college extension.

OBITUARY.

Benjamin Kimball.

Benjamin Kimball, a retired florist of Brooklyn, N. Y., died Monday, March 20, of general debility, at his home, 151 Sterling place. He was born in Canada ninety-six years ago and is survived by a son and three daughters.

J. A. Briscoe.

J. A. Briscoe, for many years engaged in the nursery business at Highland Park, Mich., died Friday, March 25, aged 72 years. Mr. Briscoe was well known to the trade, was a member of the Detroit Florists' Club for many years, and at one time attended all the S. A. F. conventions.

He was a great lover of flowers. Two of his sons are at the head of the well known Maxwell-Briscoe Motor Co., and for the last few years the father was also actively engaged in the automobile business.

J. L. Wilcox.

Joshua L. Wilcox, for thirty-nine years a resident of Flint, Mich., died March 24, at the home of his son, Miles E. Wilcox, in Flint. Mr. Wilcox was born in Naples, N. Y., in 1837, and was taken to Michigan when he was four years old. He was married to Martha McLean in 1861 and settled in Flint in 1871. Of this union there were two children, Miles and Willard, both of Flint. After his wife's death he was married, in September, 1901, to Franc C. Hives, of Colon, Mich.

Throughout the thirty-three years he lived in Flint he conducted a greenhouse and truck garden. He was for twenty-six years a superintendent of the Methodist Sunday school and was a charter member of the Garland Street M. E. church. Besides the widow and two sons, he leaves a sister, Mrs. Philena Gilbert, of Swartz Creek, and four grandchildren. Six years ago he removed to Colon, but returned to Flint two weeks before his death.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Easter brought an enormous volume of business to the Great Central Market, but a not wholly satisfactory business. While the money value of sales, as a whole, was probably slightly in excess of any previous year, the quantity of stock handled was at least half again as great as was required to produce practically the same money last year.

It is the consensus of opinion that the only thing which interfered with the Easter program was the excessively hot weather for the week preceding, and it also may be said that the one thing which saved the market from utter submersion was that the fine, bright, warm weather held out for March 26 and Easter itself.

For an entire week preceding Easter the temperature was far above normal, ranging up to 80 degrees March 24. The result was a tremendous increase in the quantity of stock shoved into the market in the later days of the week. The weather also was responsible for the deterioration in the quality of the stock. Not only was the market choked with stock, but a large proportion was of unsatisfactory quality. Roses were soft and open and carnations in many cases arrived in the market in such condition

It Pays to Push

For Business in the Spring

This is the season of large supply and fine quality—we never handled better stock than now—and the retailers who push are doing a big business, pleasing their customers and making a nice profit.

No need to worry about stock; just get the orders and call on us for all you need.

The way to do business is to have something to sell.

Make a showing.

Prices are down.

KILLARNEY

Our Killarneys are in a class by themselves, whatever the length you use buds better, length for length of stem, than any other house can supply. While we have the extra special for all who want them, the bulk of our large Spring crop grades as select and specials—the length all stores use in quantity.

Also strong on Richmond, Bride, Maid and all other roses—fine stock in any quantity.

SWEET PEAS

We have an immense supply of Sweet Peas—grown by specialists. Can fill orders for 1000 or 10,000 all out of one lot, and you know the advantage of that—they're all good. No Peas on this market to compare with our "fancy" grade.

CARNATIONS

We are in heavy crop—we can fill large orders and many of them. There are no better carnations anywhere than our "select, large and fancy," but if your trade requires the "common" grade (ours are as good as some houses ship as fancy), we can take care of you. Let us know what you can use—we do the rest.

Lilies

You always can get Lilies here—the best Lilies in this market—all true giganteums—just the right kind of stock for the retailers to handle as cut flowers—they will average about 3 flowers to the stalk. Just the thing for funeral sprays, also fine for church decorations for spring weddings. Plenty of Callas at low prices.

Bulb Stock

All bulb stock in quantity; Tulips, in yellow, white and pink (Novelty); choice Jonquils and Daffodils.

Green Goods

Smilax, nice, long strings. Also the popular green, Mexican Ivy, of choice quality. The best ferns in the market.

that nothing remained but to fee the garbage man. The same was more or less true of violets. Early in the week the Hudson river stock was in fair shape, but after the hot wave struck, extremely few violets were of satisfactory quality. The locally grown daffodils and jonquils also showed the effect of the hot weather in their keeping quality, while the southern stock in many cases withered in transit. In one instance 110,000 southern jonquils were dumped on arrival. These are merely instances of what 80 degrees in the shade will do to the flower business in March. Another phase of the situation is the large number of claims for rebate which have since been made on the wholesalers. It simply was an impossibility that stock should travel as well as it would have done with normal temperatures, which would have meant frost every night last week instead of a minimum around 60 degrees. Many a letter has reached the market this week reporting: "You always have sent me good stock, but this time you failed me." Some of them put it a lot stronger than that. But the fact is the wholesaler was in no way responsible. The weather did it; nothing else.

With such an enormous supply and such a tremendous volume of sales, there is hardly anything which can be said of the market conditions which did not have its exception in one or more houses. Summing up the situation briefly, it is something like this:

There was an abundance of stock in every line. Lilies sufficed to meet every demand and there were a few which were carried over to this week. Prices held up quite well until Saturday afternoon, when it became apparent that there would be difficulty in clearing out. Saturday evening and Sunday morning the street salesmen were offering lilies on the curb at 10 cents per flower.

Roses of all varieties, including Beauties, proved excessively overabundant; the hot weather increased the supply to such an extent that some houses say they had twice as many roses as they expected. It is seldom at a holiday that the supply in any line becomes so heavy that it depresses prices until after the big rush of shipping trade is out, but this time the rose supply was so heavy that the wholesalers in practically every instance gave the out-of-town buyers the benefit right from the start. The man who ordered 6-cent roses was charged 6 cents, but he got the roses that the wholesaler had expected to send to the man who ordered 8-cent roses. Probably it is somewhere near the fact that roses this year brought two-thirds the price they did last season, when Easter was fifteen days later; some houses say the price was not much more than half last year's price, and certainly some big bargains were to be had Saturday evening and Sunday morning.

Carnations held their own better than any other line. The supply could not be called short, but the quality of a large proportion of the stock was so poor that good carnations maintained themselves pretty close to listed prices, white being especially firm. While the bulk of the good stock was sold at from 3 cents to 5 cents, there were many thousands which were well sold at $7.50 per thousand. Seldom if ever have there been so many splits at Easter; also, the proportion of sleepy stock was large and many consignments were received in such condition that no bid could be secured. Bulbous stock fared even worse than roses. There were enormous quantities of daffodils, jonquils and tulips, especially white. These had to contend with the outdoor jonquils, both from Virginia and southern Illinois. The southern Illinois stock, which does not at all compare with the Virginia narcissi, was so extremely abundant that South Water street received hundreds of cases which were sold to the grocery trade at such prices that the flowers were retailed at 5 cents per dozen. Under the circumstances the wholesale florists were in no position to refuse any reasonable offer for this class of stock, and large quantities were dumped because the keeping quality was seriously affected by the heat. After twenty-four hours in an express car, with the temperature above 80 degrees, violets were what one naturally would expect under the circumstances.

Previously violets had been quite fair and some of the leading retail stores had thought this would be an Easter when they could do a big business with violets at moderate prices, but with good profit. They had booked considerable business and found themselves up against it, for there were really no first-class violets to be had. The result was that the few acceptable violets brought fair prices, while the balance of the stock had scarcely any value at all. No sidewalk vender could name a price so low that the wholesaler would not bring out a box of violets he was willing to exchange for the money mentioned. While 50 to 75 cents per hundred was easily obtained for anything a first-class store dared send to a good customer, the bulk of the receipts were sold around $1.50 per thousand, with many as low as $1 per thousand and quantities for which no offer could be obtained. Easter marks the end of the violet season for sure, unless cool weather comes quickly. The singles already are gone.

Sweet peas largely took the place of violets. Many of the houses had them in enormous quantity and with those who make the sweet pea a specialty the quality was excellent. Of course, the hot weather hurt, as it did with all other flowers, but the long, fancy peas sold in lots of 5,000 and 10,000 to those who have at other seasons used violets in quantity. The stores, however, will have nothing to do with the short-stemmed peas; they brought the same low prices as in the past.

Easter brought no special call for greens, though smilax is in request, the supply being light.

This week opened with no excessive supply, but with extremely light business, the number of cancellations of standing orders indicating that a good many buyers either had something left from Easter or had large local supplies. The light receipts Monday were simply because growers had become fatigued with the heavy picking last week. Tuesday and Wednesday once more saw enormous receipts. The abundance of lilies shows that not all the growers got them in for Easter, even with the aid of the heat wave. Prices on all flowers are down to where it is a buyer's market. Roses are especially good value.

Easter at Retail.

There is some variation in the reports of the retailers, but in general they had a first-class Easter. The leading stores say that the buying did not begin as early as usual, and when this is the case it precludes any new records. Practically all the stores had stocked heavily of plants, and when the rush began effort was centered on moving the plants, so that the cut flower sales were secondary. Some of them say they could have used more lilies, but they apparently did not realize the need until late, for there was no time up to Sunday noon, when wholesalers began closing, when lilies were not to be had. Most of the stores cleaned out of all their moderate priced plants. Some had large azaleas and large pans of lilies which they did not sell.

Saturday afternoon was warm as summer and Easter was so fine that the people were on the streets all day. It was the salvation of the Easter business. Not only did it bring a big run of business to the retailers, cleaning them up, but it gave the wholesalers a chance Sunday morning to clean out great quantities of flowers that otherwise would have gone to the dump.

Various Notes.

O. P. Bassett and Mrs. Imogene Dickerson were married at Santa Barbara, Cal., March 21. Mr. Bassett's bride is the widow of Charles Dickerson, formerly a widely known hat manufacturer at Detroit.

Carl N. Thomas went to West Springfield, Pa., March 28, to spend the summer. He has had a busy winter on the selling floor of the A. L. Randall Co.

C. W. McKellar says the Virginia narcissi are selling quite well, considering the general state of the market. Recently he has sent out several lots of from 5,000 to 10,000 for special sales purposes.

Harrison Kennicott, well known in the flower market, is one of the inspectors for the Illinois State Food Commission which has been rounding up the grocers who sell oleo as butter.

Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard Co., is on the Pacific coast, making his annual trip.

The wholesalers put in full time last week, working far into the night March 25. E. C. Amling's force did not go home at all that night.

Emil Buettner returned a few days before Easter from a month's trip to California.

Henry Van Gelder says that the first five days last week exceeded the sales of any seven days since the Percy Jones business was established.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. had a tremendous Easter. March 24 and 25 there were twenty-five people in the store sorting, counting and packing, the regular staff being reinforced by men from the greenhouses, led by August and Adolph Poehlmann. Mons Olson was sick all week, and had not reported for duty at the beginning of this week.

Andrew Miller, at one time one of the best known florists in Chicago, but now for some years a sleeping-car conductor, spent last week in John Mangel's store. Ten years ago Mr. Miller and Charles Schneider, doing business as the Central Floral Co., in Central Music Hall, where Marshall Field's store now stands, did an extremely large cut flower trade.

Bert Budlong and some of the greenhouse men spent several days last week helping out during the rush at J. A. Budlong's.

E. F. Winterson says he never saw so large a volume of business as last week, the rush extending to all departments of his horticultural emporium.

Miss Hertha Tonner, who has a pros-

There even are ardisias, relics of Christmas, in one Wabash avenue retail window.

E. C. Amling says the southern Illinois season is fifteen days late this year, and only a few days ahead of Oak Park, where he does his gardening.

Kyle & Foerster say that Easter exceeded their hopes, bringing in a considerable number of customers with whom they had not before done business.

George Hartung, in Kensington, says he closed out of every blooming plant.

At E. H. Hunt's they say the spring season in supplies has been by far the heaviest ever known. The travelers are again taking to the road.

says the wholesalers ought to do something to square themselves with the weather man. At Christmas the big blizzard cut off a lot of perfectly good business and at Easter the warm sun caused the cancellation in whole or in part of some big advance orders.

F. F. Benthey, oldest of the wholesalers, says that never in his experience has he seen as much stock for Easter as this year.

W. J. Pilcher returned to St. Louis March 28, after an Easter visit with his friends here.

Hans Tobler, of Traverse City, Mich., is a visitor.

DAYTON, OHIO.

The Market.

Three weeks of ideal spring weather, an abundance of stock and an unceasing demand, linked together, make it possible for the Dayton florists to report that Easter trade this year was the best they have ever experienced. We could not have asked for better weather. There was plenty of nice, warm sunshine to coax the buds along and to enable people to get out and buy. With such weather conditions, it was unnecessary to do much packing, as plants could be sent out open; consequently much time was saved in this way.

Stock arrived in a way that was satisfactory to all. While there was a generous supply, still there was not enough to exceed the demand. There were lilies by the thousands, but none went begging. Callas were not quite so plentiful and were easily disposed of. The rose supply was heavier than it has been in some time, and yet there was not nearly enough to go around. Carnations—and everything looking like one, even buds—disappeared as rapidly as they were produced. The supply of hyacinths, narcissi, tulips, daffodils, valley and all bulbous stock was heavy; nevertheless, there was but a small portion that got a chance to spoil. Prices were good.

One could not help but feel the early approach of Easter. Especially was this true of the wholesaler, as plant orders poured in rapidly, and he was busy disposing of his pot lilies while the plants were yet in bud. The pot plant orders increased rapidly, until it was necessary to shut down on them, as the cut flower orders were pushing in so fast that it was impossible to give both the proper attention. All report that they are pretty well tired out, and were glad when the rush was over.

The week has started in excellently, especially with the wholesaler, perhaps because everyone was cleaned out of stock and the retailer has to lay in a fresh supply.

Business throughout the month of March was most satisfactory, according to all reports, and the weather suited well.

Various Notes.

The Heiss Co. reports last week's business to be the "best ever," as everything was cleaned out and there was barely enough to go around. This firm's stock was all in fine condition for Easter. "You cannot give too good a report on the Easter trade for us. It was the best we ever experienced; just a steady stream of customers coming in, while stock rapidly disappeared. We are more than pleased." Such is the report of H. H. Ritter.

"Easter week, beyond a doubt, was the best week we have ever had since being in business," is the report of the Miami

Floral Co. Everything resembling a flower was cleaned out. They had a large and fine supply of bulbous stock, azaleas, spiræas and ferns, all of which they sold out. The 30,000 lilies, which were all in fine shape for Easter, went like hot cakes. They were kept busy night and day, packing orders and making deliveries. And, now that the Easter rush is over, they are up to their necks in building. Five new houses, 24x33, are in course of construction, besides a concrete boiler-room and cellar.

Walter Horlacher found business in his part of town to be best on cut flowers, especially tulips, hyacinths, daffodils and all bulbous stock. He says there was not so great a demand for made-up baskets this season as in other years, and small plants seemed to be in greater demand than the larger ones.

Mrs. E. Young reports that up to Friday stock did not move with unusual rapidity, but long before closing time on Saturday night everything she could scrape up was sold out.

"Haven't had such a busy week in a long time," is Mrs. Hendrich's report. She is more than satisfied with results.

M. & L. Johnson and Miss Olive Ritter voice the sentiments of the rest when giving a report on Easter trade.

Visitors were: Gustav Schneider, of Springfield, O.; George Gause, of Richmond, Ind.; Henry Behrens, Sr., of Middletown, O.; Mr. Peters, of the Peters & Reed Pottery Co., Zanesville, O.

The Market

The market is in a condition which offers splendid opportunities to anyone buying cut flowers, particularly who is in a position to buy in quantity. Flowers in a general way are of good quality for this season of the year, and at market quotations we believe values are excellent.

Beauties

The Best, $4.00 per doz. The supply will be increasing from now on. You will find our Beauties of good quality, as good as any coming to this market. For a spring crop we consider them exceptionally fine.

Pink and White Killarneys

We do not think that you will find a better grade of Killarney, particularly in pink, in this market, than we are offering. Our growers are cutting a heavy crop, and we have quantities to select from.

Splendid values at $8.00 to $12.00 per 100. Extra select, $15.00 per 100.

Carnations

Our stock grades high, and in stock of that grade we can give you best values. We can recommend to you, strongly, our $3.00 Carnations; we know that they will please you. We have fairly good stock as low as $1.50 per 100.

Easter Lilies

$12.00 per 100.

Snapdragon

$1.00 to $1.50 per doz.

Sweet Peas

All colors, in any quantity, 75c and $1.00 per 100.

Pansies

All bright and cheerful colors, put up in neat bunches, $5.00 per 100 bunches.

Daisies

White and Yellow,
$1.50 and $2.00 per 100.

Southern Daffodils

$7.50 per 1000.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Easter Plant Market.

A whole week of balmy, springlike weather, bright, clear skies, warm sunshine, and nights that were never cool enough to be cold, preceded Easter Sunday. Such a week of favorable weather could scarcely have been hoped for had Easter come at the end of April, instead of at the end of March. The benefit to the immense stock of blooming plants intended for Easter was enormous. Plants that would have been late under dark skies came in nicely; plant lovers that would have stayed home came out strongly. The combination meant a most prosperous Easter.

The volume of business in Easter plants was fully equal to the record-breaking season of 1909. The shipping business was probably larger; the local business in certain sections of the city was undoubtedly larger; in other sections, owing possibly to the labor disturbances, it was not so large. A complete sweep in so large a market under such extraordinarily favorable productive conditions is impossible. There was more stock left than usual; some of it was poor and some of it unripe. The market grows more critical year by year.

The shipping of Easter plants, a most important part of the business, was handled under such favorable conditions that the combination of superlatively fine stock and skilled packing was seen at its best. Less wrapping was required, and there were no regrets that cases to go to more distant points had not received extra covering. It is safe to say that the stock sent out reflected credit on this city. The department stores dealt heavily in plants, mainly lilies and azaleas. These sales broaden the market, but unfortunately are not on a profitable basis for the merchants.

It had been confidently predicted that good lilies would be scarce, owing to the shorts and tardies. They were scarce up to Thursday, the warmest day of the seven. Then they came in with a rush, creating a surplus everywhere. The few flowered plants, one, two and three to a stem, were promptly cut and unloaded on an already weak cut flower market, causing a sharp break. The finest lilies brought $15; $12.50 was the standard market price, while shorts and odd lots went at $10.

Azaleas were probably the most popular plants in the market. The Indian type ruled. Hinodegiri lost ground, while mollis, though showy, was used in limited quantities. The Charles Encke type continued popular in baskets. In spiræas, Gladstone was easily first; the pink Queen Alexandra was generally poor. The Hollanders have so divided the clumps to work up stock, that they produce few flowers. When clumps can be sent out that will bring eight to ten flowers, this spiræa will grow in favor.

The greatest improvement in the list is in roses. The Crimson Rambler class has quite set its leader in the shade, popular taste turning to the pinks, Newport Fairy, Tausendschon, Hiawatha, Dorothy Perkins and Lady Gay, aptly described as a glorified Dorothy Perkins, making up a charming assortment. Highly prized as specimens and in basket combinations, Baby Rambler has become a standard Easter plant. Among the hybrid tea roses, Richmond was usually first, its freedom of bloom, superb color and fragrance being unrivaled.

Rhododendrons, high in price and limited in quantity, had strong support, the well-grown stock cleaning up quickly. Hydrangeas were later than usual, much of the stock lacking finish. Alice blue was prominent. Lilacs proved popular. Deutzia gracilis, August potted, was a favorite. Genistas gained ground. Too many growers have dropped this leading yellow. In its class, Bougainvillea Sanderiana is the only thing. Hyacinths in pans led in the bulbous flowers, much of the stock being extra good. Single tulips opened too easily. Double tulips and daffs had many friends among the smaller buyers. Daffodils realized far lower prices than the week before, the price steadily falling with the approach of Easter.

The novelty class brought out pretty

European-grown dwarf apples, beautifully flowered; also peaches. These did not prove favorites; they are appreciated in Japan, where the people are a thousand years ahead. The average Anglo-American appreciates the substantial rather than the dainty, preferring the solid joy of pork pie rather than the ethereal beauty of dwarf apples and peaches. Japanese hydrangeas were also a novelty.

The displays of plants and flowers in the churches and in the cemeteries Easter morning were gorgeous.

The Rising Eastern Market.

It is probable that the cut flower market has seen the greatest Easter in its history, yet it is by no means unmixed joy. The warm weather, especially on Thursday, the great shipping day, increased the difficulty of getting flowers to their destination in good condition. The holding back of carnations especially so, as they could not be had when prices were good, and could not be sold, owing to their condition and a weak market, later; the Friday break in lilies, due to the load unexpectedly dumped on the market by the plantmen, and the usual weakening of the market Saturday, when everybody had all he could do to deliver his plants and flower orders—these were the sorrows.

The volume of business was the largest the city has known. The shipping increased; prices advanced on the limited quantity of fancy stock, but averaged lower, medium and short grades bringing less than in former years, while the percentage of loss was probably greater. Violets were the strong features of the market. Extra select doubles and fancy long-stemmed singles were sold at from $1 to $1.50. The consumption of the former was enormous, the latter limited by production. Ordinary doubles and small singles did not sell so well. Sweet peas were used in immense numbers, at from $1 to $1.25 per hundred, bright pink and lavender leading.

Cattleyas were scarce, and in demand at $9 per dozen. Valley was plentiful, extra good selling better at the close of the market than almost anything else, at $3, $4 and $5 per hundred. Lilies went in immense quantities, Easter lilies at from $10 to $15; callas at from $12 to $20, the market weakening at the close.

Carnations were, as before said, scarce early in the week, white being most in demand up to Thursday, and after that, colors. The market weakened badly here too; salting was ruinous. The stock held would have brought good money early in the week.

Beauties were a shade more plentiful than expected, but the general result was all right, because the surplus Beauties were not up to shipping requirements. They were poor and sold below market prices, which were $6 to $7.50 per dozen. Mediums were scarce; shorts plentiful. Richmond sold well, also fancy Killarney; ordinary tea roses hung fire. Pansies were in great demand. Snaps were much used, a wide range of prices being noted.

Greens were in extraordinary demand, plumosus leading. The short supply of smilax brought the most extraordinary prices, $20 to $25 being paid for light strings. Wild smilax was not in demand. Gardenias were brisk.

A curious incident at the close of the market was the stinging of the fakers, who bought freely of carnations and other flowers, only to see the public turn to plants.

Since Easter.

There has been a drop in prices since Easter, a fair shipping and local business calling for considerable fancy stock at about one-third of Easter prices (see listed quotations).

Easter in Philadelphia.

The spirit of the Easter season took a firmer hold on the Quaker City than ever before. The soft, springlike weather, suggestive of nature bursting forth into leaf and flower, brought out a warm response in the hearts of the people chilled by a long winter. Everywhere Easter was welcomed; the store windows in the shopping district were gay with Easter baskets of hydrangeas, spiræas, hyacinths, tulips and daffodils, all trimmed with chic, bright ribbon bows. The florists' shops were ablaze with glorious color; the best in nature and art were combined to please the cultivated taste.

These are a few of the many pretty things in the shop windows:

A specimen pink azalea of show-like size and beauty adorned one window of Robert Kift's store, finished off with an immense blue bow (a Parisian adoption). This central figure was set off, as the play says, by lords, ladies in attendance or minor floral personages. The street view through the store was an effect in white, dazzlingly beautiful.

Frank Polites had the happy inspiration of filling an orange-colored basket with an Otaheite orange plant. It was strikingly pretty.

H. H. Battles favored the natural pottery of light hue, having many spring plants in pottery of this sort. Pink and yellow heather were noticed as being particularly novel and attractive.

Miniature clay barrels, each filled with a blooming plant, were seen in the store windows of Robert Crawford, Jr.

George Craig effectively used light blue ribbon with pink flowering plants. The combination was sure to make one stop and take notice.

Birch bark baskets, long-handled and spiræa-filled, were a feature at Charles Henry Fox's Sign of the Rose.

A magnificent specimen of Bougainvil-lea Sanderiana, dressed in lavender-purple, so to speak, to match, was one of the floral triumphs of the Bellevue-Stratford window of J. J. Habermehl's Sons.

There were many more bits of floral art, planned and executed by our leading artists, working in harmony with the most fastidious flower lovers, but these few pretty pictures, poorly described, must suffice.

Hardy Perennials.

The frames were full of 2½-inch pots, with little green showing, the plants in more or less advanced stages and here and there a flower of golden yellow adonis or early primrose to show that spring had really come. Row after row of these frames gave an idea of vastness, clearly marking the extent to which the growing of hardy perennials has advanced in the Dreer nurseries, at Riverton. Since the fact has been established that transplanting can be more safely and satisfactorily accomplished from pots than from the open ground, that method is employed in nearly all varieties. The evenness of each variety bore silent but eloquent testimony to the thoroughness of the work; there were few tardy ones and scarcely an absentee as frame after frame was passed. The real kernel of the success of this plan at Dreer's lies in the impossibility of controlling weather conditions. An order comes just after the plants have started into active growth, root action is checked and it may be that the entire season passes before vigor is regained; or, if the order is too late, heavy losses may result. The pot system practically avoids danger; it increases expense to the grower, but not in proportion to the enormous increase in satisfaction to the customer, who gets what he wants and the results are not disappointing.

Various Notes.

Robert Craig says Easter was fully up to last year, the record-breaker.

N. D. Gachor, for twenty-eight years proprietor of the flower stand in Broad Street station, will retire March 31.

The shops are bright this week with pansies for window gardens; Fred J. Michell, Jr., says that the enormous size of much of the stock is due to their improved giant strain.

George Craig had the largest Easter in his long, successful career.

The Market.

Easter week turned out all that could be desired. From all accounts of the leading west end florists, it was somewhat better than last year. The increasing demand was for blooming plants, and they say that it was fully fifty per cent better than last year. The reports, of those who handled mostly cut flowers, were that they did much better than last year. The local florists were fortunate in having the best weather in years all through the month of March, which has been warm and clear. This helped lilies, which it was feared would be scarce, but everybody had plenty and the sale on these was larger than in any previous years, the churches using the largest number. Other plants that had strong demand were azaleas, hydrangeas, Dutch hyacinths, tulips and cinerarias. The greenhouse men say that church decorations were larger than last year, and kept them busy all the week.

The wholesalers had plenty of stock of all kinds and were kept busy with both shipping and local demand. They say the only scarcity was in violets and the warm weather put a stop to them. Great quantities of cut lilies were sold at $15 per hundred. There were plenty of extra fine sweet peas in the market and they cleaned up Saturday and Sunday morning.

All varieties of roses sold well and there were plenty of them. Fancy long Beauties brought $5 per dozen. Great quantities of bulbous stock came in. Lily of the valley was extra fine and cleaned up at $3 per hundred. Carnations were limited in supply and everything sold well, with the top price at $5 per hundred. Clean-up sales were reported on these Saturday.

The downtown retailers, who look mostly to cut flower trade, carried a big stock in everything and say trade was much better than they expected. Therefore, from all sides it can be safely said that this year's Easter trade was much better than in any previous year.

had a most successful season in violets and sweet peas. Other growers in Kirkwood will add considerable glass this summer.

A. Werner & Bro., at Clayton, are erecting two new houses, 32x165, for roses. They will grow Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond. This stock will be handled by the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co.

Grimm & Gorly rented a large store, next to their St. Louis avenue store, for their Easter trade, which was filled with blooming plants of all varieties and which Mr. Gorly said proved a good investment. Their Easter business was larger than ever. Their large force was busy at all times.

J. Krug & Son, at Alton, celebrated their forty-ninth anniversary in the flower business last week. At both of their stores, in the Pike building and Commercial building, 5,000 flowers were given away to those who called, many of them having been customers since the opening of their establishment forty-nine years ago.

ing in St. Louis in 1911, will meet next week to draw up an invitation to be forwarded to the secretary, and all three expect to attend this year's meeting at Denver. They say it is almost certain that St. Louis will get the 1911 meeting.

Mrs. A. Deitsch, of Alton, who has charge of J. F. Ammann's store, called Monday morning, March 28, and reported a big Easter trade.

Henry Aue had the finest lily of the valley in the market for the Easter trade. This stock was handled by C. A. Kuehn and was in big demand.

From the looks of some of the show-houses of the west end florists Monday, March 28, the plant trade this year was extra good. They were almost completely sold out of everything.

A. G. Greiner, our cactus specialist, will, from the way orders are coming in, have a great season in the sale of cactus plants. Orders for California privet will also be heavy this year.

George Windler, on Delore avenue, had a fine lot of blooming plants for Easter. The bulk of this stock was handled by his brother, R. J. Windler, at 2300 South Grand avenue. Other retail stores were also supplied by Mr. Windler. His bulb plants, in all varieties, were fine this year. The weather was just right for this stock.

A. Jablonsky, at Central, Mo., had an exceptionally fine lot of Easter lilies this year, from which the trade bought heavily. C. C. Sanders, William Schray & Sons and Charles Beyer also had fine lilies this year.

The consignments of roses this Easter were fine. Those coming from J. F. Ammann, A. C. Canfield and Mr. Miller, which were consigned to C. A. Kuehn, were all of fine quality. Their consignments in these were large all of last week. Early in the week the demand was slow.

J. J. B.

Kalisch Bros., on Delmar boulevard, are well pleased with their Easter business and say they sold out clean. They had over 20,000 lilies and could have sold more, also azaleas, tulips and hyacinths, which were in good condition. Cut flowers were sold out early.

GLOVERSVILLE, N. Y.—Richard E. Loeben opened a store in the Windsor hotel for the Easter trade. After Easter he began fitting up the store for permanent use as his downtown quarters.

CINCINNATI.

Two members of the family of P. J. Olinger—Mrs. Olinger and their eleven-year-old son—were taken violently ill on the morning of March 21, and the attendant physician pronounced the cause ptomaine poisoning. The condition of both was considered critical for a time, but by 6 o'clock in the evening both were out of danger. It is thought the poisoning was due to some candy.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

Easter is over and the Rochester florists wear a "Bill Taft smile." Business was unusually good. With the single exception of greens, stock was ample for all demands. Carnations were especially plentiful; in fact, they were a little too plentiful on Saturday afternoon, some late shipments overstocking the wholesalers, but prices held firm and some special Sunday orders helped to reduce the surplus.

Various Notes.

George B. Hart said on Saturday night that the business of the week had been better than for several years, and that an extremely large quantity of cut flowers and blooming plants had been moved.

F. J. Keller, of J. B. Keller's Sons, said that their business for the week was far in advance of Easter week of 1909, and that prices had held well, with a strong demand for high-class stock.

C. H. Vick, chairman of the S. A. F. souvenir album committee, is planning to make the 1910 edition the "best ever." Mr. Vick says the publication will contain over 100 pages and include the daily program of the convention, with many views of Rochester's parks, private gardens, public buildings, residences and places of interest. In fact, it will be a valuable souvenir of the Flower City and the 1910 convention. There is an immense amount of labor connected with the souvenir.

George T. Boucher has recently doubled the capacity of his retail store and now has a desirable location in the Triangle building, with entrances on East avenue and Main street east.

The civic improvement committee of the Chamber of Commerce has arranged for a conference of experts noted for their ability in planning for the improvement of cities by the planting of trees and ornamental shrubs, and by laying out new sections for residence purposes. This conference will begin May 2 and will continue two days. Among the speakers will be Frederick Law Olmstead, of Brookline, Mass.; G. E. Hooker, secretary of the Chicago club; John Nolan, landscape architect, of Cambridge, Mass.; Sylvester Baxter, of the Boston Improvement League; Prof. J. S. Pray, of Harvard University, and Geo. E. Kessler, landscape architect, of Kansas City. Rochester is being aroused to the necessity of a city plan, and at this conference the aim will be to thoroughly discuss each phase of the subject. There will also be an exhibit of city plans and improvements at the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

E. H. Wilson, representing the Arnold Arboretum, of Boston, was in Rochester last week, and spent some time visiting the parks and residence streets. In company with Superintendents C. C. Laney and John Dunbar, Mr. Wilson visited Highland, Genesee Valley and Seneca parks, and expressed himself as greatly impressed with the beauty of Rochester's park system. In Highland park is a specimen of the Chinese Fringe, which Mr. Wilson stated was in a more flourishing condition than any he had seen in China. He also referred to the magnolias in Oxford street as the most wonderful growth of the kind he had ever seen. Mr. Wilson expects to sail for China next month and will travel through that country gathering specimens for the Arnold Arboretum. E. F. R.

Pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

G. S. CREGO, grower of the Crego aster, is the staff photographer of the Commercial Club of Portland, Ore.

H. J. RATEKIN, of the Cumberland Seed Co., Nashville, Tenn., has recently made a trip through western Tennessee and found the seed trade everywhere good.

It is figured that the high cost of living, that we hear so much about, is not doing any harm to the seed business; on the other hand, the price of beefsteak is an incentive to plant more seeds in the garden.

VISITS to the Boston seed stores last week would have convinced anyone that business was at its flood tide. Late hours have been necessary to keep abreast of the deluge of mail orders. All the houses report business as being much ahead of previous years to this date.

THE wholesale seedsmen are getting a run of fill-in orders that is unusually heavy for this date. While large orders for some of the best sellers have had to be turned down almost since the beginning of the season, the buyer almost always can be accommodated with "something just as good."

CANNERS in the middle west are finding it difficult to interest farmers in growing contracts for sweet corn and, especially, tomatoes. It takes higher prices than last season to get acreage contracts out, and the packers of tomatoes are in no position to offer increased pay for fruit;

AMMONIATED LAWN LIME

Kills Weeds—Makes Grass Grow

Applied as a light top dressing to lawns, it kills all flat leaved weeds, such as Dandelion, Daisy, Plantain, Sorrel, Chickweed, Moss, etc., in 48 hours and without other fertilizer produces a wonderful, luxuriant, rich green growth of lawn grass—which is distinctly noticeable 50 feet away.

The use of Ammoniated Lawn Lime supersedes hand weeding of lawns, putting greens, etc. It saves the grass from being pulled up and in many cases ruined. Grasses take a new, vigorous growth, avoiding probable trouble in future.

Quantities: If very weedy, 1 lb. to 40 sq. ft.; 25 lbs. to 1000 sq. ft. (20 x 50). Half to one-quarter amount if moderately weedy.

Absolutely Guaranteed

Money Refunded if Not Satisfactory

"NOT HOW CHEAP—
BUT HOW GOOD"

ANY business is a good business, but how good depends on the man. If you are a grower and want a good business, you must be a producer of the very best flowers; and to produce the very best flowers in lilies, you must positively have the best bulbs. These bulbs, furthermore, must receive your best care and attention. Whether you buy from us or not, always buy the best you can get in lily bulbs, because bulbs of doubtful origin are very dangerous to handle if you are in business to make money. W. W. JOHNSON & SON, Ltd.
BOSTON, ENGLAND

there has been little if any profit in canning tomatoes the last two seasons.

THE growers in Michigan and Wisconsin are gradually acquiring the necessary pea and bean acreage, but it is costing more than it has in any recent year.

THE onion-set season bids fair to close with a weak market, a condition, moreover, that does not assist the men whose interest some time ago was in large measure transferred to the 1910 crop.

THE mail-order seed trade has had an excellent March. The unseasonably warm weather that was general over the whole country during the week preceding Easter brought a perfect avalanche of orders from people who were in a hurry for their seeds. Counter trade also ran ahead of usual records because of the early arrival of spring in many important seed buying districts.

MR. HICKEY, manager of the Barteldes Seed Co., Oklahoma City, Okla., states that the rush of business is unprecedented; seasonable weather for seed-sowing is causing heavy demands along all lines of seeds. Shortages are few and scarcely noticeable, and the entire force of the company is in the midst of a daily and continuous rush to keep up with the orders which are pouring in with every mail.

THE Northern Wisconsin Seed Co., Sturgeon Bay, Wis., with an authorized capital of $25,000, has been incorporated under the laws of the state of Wisconsin. The company will make a specialty of growing seed peas and considerable acreage has already been contracted for in Wisconsin and Michigan, in which latter state the company has likewise filed articles to do business. The executive officers of the company are Carl E. Dreutzer, president, and Ralph W. Crary, vice-president.

W. ATLEE BURPEE said, March 23, that it has long been the custom of his house to complete the office work on all orders the day they are received, then to have every order executed and dispatched the day following. There was, however, such an influx of extra orders during the second and third weeks of March, working with 247 employees, that they were unable to avoid falling a little behind and Mr. Burpee found they would continue to be two or three days late in filling orders during the next week or ten days. He says that next season, even with a corresponding increase, he will be able to handle the business with his usual promptness, as he will then have all the property north to Buttonwood street fitted up for the mail order trade.

SECRET COMMISSIONS.

In England the giving of commissions to those authorized to make purchases for their employers became so common a practice that in 1906 a law was passed known as the Prevention of Corruption Act, prescribing severe penalties for those who violate its provisions. It was

SPECIAL GLADIOLUS OFFER

Gladiolus America

AMERICA

A few points of merit—Color: A beautiful soft flesh pink, very light and much like "Enchantress" Carnation, except slightly tinged with lavender. Size: Growth very strong and healthy, producing beautiful dark green foliage, and strong, erect spikes of the largest flowers. Purposes: For florists' use its color makes it everything to be desired; delicate, attractive and absolutely new. It is most desirable for planting in beds in parks, private estates, etc.

AMERICA. The best commercial pink in existence. 1st size bulbs, 100, $4.00; 1000, $30.00; 5000, $125.00.

ATTRACTION. Deep, dark, rich crimson with a very conspicuous large pure white center and throat. At once a most beautiful and attractive sort, 100, $4.00; 1000, $35.00.

AUGUSTA. Lovely pure white with blue anthers, 1½ to 2½ inches. 100, $2.25; 1000, $20.00; 5000, $90.00.

BLUE JAY (Baron Hulot). The finest blue Gladiolus yet seen. It is a rich deep color of indigo shade. The only real blue Gladiolus on the market. 100, $9.00; 1000, $75.00.

BRENCHLEYENSIS. Extra fine red variety, 1½ to 2½ inches. 100, $1.50; 1000, $12.00; 5000, $55.00.

COLUMBIA. Light orange scarlet, freely blotched and penciled with bluish-purple. Throat freely mottled. 100, $2.00; 1000, $15.00; 5000, $70.00.

CERES. Pure white, spotted with purplish rose. 100, $1.50; 1000, $12.00; 5000, $55.00.

MAY. A lovely pure white flower, finely flaked, bright rosy crimson. 100, $2.00; 1000, $15.00; 5000, $70.00.

NEZINSCOTT. Bright blood scarlet, with deep velvety crimson black blotches and white mottlings in throat. 100, $4.00; 1000, $30.00; 5000, $145.00.

PRINCEPS. Rich crimson with very deep shadings in the throat and broad blotches on lower petals. 100, $10.00.

SALEM. Fine salmon-pink, maroon blotches. 100, $6.00; 1000, $40.00.

SULPHUR KING. The finest yellow Gladiolus. 100, $15.00; 1000, $140.00.

made illegal for a seller to give any money commission or present of any character whatsoever to the employee making purchases. The act applied to all lines of business and it was expected that it would put an end to the giving of commissions or presents to gardeners, but it soon was found that there were ways of evading this as well as other laws. At length the evasion reached the point where those houses desiring to obey the law found it necessary to organize for the prosecution of violations. The Horticultural Traders' Association is a member of the prosecuting league and recently the newspapers have chronicled some interesting legal proceedings for the enforcement of the law. Nearly always such a case presents its humorous features. For instance, it recently developed in court that when a traveler for a certain seed house turned in an order for an insecticide called by the name of the house, there being no such insecticide on the market, a case of Scotch whiskey was sent.

not as yet appeared in the United States. It is spread by using affected potatoes for seed, and, as this country imports considerable quantities of potatoes every year, there is danger that it may be introduced.

The United States Department of Agriculture has recently issued a circular for free distribution giving a brief account of this disease.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Easter of 1910 can go on record as having been a green one, for the summer-like weather which prevailed the whole week previous transformed the lawns into a beautiful green carpet; more than that, it rushed in stock, both cut flowers and pot plants, in great quantities; and when we consider that practically all stock was sold by Easter noon it can be reported that business was fine. In cut flowers, next to lilies the greatest demand was for the always more popular carnation. The good grades in this line found a ready sale, while the pickled stock and poorer grades were sold for what was offered, or landed on the dump. It might be mentioned here that the extreme heat of the middle of the week showed its effect most distinctly on Enchantress, turning the outer petals pale. Roses were in good supply and cleaned up, but did not enjoy the popularity of former years. More violets and lily of the valley could have been disposed of at good prices. The long-stemmed sweet peas moved more quickly than the shorter-stemmed ones. Long Beauties were none too plentiful, as was the case with cut and pot Easter lilies.

The demand for pot plants was brisk and all good stock was quickly disposed of.

The only article which was scarce, and which has been so ever since St. Patrick's day, was white carnations; good ones brought $5 per hundred straight through. Last year it was just the reverse. Bulbous stock, with the exception of light colored tulips, was also cleaned up.

While the warm weather was somewhat previous from the growers' point of view, it proved to be ideal for the retail sales and for deliveries for the Easter trade.

Various Notes.

Robert Zepnick says that he is well satisfied with Easter trade. Several good church decorations were executed, while pot plants sold well. A large lot of hyacinths in pans seemed to appeal most to his trade.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. reports handling more stock of all kinds than in any former season. Shipping trade was fine, and anything showing color in pot plants was cleaned up several days previous to Easter.

The Edlefsen-Leidiger Co. says that this year's Easter business was a record-breaker; it necessitated working Friday and Saturday nights. The volume of business at the Third street branch ran away ahead of expectations, with enough stock in all lines.

The East Side Floral Co. had all that could be handled and was more than pleased with Easter trade. Sweet peas and lilies were the long suit in cut flowers. Here also plants sold well.

William Zimmermann says that Easter business was satisfactory and fully up to last year. He doubled his working force for the occasion.

A. Groth, of North Milwaukee, is supplying this market with carnations of fancy quality these days. His Enchantress are exceptionally fine.

C. C. Pollworth Co. says it was fully as good as any other Easter. Their business has been excellent all season.

popular variety, but Golden Self-Blanching and Giant Pascal are now considered better by many of the larger growers.

Celery likes low, moist ground, that is quite rich and soft. Peat beds and river bottom land are used a great deal, but a loose, soft soil, where irrigated, is excellent. The plants should be placed about eight inches apart in the rows. Some growers plant two rows almost close together, breaking joints or zigzagging, so that the plants in one row alternate with those in the other.

H. G.

CLUB-FOOTED CABBAGE PLANTS.

I have had a great deal of trouble in the last two years with my cabbage plants. They are club-footed, or head at the roots, as the farmers say. Can you tell me what makes them grow in that way, and what I can do to the ground that I sow the seed in so as to prevent the trouble? I grow a good many plants for the market and I had to throw away a great many plants last year. Would lime be good, worked into the ground some time before sowing the seed?

S. P.

Yes, lime would help somewhat, but a far better way is to get some clean, fresh, new soil that does not need the lime. It takes only a small quantity of soil to plant the seed in and not any great quantity to transplant into. There is but slight expense or trouble, therefore, in going to a piece of sod and getting some of the finest soil obtainable by sifting it out. Cabbages should be transplanted as soon as they are up and the seed should be planted in different batches, so as not to come up all at once. It is high time for early cabbage seed to be planted.

LIME FOR SOUR LAND.

I have two acres of black loam land that is cool and sour, on account of a spring which is at the edge of the tract. I have brought the water in the spring down to two feet below the surface, by means of an open ditch which I dug last fall. Please tell me how much lime will be needed to cure the land of sourness, so it will grow a first-class crop of celery and cauliflower. Would salt be of any benefit? If so, how much should be used? There is plenty of stable manure on the ground now.

J. M.

Lime is a valuable manure, for some one or more of its salts enter into the composition of every vegetable. Some specimens of lime, however, contain an excessively large proportion of magnesia, which, absorbing carbonic acid too slowly, remains in a caustic state, to the injury of the roots of the plants, and the diminution of benefit from the carbonic acid evolved by the decomposing constituents of the soil. Thus, peat and bog earth are beneficial to the plants grown upon them by their containing gallic acid and other acids, which lime removes.

For sour, boggy soil, sixty-five to seventy bushels per acre is a sufficient quantity. An excellent manure is formed by mixing one bushel of salt with every two bushels of lime.

Lime cannot be applied too fresh from the kiln, for if allowed to absorb carbonic acid from the air, it is rapidly converted into chalk.

The Market.

Spring is in evidence on all sides, and a couple of weeks of bright weather have wrought wonders with flowers. While it was beneficial to general stock, it forced the bulbous stock along too rapidly and almost put the single violets out of commission, but the doubles are holding out nicely. Easter lilies seem to be in sufficient quantities, and quality is unexcelled. Carnations are plentiful. Roses are exciting themselves. Carnot and Kaiserin are in first crop and as choice as usual. Azaleas, rhododendrons, cyclamens, lilies, rambles and hyacinths are the prevailing pot plants.

Various Notes.

Window arrangements are particularly striking. Martin & Forbes' consists of hydrangeas, lilies and azaleas, also cut flowers arranged artistically, including a center of miniature yellow chrysanthemums. The window of Clarke Bros. contains a magnolia cross of gold, banked with lilies in one corner and baby rambles and Azalea mollis in the other, with a large arrangement of lilies in the center, with the view of the store from the street unobstructed. Tonseth's window is a pond with live ducks and landscape effect on one side, while the other is a general effect of plants and flowers. Max Smith's window is banked with lilies, rhododendrons and azaleas, while the store is attractive with basket and plant arrangements.

L. O. Beery & Son, of the Bay Tree Nursery Co., San Francisco, have opened a branch office at Union and Alberta streets, with a full line of imported plants and trees, doing a general retail and wholesale business.

J. R. Fotheringham, of F. R. Pierson Co., was here recently, and A. McAdams, the veteran retailer of Chicago, spent a few days in the city. J. J. Soper, of Rockford, Ill., paid his respects to the trade here last week. He is investigating the fruit-raising districts, preparatory to locating here. F. Goodfriend, of Wertheimer & Co., dropped in with a line of ribbons and accessories.

James Forbes has taken over the range of Charles Street, at Clackamas, and will equip it with the latest improvements. Location and facilities make it an ideal spot for flower production. E. R. C.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The favorable weather of several weeks' standing has given place to copious downpours of rain and therefore the absence of crowds of flower lovers on the sidewalks. Shipping trade has been better than usual and all the dealers who cater to that line have had their hands well filled. Easter lilies were good and cheap. Potted stock cost the stores from $3 to $6 per dozen and cut flowers from $2.50 to $4 per dozen. There was an abundance of stock. It was hard to quote prices on carnations or roses. Both these articles could be purchased for almost any price the shopkeeper wished to pay. This made it convenient for the churches and other large buyers of flowers, but it meant little money for the florists.

Outside bulbous stock is gradually getting scarcer and is stiffening in price. Violets are almost over for the season and it is just as well, as those brought into town for the last few weeks have been both weak of stem and poor of color. Valley has moved well recently, but tulips continue to be a drug in the market. All sorts of wild flowers and fruit blossoms have struck the popular fancy and are being used largely in decorations, to the exclusion of higher priced stock.

Funeral orders have kept several of the retailers busy during the last week, but, as remarked before, the general state of trade is quiet and everyone is hoping that at the end of the week there may be a good clean-up.

Various Notes.

C. F. Eltzholtz, representing the Charles H. Lilly Co., of Portland, Ore., was in town interviewing the local dealers.

Fred. J. Higgins, formerly with Clarke Bros., has accepted a position with Gill's Floral Depot, Oakland.

M. H. Morse, of Oakland, has erected a new show-house at his new floral depot on Piedmont avenue.

H. Hayashi & Co. have finished the building of five carnation houses at Elmhurst, each house being 25x125.

W. S. Marshall, a well known florist of Fresno, Cal., was in town.

Nevin & Munro, of Fairfax, have finished the planting of several acres of hardy roses for cut flower purposes.

About twenty of the most prominent growers and wholesalers in the neighborhood of San Francisco met March 14 with the intention of forming a society that would be to the benefit of the trade at large. As a result, the Florists'

Board of Trade was organized and the following well known florists were chosen temporarily: President, H. Plath; secretary, E. W. McLellan; and a committee on arrangements consisting of Messrs. Ferrari, Shibley and Schwerin. These gentlemen will formulate a constitution and set of by-laws. A meeting for the election of permanent officers and transaction of much other important business was held March 29.

There is a noticeable scarcity in the line of blooming azaleas. The several weeks of warm weather brought the flowers out so quickly that Easter found quantities of plants completely out of blossom for the season.

Robert Armstrong has accepted the position of head gardener with the Realty Syndicate, of Oakland, Cal. G.

BOSTON'S MAY SHOW.

No more shows will be given by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society until the orchid exhibition, which will be held May 26 to 30. A preliminary schedule of prizes has been issued and is being sent out. For the best display of orchid plants in bloom, arranged for effect, embracing at least twenty genera and bi-generic hybrids, to fill 400 square feet of space, a gold medal and first prize of $1,000 will be awarded. The second prize will be a silver medal and $500, and the third a bronze medal and $250. For the best display of orchid plants in bloom, arranged for effect, embracing at least ten orchid genera and bi-generic hybrids to fill 150 square feet of space, commercial growers excluded, the first prize is a gold medal and $200; second prize, silver medal and $100, and the third prize, bronze medal and $50.

For the largest and best display of cut orchid blooms arranged with ferns or other foliage, variety and decorative effect considered, the first prize is a gold medal and $100; the second prize a silver medal and $50, and the third prize a bronze medal and $25.

Gold medals will be given for the best recently introduced orchid plant not previously exhibited in the United States; for the best new seedling orchid plant not previously exhibited in the United States, and for the best collection of cut orchids of new varieties not before exhibited in the United States. Ferns or other foliage may be used in the arrangement.

While this is to be the largest orchid show ever held in the United States, it will not be exclusively of these flowers, as the schedule provides a gold medal and $100 for the best group of flowering and foliage plants arranged for effect, with a silver medal and $50 as a second prize. Gold medals will also be given the best new species of stove or greenhouse plant in bloom not previously exhibited in the United States; for the best new species of stove or greenhouse foliage plant, exclusive of ferns, not previously exhibited in the United States; for the best new species of coniferous plant, not yet disseminated, likely to be hardy in Massachusetts; for the best new species of shrub or climber in bloom, likely to be hardy in Massachusetts, not previously exhibited in the United States; and for the best new species of hardy

NOTICE

To all American Nurserymen and Seedsmen desiring to keep in touch with commercial horticulture in England and the continent of Europe: Your best means of doing this is to take in the

Horticultural Advertiser

Our circulation covers the whole trade in Great Britain and the cream of the European firms. Impartial reports of all novelties, etc. Paper free on receipt of 75 cents, covering cost of postage yearly. As the H. A. is a purely trade medium, applicants should, with the subscription, send a copy of their catalogue or other evidence that they belong to the nursery or seed trade.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June, 1910.

THE Green Brier Nursery Co. has been incorporated at Green Brier, Tenn., with a capital stock of $2,500. The incorporators are R. R. and Annie M. Harris, Ida, N. S. and N. Pribble.

It is said that one of the largest nurseries in the Columbia river valley will be planted this year by the Vanholderbeck Nursery Co., of Kennewick, Wash. The report states that "the grafts for 1,140,000 settings have been nearly completed."

NURSEYMEN are heels over head in work. The sudden arrival of warm weather plunges them right into the middle of their season. If it does not turn cold pretty quickly the planting season for nursery stock will be one of the shortest on record.

A VERITABLE boom in apple growing is starting in New England. One grower will set out 12,000 trees this spring, another 24,000, and there are numerous other planters, big and small, which will place the total up into the hundreds of thousands. For mere size New England cannot quite equal the Pacific coast apples, but for flavor and keeping qualities they are decidedly superior, while there is a market with 23,000,000 population along the Atlantic states alone.

NAME OF SHRUB.

Will you please tell me the name of the shrub from which the enclosed leaves were taken, if the leaves are sufficient for purposes of identification? B. S. B.

The name of this shrub, or small tree, is Pittosporum crassifolium. G.

BOSKOOP NURSERY INTERESTS.

The Boskoop nurserymen are just now busy with an unusually large order destined to plant the new park for one of the American millionaires, who has made his pile out of the tobacco and cigarette trade. One item of the order is for 36,000 of the Koster blue spruce, and there are others almost equally heavy. Some idea of the magnitude of the order may be gained from the fact that the packing charges alone, apart from freight, insurance, etc., will amount to very close upon $3,000.

There are some 700 nurseries in and around Boskoop, but instead of their numbers leading to a ruinous competition the result is quite the other way. The whole trade is closely banded together, and what one runs short of he borrows, exchanges or purchases from his nearest neighbor. The Boskoop motto is "Mutual help," and in this lies one of the chief secrets of its prosperity. There are four local protective societies, dealing severally with the export trade to America, England, Germany and France, negotiating for the cheapest freights and in other ways looking after the interests of the members. The Horticultural Advertiser (English), in commenting on these facts, adds that in spite of the fact that Boskoop has to rely entirely on road and water carriage, having no railway

Prices upon application

Ramblers and Other Climbing Roses

CRIMSON RAMBLER. American Grown. The only stock for forcing. Large heavy plants, two years old, mossed and packed in bundles of 10, 3 to 4 feet, $1.25 for 10, $12.00 per 100; 4 to 5 feet, $1.75 for 10, $15.00 per 100; 5 to 6 feet, extra heavy, $2.25 for 10, $20.00 per 100.

PAUL'S CARMINE PILLAR. Flowers large and free; color rosy carmine. Two-year-old, field grown. 85c for 5, $15.00 per 100.

DOROTHY PERKINS. Lovely shell-pink color. $1.25 for 10, $12.00 per 100.

TAUSENDSCHON. The new Rambler Rose. The name translated means a "thousand beauties." Color beautiful rose, shading to pink. $2.25 for 10, $20.00 per 100.

LADY GAY. A seedling from the popular Crimson Rambler, which it resembles in habit and general effect. The flowers are of a delicate cherry-pink color, which fades to soft white. Strong plants, field-grown, 4 to 5 feet. $1.75 for 10, $15.00 per 100.

Flower of Fairfield The Everblooming Crimson Rambler

This variety is a sport from the beautiful Crimson Rambler, is similar in color, more brilliant and lasting than the old favorite. It also possesses the further advantage over the Crimson Rambler in the fact that it flowers profusely on the young wood the first year. Flower of Fairfield is a vigorous grower and free bloomer. It starts to bloom early in the Spring and continues until late in the Autumn. It is rightly termed "perpetual blooming." 40c each, $3.50 for 10, $30.00 per 100.

Veilchenblau (Violet-Blue)

It has long been the desire of rosarians to secure a blue Rose. In Veilchenblau we have practically approached this color. The steel-blue flowers of this new Rose appear in large clusters, are semi-double, of medium size and keep in bloom a long time. The showy yellow stamens, contrasting with the blue flower, give the whole a striking appearance. 60c each, $5.75 for 10, $55.00 per 100.

Baby Rambler Roses

BABY DOROTHY. The same in habit as Baby Rambler, but the color of the flowers is similar to Dorothy Perkins. It makes an excellent pot plant for forcing. Price for strong, field-grown plants, 85c for 5, $16.00 per 100.

CATHERINE SEIMETH. A White Baby Rambler Rose, larger and better flowers than the type. White with yellowish center. 85c for 5, $15.00 per 100.

MRS. WM. H. CUTBUSH. Color intense crimson and exceptionally free-flowering. 85c for 5, $15.00 per 100.

MME. NORBERT LEVAVASSEUR (Baby Rambler). Strong, field-grown plants. 85c for 5, $15.00 per 100.

THE TREE BABY RAMBLER. (Grown as a Standard). The popularity of the Baby Rambler has suggested the growing of it as a tree or standard. 40c each, $3.75 for 10, $35.00 per 100.

BABY DOROTHY. (Grown as a Standard.) For description, see above. 75c each, $6.25 for 10, $60.00 per 100.

We also have a fine stock of Hybrids and Hybrid Teas, standard grown.

Something New in Roses for Florists HALF STANDARD BABY RAMBLERS

These are Baby Ramblers, grown on stems or standards about one and one-half feet high, and will be a novelty for your trade you cannot profitably overlook. They are offered for the first time in this country in the following varieties:

BABY DOROTHY (Half standard). Deep pink. 60c each, $6.00 per doz., $45.00 per 100.

BABY RAMBLER (Half standard). Crimson. 45c each, $4.50 per doz., $35.00 per 100.

BABY CATHERINE SEIMETH (Half standard). White. 45c each, $4.50 per doz., $35.00 per 100.

BABY "STARS AND STRIPES" (Half standard). White and red grafted on the same plant; most attractive. 50c each, $5.00 per doz., $40.00 per 100.

MAGNOLIA SOULANGEANA.

I recently sent you an inquiry as to what kinds of roots would be best to use for grafting white and blue wistarias and Magnolia Soulangeana. In the REVIEW of February 10, you replied as follows: "Graft wistarias on portions of their own roots. They can also be propagated quite easily by layering. Magnolia Soulangeana should be worked on seedlings two years old and grown along in pots of M. acuminata or M. tripetala. A greenhouse is the best place for the successful carrying out of this method of propagation and either cleft or tongue grafting can be done."

Now, in stating that Magnolia Soulangeana should be grafted on two-year seedlings, do you mean Magnolia grandiflora seedlings? C. W. K.

I should prefer to use two-year pot-grown seedlings of Magnolia acuminata or M. tripetala, rather than M. grandiflora. C.

of stone fruits. This is a fungous disease. It is widespread and is very destructive to the peach crop. The loss which it inflicts on peach growers will easily average $5,000,000 yearly. The loss to the peach crop of Georgia alone is estimated at $1,000,000 a year.

Much work has been done with a view to discovering a satisfactory remedy for this trouble. Spraying with diluted bordeaux mixture has been most commonly recommended, but its injury to the foliage has made it unsatisfactory, since the remedy must be applied during the growing season.

The peach scab, often called black spot, is another disease which seriously affects the peach crop in all sections east of the Rocky mountains, although not causing such serious losses as brown rot.

As the result of experimental work by the United States Department of Agriculture, a cheap and simple remedy for this disease has been found in the self-boiled lime-sulphur wash. This can be applied during the growing season with little danger of injuring the fruit or foliage, and it is quite effective. Furthermore, by mixing arsenate of lead with the fungicide, the curculio can be destroyed at the same time.

The department has just issued a bulletin describing the preparation and use of the remedy. This publication will be of great interest to peach growers in all sections.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., 714 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia

CROMWELL, CONN.

There has been no eight-hour day and Saturday afternoons off for the staff at A. N. Pierson's this spring. Instead, they have had to work nights and Sundays, to satisfy the Easter demand, which was much in excess of that of last year.

The round figures of the shipping department tell in a measure the extent of the business. The demand for pot lilies is of course above all other demands. Of these 70,000 pots—or about 230,000 blooms—have been supplied to the trade; 5,000 potted roses, of the Baby Rambler variety, and 2,000 pots of spiraea, together with 100,000 pots of lilies of the valley.

Cut flowers in vast quantities have also been shipped to the various markets. At one time there were 60,000 cut roses in the cooler. In all about 135,000 or 150,000 cut roses—Killarney, white Killarney, Marylands, Kaiserins and American Beauties—have been sent from the greenhouses for the Easter trade. The number of carnations shipped last week runs into six figures.

The head of the Pierson firm, A. N. Pierson, will leave for Europe April 4 to enjoy one of the few vacations of twenty-nine years in the flower-growing business. He will be gone two months.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OKLA.

The Easter trade in this city was far in excess of that of any previous year. A plentiful supply of seasonable cut flowers and potted plants had been prepared for the occasion, and everything was sold out satisfactorily when the doors were closed on Sunday.

The warm weather that prevailed during the week preceding Easter made it somewhat difficult to have the lilies at just the right point of development; the temperature was around 85 degrees for several days in succession, but by judicious handling in the cooling cellars, the plants were kept about right and turned out eminently satisfactorily.

The Stiles Co., 139 West Main street, a progressive and up-to-date firm, made an elaborate Easter display, showing an excellent line of flowering and decorative plants; they were specially strong on lilies, hydrangeas, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, and well-flowered geraniums, all of which sold out easily. They had also a heavy cut of carnations from their greenhouses, which are located in the northern part of the city; all of which brought good prices and were disposed of down to the last blossom. The Stiles Co. used a liberal amount of space in the daily papers just previous to Easter, and that, supplemented with their tasteful window displays, brought them the business. They cleaned out everything and were more than satisfied with results.

At this writing, March 28, the red bud, Cercis Canadensis, and lilac are in full bloom; the hyacinth and pansy beds in Wheeler park, where Supt. Frank is in charge, are a blaze of beauty. Tulips and narcissi are on the wane.

SANGAMO BRILLIANT PINK

Experienced carnation growers who have visited our place, and have carefully watched Sangamo this season, claim it will produce twice as many blooms as any other variety grown today. It is not only the most prolific carnation, but the calyx does not burst, and the stem is always long and stiff; therefore, Sangamo increases your profits more than two-fold. We not only invite growers to visit our place to see for their own satisfaction, but we will pay your railroad fare from Chicago to our place and back again, if you will only come. It is not too late for Sangamo. Our best plants were propagated in March and April last year.

Strong, healthy, well rooted cuttings ready.

Double Your Carnation Profits—Last Chance to Buy

The trade has certainly bought liberally of Carnation Dorothy Gordon this winter and spring—orders for rooted cuttings have taxed our producing capacity nearly to the limit, but we're proud of the stock we've sent out, and judging by their kind letters, our customers are pleased, too. And next winter, when all those splendid plants come to bloom and these florists begin to make money as they have never before made it from carnations, they'll be still better satisfied! Have YOU delayed getting in your order for this magnificent new Carnation? If so, this advertisement is addressed to you; we have just a few thousand more cuttings in the sand for April 15th delivery, and when these are taken, no more will be available till next winter.

We urge you, if you want to double your carnation profits, not to delay; the merit of this splendid new variety has been thoroughly proved and the only possible loss you can experience in the matter is to let this opportunity slip by and stick to the old sorts you've been growing in the past.

Carnation Dorothy Gordon

has a splendid pedigree, a long list of good qualities, and an enviable record of prizes and awards. It is a seedling of Lawson on Enchantress, possessing the principal merits of these varieties without their faults. It is vigorous in growth and is perfectly free from disease. Its flowers are a trifle darker than Pink Enchantress; they are borne in double the quantity, and are of exceptional size—averaging over 3 inches in diameter. They are very fragrant and keep exceptionally well. The market price paid for Carnation Dorothy Gordon is regularly 50 per cent more than that paid for Enchantress.

From the very first, Dorothy Gordon has established a splendid record as an exhibition variety. High awards were given it at the meeting of the American Carnation Society in 1908 and at the National Gardeners' Association meeting in New York in 1909. This season it has attracted much attention and has won further renown at the Pittsburg and Toronto meetings.

In order to give the trade a fair opportunity to test it thoroughly, we have from the first sold rooted cuttings at a price which would get it established everywhere. This low figure still prevails, and the remaining stock will be sold at these prices: $10 per 100; $75 per 1000. No further offers this season.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Buffalo enjoyed the most glorious weather for Easter we have had in years. There was bright sunshine all the week and the weather was as warm as May. As a result, business was good with everybody. Many branches were opened and plants were sold largely on the market in open stands. The fair weather gave people a chance to get out any time and the business done seemed to be a record breaker. Plants were, of course, the main feature, except on Easter day, and there was an abundance of them on the market. Azaleas, Baby Ramblers and hybrid roses were the leaders. The bulk of the lily stock was short, but sold well made up in pans with pteris ferns. In the cut flower line the violets led, and, with the favorable conditions, the sale was enormous. Sweet peas went well and were cleaned up early.

Various Notes.

The bowling club will again be in force, now that the Easter rush is over. The end of the season will soon be at hand and the committee wishes all the bowlers to be present and make a try for the team.

Harry Fishel, of Corfu, N. Y., has sold his greenhouse business and will take up farming.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

The most phenomenal weather for Easter that has ever been experienced in Minneapolis, held sway last week. The thermometer registered 80 degrees the entire week, something decidedly unusual for our chilly climate. As a result, there was a large amount of stock on the market and many good lilies were lost, but, "for a" that, we had a good holiday trade. Easter lilies were plentiful and good everywhere, as were plants of other descriptions, such as azaleas, hydrangeas, etc. Single violets went out the middle of the week, but there was a fair supply of double, and all other cut stock was plentiful.

Various Notes.

Rice Bros. profess themselves well satisfied with the Easter trade, and though stock was plentiful, got rid of everything on hand at good prices.

Miss Whitted, in her new location on Tenth street, sold, if possible, a greater number of baskets this year than heretofore, and trade in other lines was as good as in the old location.

R. A. Latham was busy as ever over the holidays, and disposed of the entire stock that was on hand before Easter.

James Souden found the plant business better at the Radisson Shop than at the old stand, and, though handicapped by not being in readiness for business, was well satisfied with the output and intake.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. sold out its entire large stock of lilies, and though there were some lost on account of the warm weather, business was excellent, and the results so satisfactory that John Monson, the proprietor, is already turning his thoughts towards a fishing trip.
M. E. M.

CONCORD JUNCTION, MASS.

Easter business, with Leonard Cousins, Jr., was the best since his locating here. Many thousands of carnations, of the finest quality, were shipped to the Boston market and fetched top prices.

Mr. Cousins says that pansies will soon take up the attention of the entire force at his establishment. The covering has been removed and shows that they have wintered nicely. Advance orders already indicate a larger demand for them this season than ever before.

Geraniums are grown in quantity and are shipped to florists everywhere. Other bedding plants, such as vincas, dracenas, heliotrope, salvia, etc., are coming along nicely and will be ready for shipment when needed.

SELECT FERNS For Fine Store Trade

We offer a grand lot of exceptionally well-grown plants of the different varieties of Nephrolepis, which will be found one of the best selling and most profitable plants that florists can handle. Our stock is in unusually fine shape, and we will guarantee it will please the most exacting, as it is exceptionally good value at the prices quoted.

Improved Elegantisima. The finest of all this type. It was introduced by us in 1905. This form of Elegantisima has been greatly improved, and shows no tendency to revert to the Boston, making it the most valuable fern of this type. Strong plants, 4-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.; 6-in., $6.00 to $9.00 per doz.—according to size; 8-in., $12.00 to $18.00 per doz.—according to size.

Superbissima. Introduced by us in 1908. A very unique and distinct novelty. Its distinguishing characteristics are its dark green foliage and dense growth. Fronds are very heavily imbricated, making them very dense and compact. Strong plants, 4-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.; 6-in., $6.00 to $9.00 per doz.—according to size; 8-in., $12.00 to $18.00 per doz.—according to size.

NEW ORLEANS.

The demand for the white lily, of the longiflorum family, is quite recent, at least in New Orleans. This lily, which we have grown almost wild in all the gardens of the city and which was brought down here many years ago, growing at will and coming to flower at irregular times according to the season, was not much thought of as valuable for Easter Sunday. However, by close attention to its culture, we now can have it developed to a perfect flower in time for that day, and no better proof can be given than what has been seen at the establishment of James Newsham. No finer lily, from cold storage or coming from Bermuda or Japan, could be found. He had a house of about 1,000 plants, which were in perfect shape for Easter. The foliage was perfect, and there were from eight to ten buds on each plant, with not a trace of any disease. Since his first idea, about two years ago, of establishing an orchid emporium in New Orleans to supply the wholesale trade, and backed by a life experience in orchid culture, James Newsham already has become a large importer of orchids. He has now on hand about 10,000 plants. The following are the principal varieties: Oncidium splendendum, O. Cavendishianum, O. leucochilum, Lælia superbiens, Cattleya Skinneri, C. Bowringiana, Lycaste Skinneri and Odontoglossum grande. The different species of oncidium are with him more a specialty than any other, as he has secured the full amount of what is exported annually to this country. His younger son is now in Honduras, collecting Cattleya Bowringiana to fill up an order for Europe. James Newsham finds the local trade good for cut flowers and disposes of a quantity of blooms from his plants. He has been building more houses for roses and green stock and says he is not done yet.

Our first field roses were open in good season for Easter and helped to make up many bunches.

The market for Easter plants was not much ahead of last year, but every florist was busy and some say they did quite well. M. M. L.

FORT SMITH, ARK.—A. A. Pantet & Co., who at present have six greenhouses, each 20x150, expect to erect two more houses near the end of the present season. George W. Rye, the firm's manager, says that this town is growing rapidly and business is good. Bedding plants have been moving fast and the Easter trade was heavy.

Mrs. C. W. Ward

MRS. C. W. WARD is a perfectly formed flower with full center; color deep pink, several shades lighter than Lawson, deeper than Winsor; having strong, erect stems, 24 to 36 inches in length. A vigorous, healthy grower and has never shown disease of any kind.

DETROIT.

The Market.

The florists of Detroit have had some big Easters in past years, but this year's rush was the biggest ever. We have had remarkably fine weather so far this month, rather more like June than March. For the entire week preceding Easter, we had continual sunshine, and it was so warm that even spring coats were dispensed with. It was entirely too warm for the good of stock, but fine for business and delivering.

In cut flowers, sweet peas, violets, valley and carnations were entirely cleaned up. Every available sweet pea was cut and sold. Many callas were disposed of, but good long-stemmed cut Easter lilies were scarce, although the market was fairly flooded with short stuff. Roses sold well, with much good stock available.

Entirely too much bulb stock is being grown hereabouts, and as a result thousands of daffodils and tulips were dumped Monday.

White carnations were all sold out Saturday, but large shipments arrived Monday, as the result of the warm weather.

Ferns, leucothoe, asparagus, etc., sold in large quantities.

Various Notes.

Charles Plumb has found it necessary to place in service another large wagon to assist in handling his ever-increasing wholesale business.

C. H. Maynard, who attended a banquet at Rochester, N. Y., March 14, given by the Rochester Florists' Association to the executive committee of the S. A. F., has nothing but words of praise for the city and its florists and nurserymen.

But for the help of William Dilger, who donned his overalls last week and gave a helping hand at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, it is doubtful if they could have handled the rush. Some few years ago there were but two people on the pay roll; now there are seven or eight.

J. A. Briscoe, for many years engaged in the nursery business in Highland Park, died at the age of 72 years, Friday, March 25. Further particulars will be found in the obituary column.

B. Schroeter placed an order, March 28, with the Buick Motor Car Co. for one of its florists' delivery wagons. H. S.

ANSONIA, CONN.—J. W. Willis, proprietor of the Cottage avenue greenhouses, has opened a store in the Y. M. C. A. building. The new place was ready for business in time for Easter.

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

Always An Effective Advertising Medium

Appears this spring to be giving advertisers even better results than usual.

As witness such letters as these, written almost the same day and representing all parts of the country:

Stop my geranium advertisement; just received a telegram from South Dakota taking the whole lot advertised.—N. E. Beck, Massillon, O., March 26, 1910.

We have booked so many orders from our advertisement in the REVIEW, you had better cut it out for a while; will be with you again later.—George A. Relyea, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., March 26, 1910.

Cut out our advertisement of mum cuttings. Have shipped from ocean to ocean and from New Orleans to Winnipeg. Orders have come in for from 3,000 to 5,000 daily and we are sold out.—The Newburys, Mitchell, S. D., March 25, 1910.

We received many fine orders through our advertisement in the REVIEW and are practically sold out of stock for the season.—Fowler Bros., Westfield, Mass., March 21, 1910.

I am instructing my advertising man to renew my advertisement with you, as the REVIEW is the only paper for florists that has ever made good with me.—F. P. Barton, New Haven, Conn., March 28, 1910.

No florist need let surpluses go to waste; nor need he be content with his limited local field. The REVIEW carries your offer to the whole trade—"from ocean to ocean and from New Orleans to Winnipeg."

MARYSVILLE, KAN.—The Marysville Floral Co. is highly pleased with its first Easter in business here. H. R. Fischer, the manager, says stock of all kinds was cleaned up and more could have been sold. Cut flowers were in chief demand and nearly everybody wanted carnations, which sold at 75 cents to $1 per dozen.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—William Walker reports as follows: "I believe that everyone in the trade had a good business on Easter. As for ourselves, it was a record breaker. The weather was great, our stock of plants and cut flowers was in satisfactory shape and we were kept busy 'delivering the goods.' The outlook for the future is good. The demand is here, and it is up to us to supply it with the kind of stock that will satisfy the people and encourage them to the point where they will feel that flowers are a necessity."

Greenhouse Heating.

PIPING IN NEW JERSEY.

Please inform me as to the best way of piping my greenhouse, which is 16x100 feet, with three feet of concrete and two feet of glass in each side wall. The west gable is also glass, down to within three feet of the ground. The east end adjoins the potting shed and boiler room.

What size of main should I use across the end, if I use one 2½-inch flow on each side of the house, to the far end? How many 2-inch returns would I need, to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees in zero weather, with hot water? If I should want a temperature of 60 degrees, would it be necessary to put in more flows or could I make up the radiation by putting in more 2-inch returns? If I put one large valve in the main, from the boiler, could I let down the temperature in warm weather by shutting the valve, without injuring the boiler?

How many square feet of radiation should the boiler have, to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees, with a good surplus for safety? Also, how much radiation would be needed for 60 degrees?
G. S.

To answer for a house 16x100 feet, the main flow pipe should be 3-inch, and within the house it will be well to have two 2½-inch flow pipes, one upon each wall. To maintain a temperature of 50 degrees, there should be seven 2-inch return pipes. In case it is desired to obtain a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather, there will be no occasion for making any change in the flow pipes, but three additional 2-inch returns will be required.

If there is to be but one house it will be safer to rely upon regulating the fire valves upon a part of the return pipes in the coils.

If the boiler has a rating for 800 square feet of radiation, it will answer for 50 degrees, but it will be desirable to use one with a rating of 1,000 square feet if a temperature of 60 degrees is desired. The actual amount of radiation required in each case, however, is about 200 square feet less than is here recommended for the boiler.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Easter week was an unusual one in many respects. Wednesday and Thursday the thermometer registered 83 degrees, and what it did to violets was plenty; after that it cooled down a few degrees and we had the most delightful Easter weather on record.

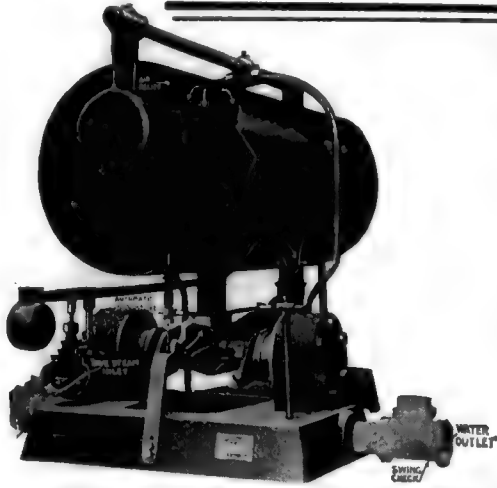

Stock of almost all kinds was plentiful, especially Saturday, and everyone got all that was wanted at reasonable prices, and stock was fine. Lilies, which were expected to be short, came in just about enough to take care of demand and the quality was good. Beauties were not plentiful, but they were not missed, as the fine Killarney, almost as large as Beauties, filled the bill, and most of the trade say they do not care particularly about the Beauties, as they can make more money selling other roses.

The plant trade exceeded all expectations, as there was more fine stock than was ever seen here before, and it was all sold. Little, if anything, that was good was to be seen Monday morning and the report from all sources was, "The best Easter ever."

The wholesale houses all make the same kind of a report, "An awful grind, but the business was all right."

The violets which arrived in this market Thursday and Friday showed the effects of the hot weather and the fact that they were left too long on the plants, as most of them were falling off when they arrived.

Before every holiday, we hear the retailers make the old cry that they are going to sell plants and will not pay any advance for cut flowers. However, each year they buy more than the year previous; there are cut flower customers who will not take the plant bluff, and, besides, a small boy can deliver $100

Various Notes.

The conservatories, in both Schenley and the north side parks, had the usual Easter shows. At Schenley park, where the largest show was held, Superintendent George Burke reports that 30,000 people passed through the houses Sunday, and he expects this will continue every good Sunday as long as the show lasts. At the north side park there was a constant stream of visitors all day. There is no doubt that these public shows are great educators and do far more to help the sale of flowers and plants than is usually supposed.

The A. W. Smith Co. had an opportunity to test their system to the limit, Saturday, and they admit there is a limit to the amount of orders a certain force can fill in twenty-four hours. Their business was beyond their greatest expectations.

Mrs. E. A. Williams had her usual select trade and it is only necessary to say that a vase of lilies was the only stock left when she locked the door Sunday afternoon. Every flower and arrangement of plants was sold and out of the house, a $100 funeral being the finishing job.

Ben Elliott, manager for John Bader, showed up smiling Friday night, as they were cleaned up, as far as blooming plants were concerned, and their trade expectations were fully realized.

Can anyone offer a few choice phrases that will fill the bill when the motor truck fails on Easter Saturday? There are instances of this kind.

Randolph & McClements report the greatest clean-up in their experience, and say the hardest thing is making the deliveries, but the auto truck almost solves that difficulty.

Some of the others who reported that trade was fully up to their expectations and that they had all they could do were: H. L. Blind & Bros.; Walter Breitenstein, of Breitenstein & Flemm, and the Zieger Co.

The flower stands at the markets were beautiful, and all cleaned up nicely.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Easter left everybody tired, but happy. It was a great day, surpassing any ever experienced in this city and vicinity. Perfect weather conditions prevailed for several days preceding, and on the day itself, and this, together with plenty of flowers of every description, right prices and a disposition to buy, made a combination that brought full satisfaction all around.

Notwithstanding the fact that the department stores, public markets and drug stores put in large side lines of potted plants and cut flowers, the florists were kept on the jump, and the general report was "the best ever." There was a good clean-up, but no shortage except, possibly, on violets, on which some of the stores reported an extraordinary demand. There was a general disposition on the part of practically all the churches, irrespective of denomination, to use potted decorations, and the orders for these were well distributed.

Various Notes.

The decorations for the banquet given in honor of President Taft, March 21, exceeded anything ever seen in this city before. T. J. Johnston & Co., Edward Brooks, manager, had those for the President's and special guests' tables;

George Johnson & Son had the general table decorations and Johnston Bros. had the stage and hall decorations. The color scheme of the President's table was pink and green, an immense mound of Killarney roses, 300 in number, being the centerpiece, flanked by two large bouquets of the same, six dozen in each. Farleyense fern in pots, and scattered fronds, furnished the green. The special guests' table was gold and green, Golden Spur daffodils being used with Farleyense. On the other tables, mounds of cut flowers with dagger ferns, and carnations with fancy ferns scattered about, furnished the decorations. The hall decorations and those on the stage, screening the orchestra, were entirely of kentias.

Easter trade was quite satisfactory, leaving all with pleasant faces. The demand for Easter lilies was somewhat better than last year.

J. P. Russell, proprietor of Chatogue Greenhouses, says trade increased about thirty per cent over last Easter, on account of the cold weather making outdoor flowers scarce.

C. Ravier & Sons cleaned up thousands of bulbous flowers at good prices.

MANCHESTER, MASS.

At the last meeting of the North Shore Horticultural Society, George Cruikshanks, of R. & J. Farquhar & Co., read a paper on "Cyclamens and Their Culture." The attendance was not so good as usual, but those present received valuable information on that pest which has ruined so many fine batches of plants, namely, the cyclamen mite.

It has been held, in a good many quarters, that when once the mite gets into a batch of plants they might as well be thrown away. The present most promising method of control, however, does away with the necessity of such stringent measures. It is briefly this: Spray the plants at regular intervals of a week with any one of the good nicotine solutions on the market. It is practically certain that the cyclamen mite gets in its work in the crown of the plant some time before the results are seen in the crinkled and deformed leaves and flowers. Therefore, do not wait till you see this evidence of their work, but start to spray as soon as the first leaf shows in the seed pans and keep it up, at intervals of a week or ten days, until the plants come into flower. Prevention is far better than cure, so spray regularly in the latter part of the day and give a good syringing with clear water on the following morning.

The speaker touched on soil mixtures, the raising of seed and the growing of exhibition plants. He was accorded a vote of thanks for his instructive paper. The meeting adjourned at 9:30 p. m.

EMPORIA, KAN.

At the corner of West street and Twelfth avenue are the greenhouses of the Emporia Floral Co., just completed. At the head of the concern are E. M. Robinson and J. Ralph Souder; they made their formal entry into the business world of Emporia, March 22, when they gave an opening to which the public came in large numbers.

Last September the two young men came to Emporia and started to work on the construction of the building. Mr. Robinson had been in business in Kansas City for twelve years, and Mr. Souder has had seven years of practical experience as a florist, so the two hit off well together as partners in the firm. The greenhouses are 54x100. The plant is heated throughout with steam, and a plant with a boiler of the latest pattern is installed in a boiler house and pit at the rear of the greenhouses. From the sidewalk the corner entrance leads into the office, which is well furnished, with a display case for cut flowers, with counters and other office furniture.

The building is a handsome adornment to the corner, which stood bare for many years, and looms up well with the residences which have been recently built on the lots of this addition. The partners did all the work of construction, from the laying of the foundation to the fitting of the heating system.

The stock for the greenhouses has been coming in for several weeks, and special shipments for Easter were received. It will take several months before the company can cut its own stock, and in the meantime supplies will be drawn from outside.

BARKER, N. Y.—J. R. Spafford will this season put up two greenhouses, 21x100.

An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

The Market.

Reports from all the trade in this section are most gratifying, having made a large increase over a year ago in round dollars. There was never a better stock of Easter plants and cut flowers for the retailers to select from and the stores without exception were a bower of beautiful plants almost all week.

Various Notes.

Merkel & Son, of Mentor, shipped about twenty carloads of plants, consisting of ramblers, azaleas, lilies and other stock, to this market alone. This firm had 3,500 azaleas for Easter trade and should be commented on for the excellent quality.

A. Schmitt, of Glenville, had as usual a fine lot of plants for Easter. The azaleas, ramblers and genistas were all fine.

The wholesalers all report having done a record-breaking business.

Among the retailers there are none dissatisfied. Knoble Bros. report an increase over last year. Smith & Fetters say it was their best year. C. M. Wagner said it was by far his best Easter. The Jones-Russell Co. had its first Easter and reports a grand trade. Westman & Getz, who make a specialty of decorative novelties, report a good increase over a year ago.

C. A. Bramley, who has four stores in different parts of the city, says he was cleaned up at all four places.

John Kirchner had a fine lot of plants and bulb stock and says that he sold out better than ever before.

Peter Nichols, of the Arcade, moved among other stock 20,000 violets. He was well pleased with the results.

The J. M. Gasser Co. had a fine cut of roses of all kinds for Easter. Their Killarney were exceptionally fine.

The F. R. Williams Co. sent in 25,000 carnations and the same number of sweet peas, which were fine.

L. Anderson, W. J. Kramer, of Rock River, and Robert Kegg, of West Park, all had a good cut of carnations for Easter week.

G. B.

Mrs. Ella Grant Wilson opened her new flower shop at 6402 Euclid avenue March 17 and is well satisfied with the business done to date.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—The board of park commissioners, in its recent annual report to the board of aldermen, strongly recommended the building of greenhouses as a part of the park system of this city.

The Market.

Trade was heavy for Easter, and the weather was ideal all the week. Saturday afternoon it clouded up and caused considerable alarm, but it passed off and Sunday was clear, so that people were out with their new Easter suits and bought flowers. Stock was quite plentiful in most lines. Roses were in good supply and sold well at prices a little lower than last year. Beauties were quite scarce, especially in the medium lengths. Carnations were plentiful, but, as usual, the demand was heavy. Bulbous stock was available in great quantities, but the demand was good. Murillo tulips headed the list, while the singles went well. Daffodils also sold well.

The demand was heavy for lilies, both cut and in pots, and everyone sold out clean on them early in the day. There was a fine lot of azaleas, and they were really the best sellers of all pot plants. Rhododendrons, spiræas and rambler roses sold well, and there was a good supply.

Violets were in fair supply, but the quality was rather poor. All the good ones were cleaned up early in the day. Sweet peas had a heavy sale, and no doubt there were more of them sold than ever before, for there was a good supply. Valley came in for its share and was cleaned up.

Everyone had all his rentable plants out on decorations, and, taking it as a whole, it was by far the best Easter we have had in years.

Various Notes.

Sherman Stephens worked night and day for several days before Easter, and reports a heavy trade.

E. Metzmaier reports heavy business, with everything cleaned up. The Riverside Floral Co. also reports a good trade.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. had heavy cuts of carnations and a fine lot of azaleas, the best they have had in years.

The Livingston Seed Co. reports a heavy trade in all lines of stock.

Several traveling men were in the city Saturday, but they were all taking vacations; nothing doing for them. J. M.

ELDORA, IA.—The J. S. Polland Floral Co. will erect a number of greenhouse buildings.

Unquestionably The Lightest, Safest House Built

A complete iron frame, completely supported with the required number of columns to take from the ridge and eaves the tremendous strain of roof weight, and wind and snow pressure.

The greenhouse engineers who designed it, first made sure it was strong enough, then they made it light enough.

It is the Sectional Iron Frame Construction, which is not the cheapest house you can build, but it costs what is necessary to make it safe and sure.

We have several other photos of this house we would like to have you see. If interested, write and let us know.

VIOLETS AND VALLEY.

One would have to seek far to find a more attractive wreath than the one illustrated herewith. This was the work of Leopold Koropp, Chicago, violets being used for the lower part of the wreath and valley for the upper part. The violets were stemmed rather long, so that the wreath was given much width and a well-filled appearance. The valley was also stemmed long and the spikes of bells set well above the valley foliage. Such a wreath can be made at low cost in the spring, but even in midwinter, when violets command real money, it looks as though so well made a wreath were worth all it cost.

RETAIL DELIVERY.

They say in Pittsburg that it takes something fast to keep up with the cut flower business these days, and that may be one of the reasons why Mrs. E. A. Williams is having another specially designed automobile built to handle her retail deliveries.

The illustration on page 7 shows the delivery facilities Mrs. Williams has employed this season—one automobile and four horse outfits, including two double teams. The automobile used this season has given such satisfactory results that a second one will shortly be ready, and it may put the horses out of business. Mrs. Williams says that she has not found the automobile especially economical, but that it has proved decidedly efficient. While it costs considerably more to operate than a team costs, one automobile will do the work of two or three teams; it covers the ground so much faster that in considering the cost of automobile delivery the retail florist should compare it with the cost of two or three teams, not one.

FLOWER STORE CONDITIONS.

Can you give any advice or hints on how to care for plants in the store? After they come from the greenhouse they are apt to go to pieces in a few days. Is there any special way of fixing the window to keep the plants longer? Our window faces northeast and has a linoleum flooring. A. & L.

If plants will keep only "a few days" in your store it must be that something is wrong, but it may not be in the store. It may be that the plants are not in proper condition when they come in from the greenhouses. No information is given as to the class of plants handled, but if such as Boston ferns, etc., is meant it is possible these come in too soft or unestablished in the pots. You cannot expect plants in a dark store to thrive as they would in a light greenhouse, but if they are well grown and properly hardened off they should remain in good condition until sold. If they don't, what satisfaction can your customers expect?

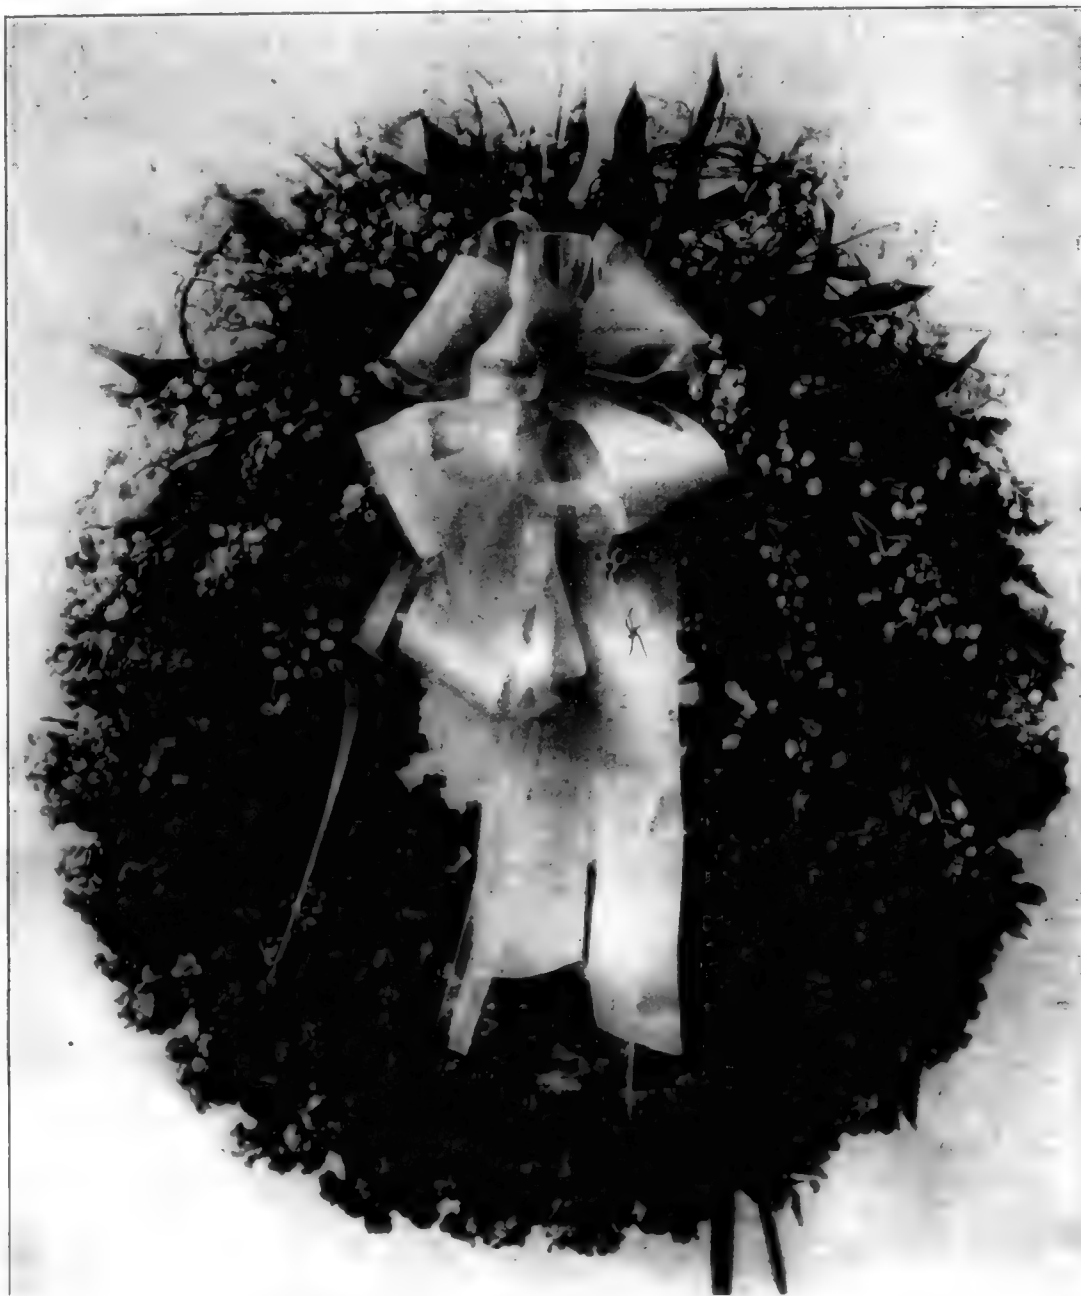

If the plants themselves are not at fault, there must be something radically wrong in the store. Do you light with gas? Electricity is the only proper illuminant for a flower store. Even if the gas does not leak, and nearly all gas pipes do, the flame vitiates the atmosphere. Pure air is a necessity for the florist, for his cut flowers and for his plants; none of them will long retain their vitality without it. How about the ventilation? Is the store kept too hot or too dry? Of course, the plants themselves have the proper care? These are

RETAILERS' ADVERTISING

Retail florists never before did so much advertising in their local newspapers as they did at Easter, and a good many of them have been able to put two and two together, figuring out that the splendid Easter trade resulted in no small part from the publicity flowers received in the week preceding March 27.

It is an interesting fact that the articles everyone needs are the articles most extensively advertised. Does the advertising follow the need? Well, hardly! General advertising awakens the public to its desire for the article advertised. The more advertising of flowers the daily papers carry, the more the need for florists. The canners' association last year made an experiment in advertising canned goods in the general magazines; no attempt to advertise any one man's article; just general publicity for canned vegetables. The results were so satisfactory that a much larger fund is being raised for similar publicity next autumn.

Wreath of Violets and Valley.

merely a few suggestions; if you, being familiar with all the circumstances, cannot tell why your plants do not stand up well in your store, it is too much to expect that one knowing nothing of the facts can point out the trouble. Your window facing northeast should be an excellent one for displaying plants and cut flowers; it gets the sun for only a short time in the morning. Linoleum is commonly used for flooring in flower store windows. H. O.

It is within the possibilities that the flower business would get big returns on its money if everyone would chip in a few dollars to exploit the uses of flowers in the high priced pages of the "more than a million a minute" magazines.

But in the meantime the trade will have to rely on individual effort. Now is the time to begin, if you never have advertised, and now is no time to stop advertising if your business is flourishing.

The largest user of newspaper space among the retail florists of Chicago is the Fleischman Floral Co. One of its characteristic advertisements is reproduced on page 7. B. Rubel, president of the company, is one of the shrewdest retailers of those who have graduated from other lines into the flower business. "One can't always see the direct result of an advertisement," said Mr. Rubel the other day. "We have been spending quite a sum in the leading newspapers this season and sometimes there has been little direct response to the advertisements, but we are learning what sort of an advertisement pulls the direct replies; offer a special article at a definite price and people ask for it, both in the store and over the phone. But advertising has a far greater value than the direct sales resulting from it; its use enables the storekeeper to shape the public's idea of his store. You can make people think of it as the synonym for exclusiveness, or you can disabuse them of such an idea; in short, you can make it the popular store of the town—the popular place for well-to-do folks to buy; or you can make a bargain counter store of your flower shop through your newspaper advertisement.

"Our business has increased steadily, and never so fast as since we began ad-

RINGING IN THE WEDDINGS.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from an advertisement of the George Wittbold Co., Chicago, designed by C. S. Richardson, who gets out many of these things for the Wittbold Co.

Louis Wittbold, who does not believe in trusting to luck for business, makes it a rule to send some sort of communication to every customer on the books once each month. These monthly advertisements take all sorts of forms. The effort is to make each one seasonable. For instance, the October remembrance was in the interest of the landscape department, and helped to bring orders for fall planting. Just before Christmas each customer who bought a Christmas tree in either of the last two years gets a neat reminder to call up the Wittbold number and order another tree. Weddings always are seasonable and whenever no other special subject demands attention a wedding decoration advertisement goes out. The one reproduced was a circular in two colors, 9x12, and made to mail without an envelope.

The Wittbold policy of advertising the telephone has been notably successful in bringing business in other sections of the

MR. ELLIOTT ACCEPTS.

Wm. H. Elliott was not present at the time he was elected president of the American Rose Society in New York last month, but has written Secretary Hammond, signifying his acceptance, as follows:

Your notification of my election as president of the American Rose Society came duly to hand. Am rather surprised, under the circumstances, that I was selected for this position instead of one of the many able rose men who were present and who could have filled the position much better than I shall be able to do. However, I greatly appreciate the honor which has been tendered me and will certainly do my best for the interest of the American Rose Society. The great responsibility of this position, during the coming year, with our great national exhibition to be held in Boston, impresses me very much and I feel sure that the Rose Society can and will do its share towards the success of this great undertaking.

Thanking the society for the honor conferred and you personally for your kind notification, I remain, respectfully yours, W. H. ELLIOTT.

STARTING CANNAS.

Should canna bulbs be started in pots or put right in outdoor beds to start, and what price should the bulbs retail at? How soon can they be put outdoors in western Iowa? W. D. P. & S.

The best way to start cannas is to divide the roots. Lay these on a bench on a little moss. Sprinkle some moss over the roots. Spray lightly until they start to grow. Then pot off singly, using 4-inch pots. Started plants are much to be preferred to dry roots for bedding. If perchance the season after planting should prove cold and wet, many of the dry roots would rot. Plant outdoors the last of May or first week in June, just as soon as frost danger has passed. Retail prices should be 15 cents to 20 cents per started plant; $1.50 to $2 per dozen. C. W.

COLEUS AND VINCA.

Can you tell me what causes the leaves to dry up and fall off our coleus? There is no mealy bug to speak of. Our variegated vinca is also doing the same. The leaves are all getting spotted and then fall off. Z. & C.

Extreme dryness at the root, overfeeding with chemical fertilizers, or a too hot and dry house may either one have caused the leaves to drop off. Give the plants a light bench. Spray them overhead occasionally. Avoid an arid atmosphere. Pick off the affected foliage and they should soon show an improvement. C. W.

DESTRUCTION OF EEL WORMS.

Eelworms or nematodes in garden and greenhouse soil constitute a serious and troublesome pest for which it is extremely desirable to find some simple and practical remedy. Experiments on various methods of destroying eelworms have been carried on for many years by G. E. Stone, of the Massachusetts Experiment Station, and a recent report of that station gives some of the practical results of these experiments.

As Doctor Stone points out, the use of lime is often advocated for destroying the eelworms, but his experiments show that lime has little or no value for this purpose. In fact, it was found possible to keep eelworms alive for several days in a saturated solution of lime-water. "Undoubtedly the application of lime to greenhouse soil improves it by modifying city than that in which the store is located.

its acidity, but eelworms will thrive in soils which are not acid."

The use of formalin has been recommended, but the experiments at the Massachusetts Station indicate that this is not effective in killing the worms, and besides can not be used on soils containing growing plants on account of the injury likely to result to the plants.

"Of late years formalin has been recommended as a remedy for eelworms on violets. This is used by applying it to holes made in the soil where the plants are growing. The formalin being volatile, the gas penetrates the soil and is said to kill the worms. Our experiments with it would not seem to warrant the use of this method of treatment, as formalin is injurious to plants, and there is reason to believe that it would not affect in the least the eggs of eelworms, which are fairly well protected by a resistant covering," says the report.

The methods used with more or less success at the Massachusetts Station for destroying eelworms in greenhouse soils were as follows:

Sterilization.—This is one of the cheapest and best methods of destroying eelworms in greenhouse soil. It is necessary that the soil be heated to at least 180 degrees, and a higher temperature is better. This is accomplished by driving steam through the soil by a system of perforated pipes.

Freezing.—If the soil is frozen for any length of time the eelworms are destroyed, and some use has been made of this method by practical growers. As a rule, the soil is removed from the house and frozen in bulk out of doors.

Desiccation.—Drying the soil is destructive to eelworms, but it is difficult to dry soils sufficiently in deep benches to make this method effectual. The application of unslaked lime, however, will materially aid in drying the soil, by virtue of the water-absorbing qualities of the lime.

Trapping, or the catch-crop method.—It has been found in Germany that sowing very susceptible crops, like mustard or rape, on soil contaminated with eelworms, and, after the females have become encysted in the roots, pulling up the plants and exposing them to the drying rays of the sun, is capable of reducing the worms to some extent in contaminated soils. We have found, however, that two or three catch crops are much better than one.

The Massachusetts experiments indicate that in some instances simply flooding the soil may prove a successful means of destroying the eelworms, and that manure infected with eelworms may be safely used on garden and greenhouse crops if left for a sufficient length of time in water.

ASTERS FOR CUT FLOWERS.

Asters vs. Carnations.

In the last few years the aster has become quite an item as a summer cut flower. It takes the place of the carnation in a great many respects, during the hot summer months, when the carnation blooms are still small and unsalable.

Aster seed should be sown from March 1 till the last of May. In order to have a continuous crop and variety they Germinating and Planting.

We use flats 18x20x2 for germinating the seed. Fill the flats with light loam, and press firmly. When the seed is sown sift enough soil over the surface to cover the seed. We find, when watering seed just planted, that it is well to place a piece of paper the size of the box over the seed. This method prevents the water from washing the soil off of the seed. We leave the paper on until the seed shoots show through the soil, and then take the paper off, as there is no danger of washing the seed out, for the soil will have a thin crust on it by that time.

The time of planting must be governed by your climate; if you are in no danger of getting a frost after May 10, plant your earliest crop then, and after that you can plant at intervals until the end of June. For the early, small growing varieties you can set them twelve inches between the plants and fifteen inches between the rows, but the strong growing varieties need twenty inches each way. I do not think it pays to plant them closer. There should be a space of two feet every four or six rows, for a path to walk in and also for your water pipe.

The texture of the soil has no material importance providing it has plenty of manure, and water can be applied. Asters will grow in anything from gravelly loam to a heavy clay. In ordinary summers you cannot get along without watering. Water is practically the life of the plant. A good many crops of asters have proved worthless, simply because they did not receive the necessary amount of water. They should receive a thorough soaking once a week during dry weather.

There is no disbudding needed with asters, and all that is done by some growers is to pinch out the leading growth, or in other words the top of the center growth. It encourages the side growth, which is the crop, both in size and quantity. However, it is always well to take a few hundred plants and disbud them down to five and six shoots. Although this reduces the quantity, you will find that it will more than repay you, for the stems are of better length and the flowers are larger, consequently a higher price can be obtained.

The flowers should be cut with the stem as long as possible, just as soon as they are fully developed. For shipping to market the flowers are cut and bunched in lots of twenty-five, and then laid in a long box in double tiers. Fine flowers deserve to be laid in single tiers. Asters ship well and keep their form.

should be sown at certain intervals. Varieties differ greatly in their time of flowering. For instance, if you were to sow Queen of the Market and Semple's Branching, all on March 10, and treat them alike, you would have in bloom, first, Queen of the Market, and from four to five weeks later, Semple's Branching.

The white Queen of the Market is always a good seller, because it is in bloom just when there are no carnations. Yet it is well to have late asters too, for the later you pick them the better price you get.

MAX HERZOG'S NEW PLACE.

Max Herzog was formerly in the growing business at Gratiot Station, near St. Louis, where he had quite a plant. A few years ago he sold out to the railroad company at a handsome profit. After a few years out of the business he had such a longing to get back into it that he built a handsome retail establishment in St. Louis, at 2602 California avenue, at a cost of $1,500 for the show house, said to contain nearly 2,000 feet of glass. He opened for business the latter part of January and has had a nice trade since the opening day. His home is shown adjoining the greenhouse. His Easter trade was better than he expected. J. J. B.

SEASONABLESUGGESTIONS*Hardy Herbaceous Perennials.

While fall is the better season for planting nearly all herbaceous perennials, there are a few varieties which are better left until spring. Then, again, it is difficult to make many people believe that any other season than spring is suitable for planting any kind of hardy stock. Where these hardy perennials are fall planted, they become partly established and give vastly better results the following season than the stock set out in spring can possibly do. There are a few varieties, such as Japanese anemones, kniphofias and montbretias, which are of doubtful hardiness in some sections. These should be planted now, and any planting of other perennials should be done as soon as possible if any satisfactory results are wanted this season. Practically all these plants want a liberally manured and deeply plowed or spaded soil. Given this and thorough cultivation through the growing season, they can hardly fail to give good returns.

Seedlings of winter-sown perennials under glass will require transplanting into flats or coldframes which have a few inches of warm manure firmly tramped below the soil, just enough to counteract the change from fire heat. Early in May these can be set out in nursery rows, and all will make fine, salable plants by fall. Many will also bloom the first season. The demand for hardy perennials steadily grows and it behooves the retail florist, who has steady calls for them, to raise all he can himself. A few rows of them, as well as a border neatly planted, will act as a good advertisement and bring many customers.

Planting Deciduous Trees and Shrubs.

Nurserymen are everywhere taxed to the limit to fill orders for trees and shrubs in April. Particularly strenuous is the present spring, owing to the unusual forwardness of the season. Trees, practically dormant as a general rule in mid-April, are this year coming into leaf in March, and late frosts, which are more than probable, will undoubtedly cause serious damage.

Always, when plants are received, heel them in the ground at once. Moisten the roots if dry and tramp soil firmly about them until they can be planted. Make liberal holes for each tree and shrub when setting them out. Remove all stones and gravel. Add good, fresh loam; some well rotted manure, incorporated, is also advantageous. Refrain from using any fresh, rank manure, except as a mulch on the surface. Cut off any broken pieces of root. Spread the remainder out well. If they were dry when placed in the hole, water after adding some soil, and allow this to settle before filling in. It is a good plan to have a tub and to puddle the roots in clayey water before planting is done.

It need hardly be said that it is not possible to firm the roots too thoroughly. Loosely planted stock will never thrive. If you do not believe it, try one or two shrubs set firmly, and vice versa. The bulk of deciduous shrubs and some trees, like oaks, elms and lindens, especially such as are of a fairly large size, should be cut back rather hard after planting. It seems cruel treatment at the time, but pays in the end.

Planting Evergreens.

While it is the common practice to delay evergreen planting until deciduous stock is all in the ground, there is really no good reason for waiting for this. The notion that evergreens should not be planted until late in April or early in May is utterly erroneous. The sooner they are planted after frost leaves the ground, the better they will do. Always, if a possible thing, secure a ball of earth with evergreens and never allow it to become dry. We always like to have a hose or water barrel convenient when planting them, and fill the hole with water after the roots have been well covered. This insures damp roots and, other conditions being favorable, the chances are all in favor of such plants growing well.

Thorough firming of the soil and a mulch of short manure or partially decayed leaves should be given evergreens, particularly if they are nice specimens. Of course, small plants do not need all this fussing over. Rhododendrons, kalmias, andromedas and any other so-called broad-leaved evergreens should have a liberal mulching winter and summer. Rhododendrons should be planted where they will not get the morning sun. Kalmias grow well in shade, but bloom better in sunlight, as do andromedas.

Propagation.

It is not too late to propagate a number of the quicker growing bedding plants, such as heliotropes, ageratums, coleus, alternantheras and Salvia splendens. These can be rooted in two or three weeks and, if potted, will make nice, useful stock for late spring sales. It is difficult to handle each batch as they root and prevent them from becoming hardened and starved in the sand, but it pays to do it. Far too much stock is ruined in the propagating bench by occupying it too long. As the weather becomes warmer, it requires more water to keep the cuttings plump. A little neglect may mean the loss of an entire batch.

Seed Sowing.

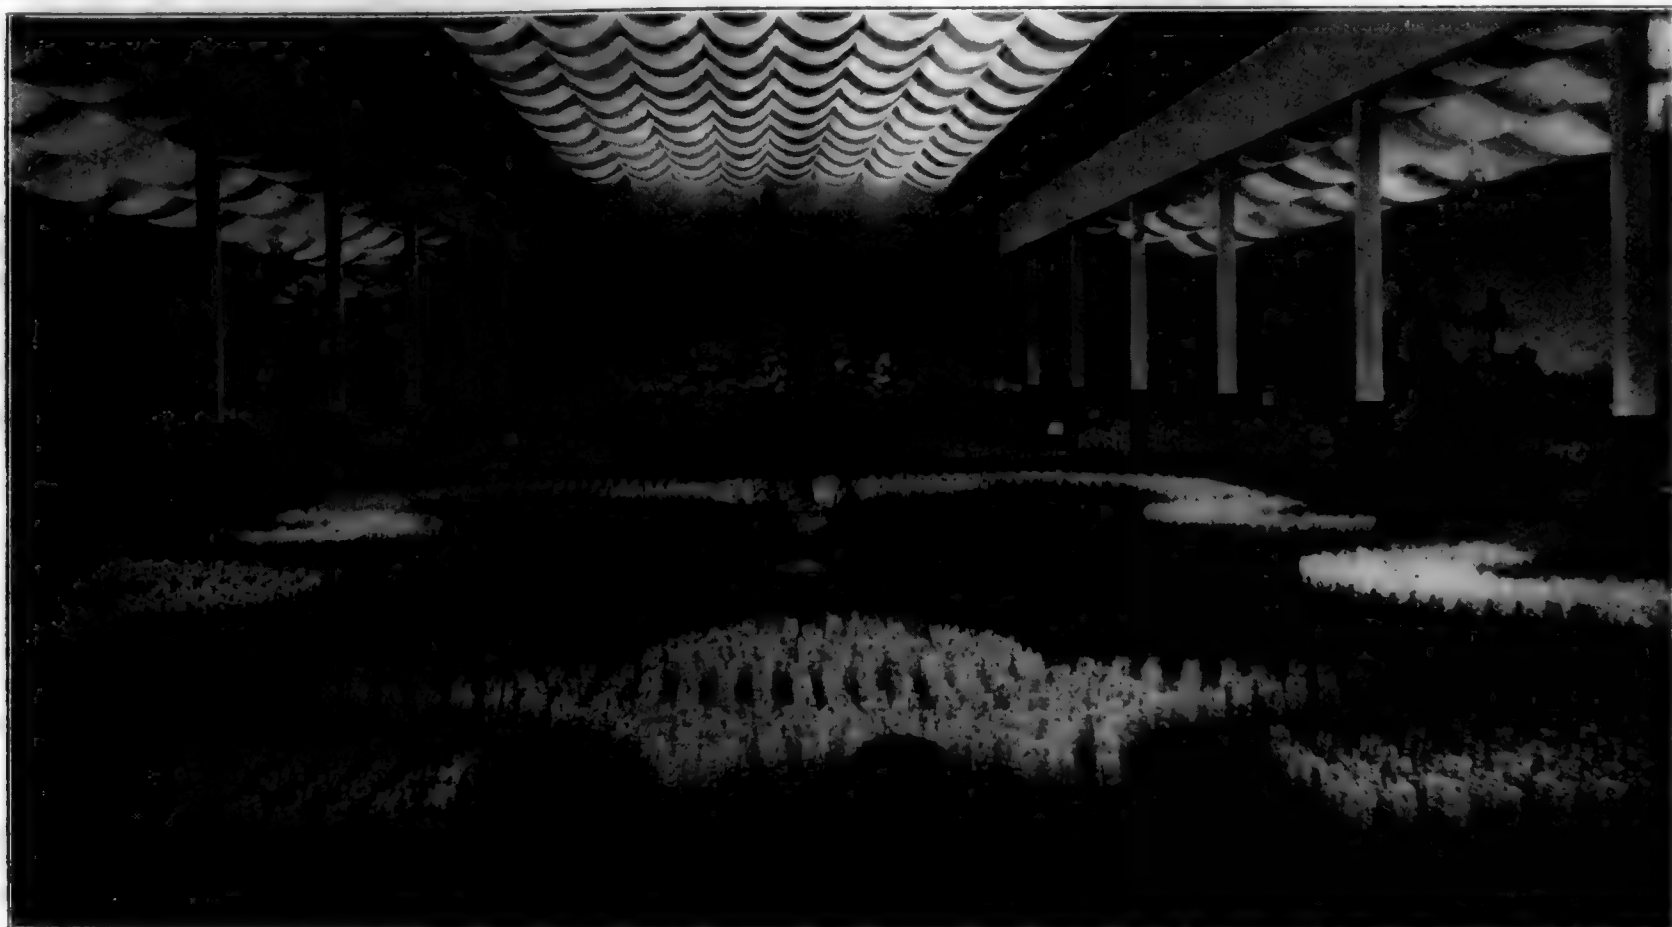

While the major portion of the annuals for bedding are now sown and many of them in pots or flats, there are some of rapid growth which may still be sown to good advantage. Among these are: Salvia splendens, zinnias, ten weeks' stocks, marigolds, cosmos, asters, ricinus and wigandias. Germinate in a warm, moist house and move to cooler quarters, well up to the light, before they become drawn.

Poinsettias.

Any time during the present month the poinsettia stock plants, which have been lying under the benches or packed away in flats of dry soil, should be shaken out and either potted singly, or, better still, planted more thinly in flats. Avoid too much water at the outset, but spray the tops freely. A temperature of 55 degrees at night is ample for starting them. In a warmer house the cuttings are soft and drawn, and the short, stocky ones, which can be rubbed off with a heel, are what root the best. Of course, plants from this early start would become much too leggy for pans, but for planting in benches they will be found excellent.

Stevia Serrata.

While putting in cuttings of other plants, do not forget a good batch of Stevia serrata. You can pot these off when rooted and get an abundant crop of cuttings from them for later propagation. This is a common and easily grown flower, which can be profitably sold at a low price. No retail grower can afford to be without it.

Rambler Roses.

It is time to think about a batch of rambler roses for flowering next Easter. April 16, 1911, seems a far-away cry, but to get first-class ramblers at that time you need to start preparatory work now. There are two methods that are adopted in growing these roses. The one most commonly followed is to purchase field-grown stock and pot it in the fall. These plants will grow and flower quite nicely, but if you want really first-class stock, something superior to that carried by your neighbors, purchase your plants from a reputable nursery now. Pot into 6-inch to 8-inch pots, according to their strength. Cut down close to the pot. Place in a greenhouse kept about 50 degrees at night. The plants will soon throw out numerous breaks from the bottom. You do not need all of these. Reduce to three or four to a plant. Tie up to a stout stake as they grow and keep under glass until June. Then plunge outdoors, where you can use the hose on them freely. The trusses on plants thus grown are vastly superior to what you can get on fall potted stock.

Crimson Rambler is less popular than it used to be, the pink varieties having largely displaced it. Among these, Dorothy Perkins, both pink and white varieties, Tausendschon, Lady Gay, Farquhar, Wedding Bells and Hiawatha are all fine. The last named carries single crimson scarlet flowers and has sold remarkably well the present season. The pink varieties will make many new breaks from the bottom during the season, far more than are wanted. These should be rubbed off from time to time.

THE DUTCH BULB GROWERS.

Haarlem Jubilee Show.

The widely advertised, great fiftieth anniversary jubilee exhibition of the Dutch Bulb Growers' Association was opened at Haarlem, Holland, March 23. It is composed of a permanent exhibition of bulbs, plants, shrubs, etc., in the open, which will be continued until the middle of May, and four special exhibitions, each of about one week's duration, to be held at intervals in three special pavilions.

The bulb district of Holland, always worth a visit in April, is specially interesting this year on account of the exhibition. The happy idea of celebrating the jubilee in this manner reflects credit on the association and confers an immense boon on the visitors, for within the compass of several acres practically all varieties of hyacinths, tulips, narcissi, crocuses, etc., may be seen under natural conditions, and, in addition, the specialties of the Boskoop trade.

Aim and Scope of the Show.

The primary object of the exhibition is to cultivate in the mind of the public a wider and deeper interest in bulb culture for spring gardening, by demonstrating a variety of color schemes and successions of flowers, so that the wholesale bulb growers in Holland and the retailers throughout the world may benefit by increased sales. Haarlem Woods, a combination of park and woodland in the suburbs of the town, has, in the hands of the exhibition landscape gardener, been converted into a great flower garden, with hundreds of beds of many sizes and shapes, all planted with bulbs.

Some idea of the magnitude of the exhibition may be gleaned from the prize list, which contains twenty-four classes for hyacinths in beds, the smallest to contain at least seventy-five bulbs, but there is only one class at that. Others run from 100 up to 1,000; then on to 1,500, 2,000 and 3,000 bulbs. In tulips there are forty-three classes for beds and these range through the hundreds up to 1,500, 2,000 and 3,000 bulbs. What a glorious display they will make when in bloom! In narcissi there are twelve classes on similar lines, and the same may be said of crocuses, the leading attraction outdoors on the opening day. About thirty classes are devoted to anemones, scillas and other small bulbs, and 180 classes or more to conifers, hollies, azaleas, rhododendrons, etc., in plantations of twelve, twenty-five, fifty and 100 each. These classes will not be judged until April, when the display is at its best.

Some of the Exhibitors.

Among the exhibitors are such well known firms as E. H. Krelage & Son, Haarlem; J. J. Grullemans & Son, Lisse; J. Schilpzand & Son, Van Meerbeck & Co. and M. Van Waveren & Son, Hillegom; J. Prins & Son, S. A. Van Konijnenburg & Co., P. Van Der Meer & Co. and C. P. Alkemade, Noordwijk; Ant. Roozen & Son, Overveen; Roes & Goemans, Vogelenzang; Warnaar & Co., Sassenheim; Bakkum & Kabbel and A. Blokker, Uitgeest; and among nurserymen, M. Koster & Son, C. B. Van Nes & Co., D. A. Koster, J. H. Hardizer, Otto-lander & Hooftman and C. Van Der Kraats, all of Boskoop; and from Dedemsvaart, B. Ruys and Van Der Elst, Tottenham Nurseries.

The first temporary exhibition was opened simultaneously with the permanent exhibition and therein lay the great center of interest on the opening day. Hyacinths were the leading feature in bulbs; later on, tulips and narcissi will have their day.

Hyacinths and Tulips.

The center of the main pavilion represented a flower garden with twelve beds cut out in the turf, in which hyacinths in pots were bedded out. This in itself was a charming show—a collective exhibit from the growers of Overveen and

There were not many new varieties, the growers relying on old favorites, such as Charles X, Marie Legraye, Pres. Grevy, Pres. Carnot, Leon Simon; also Andenhen and Ludwig Späth, fine in many exhibits. For plants, Felix & Dykhuis, of Boskoop; E. Van Nes & Co., of Boskoop, and C. M. Alderden, of Aalsmeer, were to the front; and for vases of cut blooms on long stems, Alderden, Harmsen, Hilverda & Co. and J. C. Hohn, all from Aalsmeer.

a novelty after the style of Pink Pearl in habit and color, the flowers beautifully fimbriated.

Next in importance were the fine groups of Azalea mollis, A. Sinensis, A. rustica fl. pl., etc. G. Van Waveren & Kruijff, Sassenheim, made a nice display with pink spiræas. Primula obconica, from several growers, for range of colors and size of flowers could not be surpassed. Suspended from the roof of the pavilion, and in pots also, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine were simply spherical masses of inflorescence. Groups of arums, superb lilies of the valley and many other subjects contributed to a grand display.

The Novelties.

Novelties were not numerous. In addition to the rhododendrons already named, Van Der Elst, of the Tottenham Nurseries, Dedemsvaart, exhibited Anemone pulsatilla rosea, a fine acquisition, but he has not yet a sufficient stock to put it into commerce. He had many offers for a part or the whole of his present stock, but refused to sell. C. B. Van Tubergen, Haarlem, had a fine collection of new freesias, in a dozen or more colored varieties, all named. A few of the best are: Abundance, pink, very free flowering; Contrast, white, with deep orange markings; Safrano, yellow, and La Phare, pink.

Taken all around, the exhibition was a grand success, ably organized by the committee, with E. H. Krelage as chairman and J. De Brenk as secretary. It reflected credit on their management and on the cultural skill of the Dutch growers.

Bloemendaal. The culture, the designs and the harmony of colors were the admiration of all, and the special prize of honor which was awarded was fully merited.

Next in importance came the classes for hyacinths in pots, classes of 120, 100 and so on; also classes for hyacinths in pans. Naturally, one expects to see in Haarlem the best that can be seen in hyacinths. There were several fine collections and some keen contests among the growers. Typically Dutch, they could be seen with cigars in their mouths and pointed sticks in their hands, busy up to the last minute of staging, arranging every bell with methodical precision on the spikes.

The principal honors went to W. J. Eldering & Son, Overveen; J. C. Gehrels, Overveen; C. Van Der Meij, Lisse; A. Roozen & Son, Overveen, and M. Van Waveren & Son, Hillegom.

Tulips were not so strongly represented as one would have expected. No doubt, they will be more in evidence later. C. Eggink, Voorschoten, and M. Van Waveren & Son secured the leading prizes; and for Darwins, Van Meerbeek & Co., Hillegom.

Forced Flowering Shrubs.

Those who went to see a great show of bulbs were (apart from the hyacinths) somewhat disappointed. What, then, made the show? The forced flowering shrubs from the nurseries of Boskoop and Aalsmeer, notably the lilacs. Probably lilacs in such profusion and perfection were never before seen at an exhibition. The lilac forcers from Paris, in company with Jacs. Smits, of Naarden, who had the judging in hand, had a long and difficult task to perform.

Groups of Plants.

The leading class for groups of plants brought out many exhibitors. The gold medal and first prize were awarded to Wezelenburg & Co., Hazerswonde, for a grand collection of rhododendrons, azaleas, laburnums, wistarias, etc., well grown and rich in many colors. The second prize went to M. Koster & Son, Boskoop. In rhododendrons the best collection came from C. B. Van Nes & Co. Boskoop, who were strong with Pink Pearl, White Pearl and Princess Juliana,

MILLER ON BULBS.

E. S. Miller, of Wading River, N. Y., lectured before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, in Horticultural hall, Boston, March 12, on "Lilies in the Home Garden." The lecture was illustrated by a splendid series of beautifully colored stereopticon slides. The speaker gave an entertaining account of the history of the lily, of which about 150 species are known to cultivation. The "lily of the field" of scriptures was, he said, an anemone and not a lily at all. Climatic conditions are so variable in the United States that it is a difficult matter to mention what are really hardy lilies in particular sections. Some satisfactory varieties on Long Island would not do well in New England, and vice versa. Lily seeds he raises in beds outdoors, five feet apart, sowing five to ten seeds per square inch of surface. Excelsior is used as a mulch, both for seedbeds and flowering plants, and proves satisfactory. A good winter mulch to prevent heaving of the bulbs is necessary. As the bulbs are lifted the roots are torn away from them. The same is true of many hardy perennial plants.

(In center, Hyacinths in pans from Ant. Roozen & Son.)

The speaker regretted that dealers too often recommend the more tender kinds as being hardy and purchasers, trying them, become discouraged. Many varieties can not stand our hot summer climate, and to grow them successfully it is necessary to produce artificial conditions which resemble the natural conditions in which they originated; rock-work, plenty of moisture, but never standing water about the bulbs in winter, and shade give these conditions. Along shrubby borders many kinds do specially well. Soil is of less importance than efficient drainage. Any soil, almost, will grow lilies if fertilizers are used. Fresh manure should not come in contact with the bulbs, and when commercial fertilizers are used they should be thoroughly mixed with the soil. Planting can be done in spring, but fall is far better, October and November being suitable months. He said he has planted as late as Christmas with good results. Owing to the late arrival of Japanese varieties, it is best to prepare the ground in the fall and mulch with straw to exclude frost until planting can be done.

The Indian and Californian lilies are not a success outdoors. They should be kept in pots or pans in coldframes or cold greenhouses. Small bulbed lilies should be planted three to four inches deep, larger ones eight to twelve inches, L. Henryi doing well at twelve inches deep. Lilies have few insect enemies, but are subject to disease, for which spraying is only a partially successful remedy.

Some of the more reliable lilies for planting in cold climates are: L. speciosum in variety, L. auratum, tigrinum, the single forms being preferable to the double; candidum, Wallacei, elegans, Canadense, Chalcedonicum, Hansonii, Batemanii, Henryi, Brownii, Dahuricum and superbum. Varieties suitable for warmer many failures in lily culture arose from their being planted in specially prepared peat beds. He sent home some 30,000 bulbs of L. Henryi, which grew plentifully in clefts of the rocks near Ichang. Of the newer lilies, L. Sutcherenense and L. myriophyllum are fine, he said, and will become popular garden sorts when procurable from dealers. The bulbs of L. tigrinum are cooked and eaten by the Chinese and considered an excellent dish. They are cooked and served like onions, which they somewhat resemble in taste, but without a milk sauce being poured over them.

HARDY VINES.

Will you please advise us as to the best variety of hardy vines for a tile house, 25x35? We want vines that will grow quickly. What size should we buy in order to get the house covered as soon as possible? Also name some good hardy vines for porches. How far apart should they be planted, and what kind of soil do they require? C. W. E.

If you want a clinging vine for your tile house, there is nothing better than the Boston ivy, Ampelopsis Veitchii. Ampelopsis quinquefolia, var. Engelmannii, is another variety which is even hardier than A. Veitchii and clings closely. Set the plants four feet apart.

The following are desirable porch plants: Roses, Dorothy Perkins, Lady Gay and Hiawatha; Clematis paniculata, Lonicera brachypoda Halliana (Hall's honeysuckle), Aristolochia Sipho, Wistaria Chinensis, Celastrus scandens and Lycium Chinense. Buy 2-year-old plants. Prepare the ground by trenching thirty inches deep, removing stones and gravel, and adding plenty of well-rotted manure. The plants named should have a space of five to six feet each to grow in. C. W.

There was quite an animated discussion following Mr. Miller's lecture. E. H. Wilson spoke entertainingly of lilies in China, where some thirty species are found, including many of the finest garden sorts. They are, in every case but one, found growing in loam at depths of eight to eighteen inches. He believed

FORCING LILIES

FOR EASTER

No Easy Task.

I do not suppose there is anything more uncertain or requiring a greater amount of skill and attention than the lily, especially the growing of good lilies for Easter. To make this paper interesting it has been suggested that I take up the entire subject of forcing lilies, from years ago to years to come, to illustrate my subject by samples of well grown and diseased plants; in fact, to enter upon a long and learned discourse and kick up such a lot of dust and baffle my subject to such an extent that you would have to catch on to my coat-tail in order to follow me. But in this I saw no use. The diseased plants you all have seen enough of; you have had a heart's scald of them—the good ones are all sold.

Two Varieties to Grow.

As far as my experience goes, there are only two varieties of lilies worth attempting for Easter, the giganteum and the Formosa lily. To grow in quantity and to produce good, even results, there is at present only one lily, the giganteum. This is a variety almost perfect. It comes true to its name; for health it is all that could be desired. This year out of 13,000 bulbs I did not have to throw out ten plants from disease, but as far as health goes I can give the Formosa an equally good character.

Now to get down to business, the growing of lilies for Easter, let us suppose there is only one variety, the giganteum. The first essential is to get good bulbs. I do not think it makes any difference from whom you procure them; any house of repute can supply you. My bulbs this year came in three separate lots. I saw no difference; they were all in perfect condition. Just as soon as you receive your bulbs get them potted.

A New Way to Pot.

I have a way of potting that may interest you, as I never knew anyone else to pot in the same way. It is a quick and cheap way of doing what would often, in the ordinary way of potting, be a slow and worrisome job, especially when you grow in quantity. A few days before we receive our bulbs we have a large space cleared on the ground near the soil pile. We then cover this space with 2,000 to 2,500 empty 6-inch pots, say twenty to twenty-five pots wide to 100 long; then have a man fill the pots about two-thirds full of soil. We are then ready for the bulbs. When the bulbs arrive, another 2,000 to 2,500 pots are placed on the floor. The bulb cases are then opened and sorted, selecting all the best bulbs in the case, the cullings being kept separate. The good bulbs are for growing on in 6-inch pots; the cullings we place two bulbs in a pot. Then we take a 16-foot board to place upon the top of the pots to stand, or rather, kneel upon, and start to plant, two men planting and two following up to fill the pots with soil.

In filling the pots we throw plenty of soil on top, leveling it with the back of a rake. In this way we have often been able to use up 10,000 pots in three days, and last fall we did 10,400 pots in three days.

I think you will acknowledge this to be a much more expeditious way of getting your lilies potted than the usual way of potting at a bench.

laboring men and not interfering at all with our regular work, the bulbs are now ready to wheel inside to be placed under a bench. It is just as well to leave them outside, covering carefully and bringing in later, or at your convenience. We mostly leave ours out until we are rid of the chrysanthemums, although it does not hurt to bring them in at once if it suits your convenience to do so. We always like to have our lilies inside on the bench by December 15, and that reminds me of the great difference in forcing a lily for Easter.

Years ago, when we commenced growing lilies, we grew Harrisii and got our bulbs in August or early September. We would pot at once and have them two or three inches high when brought inside, but we always had trouble in getting them in bloom for Easter. Of late years, since the Japanese bulbs have been grown, although we do not get them until November, and often late November, we have no trouble, although, as in this year, we often are needlessly anxious.

Now we come to the growing. We always start the lilies off at a cool temperature and hold them in this temperature according to the date of Easter. The longer they stay at a cool temperature in the early stage, the better. After we see they are well rooted and starting to grow, the temperature can be increased up to any reasonable extent, until they show evidence of making buds; then you had better go slow. From the time that they start to make bud to the time the bud is well developed is what might be called the critical period; stunted plants or blasted buds may easily be your lot. All that can be said of this period is to exercise the greatest care.

Heat and the Hose.

In growing a lily for Easter the credit is due to two people, the fireman and the man at the hose. There is no plant that loves syringing more than does a lily, yet no plant resents more quickly an oversupply of water at the roots. On a bright day I often syringe two or three times, and have frequently at night gone into the houses and given them a good syringing, wetting down the paths, and also the steam pipes. I think syringing is very beneficial in growing lilies, especially if you have an apparatus for heating your water. We have an arrangement for tempering the water that enables us to have a constant flow of water at a temperature of 70 degrees and upwards. This water heater is a simple apparatus; anyone who uses steam heat could, at the expense of a few dollars, so equip himself.

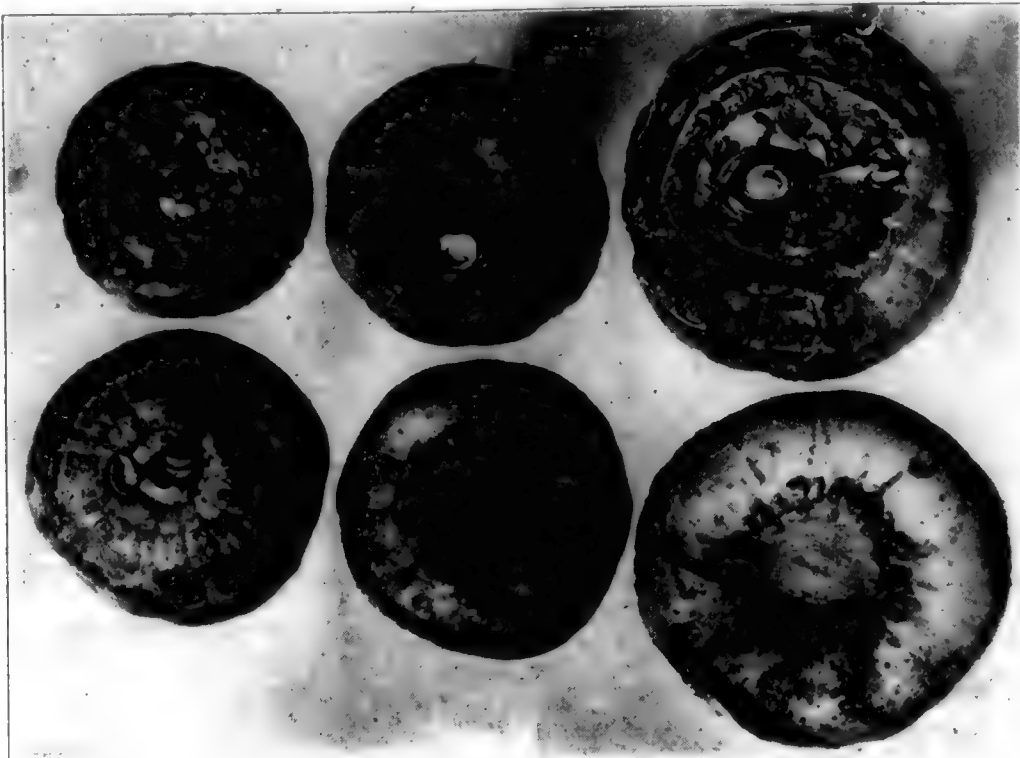

After a lily is in condition to stand it, I believe the quicker it is grown the better, only, of course, remembering to gauge the growth and development according to the date for Easter.

As far as growing lilies for Easter, I must say this year was one calculated to try men's souls. We did not get our bulbs until November 18, and, on account of the late chrysanthemums, could not get them on the benches until December 24. Out of 10,000 pots, I do not believe twenty-five showed growth above the soil. Then came the month of anxiety and worry. How slowly they seemed to grow! How quickly the weeks flew by! A constant fluctuation between hope and fear; cloudy weather seemed our portion, and still the few short weeks we had to Easter were being rapidly counted off. "Eight more weeks," we anxiously said to ourselves; then seven, then six, then five.

How Long Does It Take?

It is usually calculated that it takes six weeks for a lily flower to develop from the time the bud first shows. It can be done in less. I would prefer to have six weeks to do it in, rather than attempt to do it in four, yet it can be done in four. Just to satisfy myself how long it would take, or rather how quickly a lily could be brought into bloom, this year I marked a few plants.

February 22 I selected a few plants, marking them "No buds in sight." February 25 buds could be seen on several and two days later all showed bud. We were then running a night temperature of 70 degrees, or a little over, letting the day temperature with sunshine run higher. They were all in bloom in time for Easter, just taking, you see, from four weeks to a month from the time of first showing bud.

Who Gets the Money?

One of the most important points in growing a lily is the selling of it. I think I am speaking advisedly when I say it does not pay to grow lilies to sell at 10 cents. Now don't misunderstand me on this point; I did not mean that a lily cannot be grown and sold at 10 cents per bud and not yield sufficient margin for the grower to pay his debts, but that is all it will yield; it will give the grower no real profit; that is, no such profit as will in any way reward him for his risk, trouble and anxiety.

Right at this point I cannot refrain from wondering if we are conducting our business in as wise a manner as we should. Are we not just stumbling along in the dark?

Every year, as long as I can remember, I have heard the report that lilies were going to be scarce, but without any real foundation. No one knows how many lilies it takes to fill the requirements of the city of Philadelphia. Don't you think we should know? If we only knew, or had a way of finding out, we would commence to be on a business basis; we would then be in a position to regulate prices. I have thought that a Florists' Board of Trade might be a benefit, with committees to look after the different branches of the trade. The committee on lilies would get reports from all the seed houses and know just how many bulbs were in the growers' hands, or get the report direct from the growers, with monthly reports as to progress, condition and number expected to be put on the market, in much the same way as the government gets its agricultural reports.

I believe if we all were to cut down the lilies grown twenty-five per cent, try to grow better lilies, and get a better price, it would be a move in the right direction.

There is one thing sure; none of us makes enough money. We have the most anxious, worrisome business in the world; everything we buy costs more, and still more, but every time we get our returns we find them less.

Wholesalers Earn Theirs.

The only ones I see making any money on flowers are the street fakers and the commission men, yet I think the commission man deserves all he gets. Without these hustling and enterprising business men, who are ever advertising to find an outlet for our goods, I fear often our business would be in a bad way.

Two-thirds of the time the flower market is glutted, prices demoralized and the growers building more houses to throw more stuff upon the market, to compete with themselves. Would it not be advisable to call a halt, to let every grower who has more than 10,000 feet of glass pledge himself not to build any more for five years, until the market catches up with the supply? Almost every week during the season we read in the trade papers of carnations, roses, violets or lilies being a glut on the market. Let us work for prosperity and better prices—not for the street fakers.

Lilies, to afford the grower a proper profit, should bring 15 cents per flower. We have been too much in the habit of rubbing shoulders with poverty. Let us put ourselves upon an equality with other professions and get more of the sweets of life and not so much of the bitter.

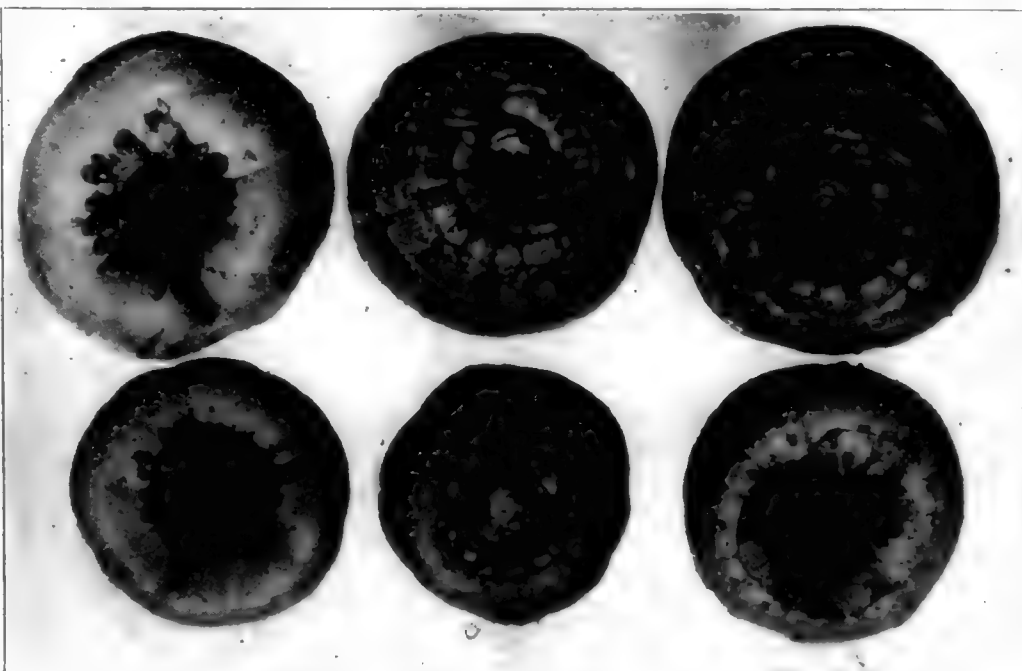

GLADIOLUS BULB ROTS.

Co-operative Experiments.

During the last season many letters of inquiry have come to the Department of Plant Pathology asking for information concerning diseases of gladioli. Many growers are anxious to know how to control or prevent the rot which affects the corms, and which is now alarmingly prevalent, in some cases causing serious loss. During the season of 1908 and 1909 the writer undertook an investigation of these diseases and succeeded, after some difficulty, in locating the organisms responsible for several types of disease. From quite similar types of rot, three different fungi have been isolated, grown in pure culture, and the diseases reproduced artificially by inoculation. With two of these the inoculation experiments of last season have been repeated within the last month and the results seem conclusive. The inoculated corms have, in every case, developed the rot in less than two weeks, while the check corms remained perfectly sound. I have now, therefore, no doubt that the fungi which we have located are the cause of the diseases. A full description of these diseases and the associated fungi will appear later in a bulletin of the Cornell Experiment Station. A brief description, with some notes, is given in the Rural New Yorker, March 19, 1910.

Unfortunately we are as yet unable to give any definite information as to methods of control, and have not the time at our disposal necessary to personally conduct experiments along this line. Knowing this, one or two growers have generously volunteered to carry out some coöperative experiments. In accordance with this suggestion, I have prepared a plan for such field and harvesting experiments as we think most promising, judging by what we have learned of the nature and cause of these diseases. This plan is submitted below, for the benefit of growers who might be interested. We shall be glad to have as many as possible test out any or all of the points here mentioned and report results to us. The larger the number who can duplicate these experiments, the more reliable will be the conclusions to be drawn therefrom.

Judging from what we now know concerning the fungi causing these diseases, it does not seem probable that any method of spraying can be devised to control them. They are evidently more or less soil organisms and are probably carried over in the soil, or in or on diseased seed corms, or possibly even adhering to the surface of healthy corms that have been in contact with diseased ones. As to which of these methods prevails or when and how infection takes place, we have yet to learn. We therefore consider it probable that certain sanitary methods of handling the crop would naturally reduce the rot in many cases. With this in view, the following experiments are suggested:

Field Experiments.

Plat I. Perfectly sound seed corms on soil where gladioli have never been grown.

Plat II. Perfectly sound seed corms, sterilized by immersing in five per cent formalin for ten minutes, on soil where gladioli have never been grown.

Plat III. Diseased seed corms on soil where gladioli have never been grown.

Plat IV. Healthy seed corms on soil where diseased corms had grown last year.

Plat V. Diseased corms on soil where diseased gladioli had grown last year.

Plat VI. Healthy seed corms, sterilized, on diseased soil.

Plat VII. Healthy and diseased seed corms on diseased soil, heavily limed, two tons per acre.

Plat VIII. Healthy and diseased seed corms on diseased soil fertilized heavily with acid phosphate, 1,000 pounds per acre. In selecting sound seed corms the husks must be removed and each examined very carefully.

In cultivating, the infection may be carried to the new soil plats by tools. If available, use another set for these. If not, cultivate clean plats first each time.

Observe conditions at harvest time and store corms from each plat separately.

Sort in winter, to determine the percentage of rot in each.

Harvesting Experiments.

I would suggest some experiments in regard to harvesting. It seems that the disease continues to develop quite seriously after harvesting, in storage. Now, whether the infection has all taken place in the field or continues to take place in storage, we are not able to state positively. If it continues to take place in storage, there is a possibility of the germs of the fungus being spread from the affected bulbs to the healthy ones during the process of harvesting. To illustrate: If the corms are harvested and thrown together in the bins with the old mother corms still adhering, and are allowed to stand for a couple of weeks or so before cleaning up and removing the old corms, there would seem to be ample chance for the germs to be spread into all the corms of the bin from the few diseased ones, by means of the particles of soil that are adhering to them. During this time, unless they have been thoroughly dried at harvesting, they are likely to take more or less of a sweat, which results, perhaps, in production of sufficient moisture to favor infection, wherever the fungus is present. Now, you will understand, of course, that this is merely a suggestion as to what might happen, and I would not dare to label it as even probable, as yet, but experiments as outlined below should give us some light on this point.

First, select some variety that is susceptible to decay in storage. In harvesting in the fall, allow each corm to lie where it has been pulled until dry. When thoroughly cured, remove the mother corm, husk and treat with five per cent formalin for about five minutes and then sort. Do not pile in heaps or bins before treatment. Another lot, from a row close by, treat in a similar way, omitting the formalin treatment. In part of these omit the husking, but simply allow individual corms to dry thoroughly before being heaped together, and remove the mother corm and as much of the adhering soil as possible before they are heaped together in the bins. Another row, close by, gather and dry and store in bins with the mother corms attached, and re-sort two or three weeks later in the usual way.

THE CARNATION.

Its Society.

The objects of the American Carnation Society are the improvement of the carnation; to familiarize its members with the best and most economical methods of its cultivation, to encourage the production of new and better varieties than heretofore have been grown, and to condemn the dissemination of new and improperly tested sorts that are no improvement over older kinds.

The Carnation of Yore.

The old-fashioned carnation or pink has been a favorite garden flower for over 2,000 years, but it is summer blooming only. In European gardens hundreds of varieties of it are grown, and this has been the case for 400 years. It has several popular names, such as gillyflower, sops of wine and clove pink.

It is claimed that the name carnation was given to it because of the common use made of its blossoms in garlands in ancient times. Pliny mentions it in his list of garland flowers used by the Romans and Athenians, and Nicander also gives it in his list of Greek garland plants. Others insist that the name of carnation simply means the flesh-colored tint of the blossoms.

Carnation'd like a sleeping infant's cheek.
—Byron.

Divine flower is simply the meaning of the generic name, Dianthus; Dios, divine; anthos, flower.

Gillyflower, often applied to carnations in general, more pointedly refers to the variously colored or variegated flowered sorts.

The fairest flowers o' the season
Are our carnations and streak'd gillyflowers.
—Winter's Tale, Act IV, Scene 3.

Sops in wine was a name given to the crimson clove pink. Chaucer tells us

And many a clove gilofre,
To put in ale,
Whether it be moist or stale.

The Carnation of Today.

The carnation of today is not the carnation of our forefathers. Long ago carnations were summer-blooming only and such a thing as perpetual winter flowering sorts was unknown. Furthermore, the methods of greenhouse cultivation, as now pursued, were practically undiscovered prior to forty years ago. In olden times greenhouse carnations were grown and bloomed in pots, but nowadays florists plant them out in beds on open benches in their glass houses. No other method would pay.

The carnations we grow are known the world over as "American" carnations, for in their general makeup they differ materially from the rigidly symmetrical European varieties. Europe requires a perfectly circular flower, the petals of which are free from notches, indentions or fringe; with us, providing the flower is otherwise good, we pay no attention to indentions or fringe on the outer petals. Besides, in beauty and purity of color, health, vigor, adaptability and floriferousness the American varieties are superior to those of Europe, and even the conservative Old World is becoming alive to this fact, and our carnations are taking precedence over their own sorts.

What constitutes a good carnation? First, the plant must be a healthy and vigorous grower, a free and continuous bloomer and show no tendency to disease; the flower stems must be stiff, strong, erect and leafy; the blossom must be large, full, symmetrical, and of a clean, clear, pleasing color; the calyx or flower cup must not burst, and blooms must keep well after being cut and show no inclination to go to sleep.

Three inches across is the average size of a good carnation, but we have many varieties that exceed this measurement, while some of the new sorts reach four inches through. The hybridists are working for four-inch flowers. The Malmaisons, a gigantic class of carnations grown in Europe, have massive flowers four to five inches in diameter, but their blooming period is of quite limited duration, and our florists declare there is more money in growing Lawsons at $1 a hundred than in Malmaisons at 50 cents apiece, and our gardeners are generally credited with some business sagacity. Unfortunately, in our rush after size and appearance we are losing sight of that most delightful quality of the old-fashioned carnation—fragrance; while some kinds are deliciously scented, other sorts have lost in this direction.

Raising New Sorts.

We must keep on raising new varieties, for old varieties run out. Twenty years ago Hector was our best scarlet, Grace Wilder, pink; Mrs. Fisher, white, and Anna Webb, crimson. Today none of these is on the market; they have been completely superseded by others.

Does raising new sorts pay? Properly handled, yes. Some years ago the country was startled by a plunge into carnations by Thomas W. Lawson, king of frenzied finance. It was reported that he paid Peter Fisher $30,000 for the stock and name of one carnation, namely, Mrs. T. W. Lawson, now commonly known as the Lawson. Everybody considers this has been the best and most profitable carnation to the general florist ever raised. Anything bearing Peter Fisher's name will sell, because he is so exceedingly exacting as regards the quality of everything he sends out.

Now about the fabulous price. When a florist has as good a thing as Lawson was, he keeps it, grows it and propagates it with all his might until he can produce 100,000 or 200,000 cuttings of it, and then he puts it on the market, say at $10 per hundred. This for the first year; the second year may be $6 and the third year $3. But can he sell so many? When certified by the American Carnation Society and raised and disseminated by such men as Fisher, Dailedouze, May or Hill, it's more often a question of stock enough to supply the demand than too much. But it isn't all profits, for the expense of raising, growing and testing the discarded multitude has to be included with that of multiplying and selling the accepted kind.

In Pittsburg white and pink carnations are the favorites, with a fair demand for scarlet and a limited call for crimson, but there is no demand at all for variegated or yellow sorts.

PANSIES WINTER-KILLING.

I am sending a sample of my pansies. I had eight large beds last fall transplanted and looking fine, but when I took the boards off this spring this is the way I found them, all killed out. They had a nice start last fall and when they froze I put glass and boards on them. A year ago they were frozen in ice one inch deep and came out in good condition. Could you explain the reason why they have winter-killed?

B. F.

The samples received were so shriveled it was impossible to tell anything about them. You do not state whether or not you placed any mulch of leaves, hay or straw over your plants after the ground was well frozen. This in itself is usually sufficient on well drained ground, where no water will stand, to carry them through in good shape. The only reason I can suggest is that the plants have been too warm and without air for too long a period. So long as they are frozen firmly they will take no harm, but coverings should be removed and some air given, if only occasionally, during mild spells of weather during winter. It is the warmth and lack of air which kills, not the cold. When snow lies on the ground all winter, these and other hardy plants always are in the best shape in spring. Warm winters, with frequent temperature changes, cause heavy losses.

GOOD HERBACEOUS PERENNIALS.

Rehmannia Angulata.

Rehmannia angulata cannot be classed as reliably hardy in our northern states. It will live through an ordinary winter, but it is better to give it the protection of a coldframe. Introduced by James Veitch & Sons, of England, a few years ago, from northern China, it at once jumped into popularity in Europe, not only for the herbaceous border, but as a pot plant for early spring flowering. It is readily propagated either from seeds or root divisions. The roots can be cut up in the same way as Anemone Japonica and almost numberless plants secured from them. The flowers are gloxinia-like in appearance, light pink in color, and quite a number are carried on each of the stems, which will grow three to four feet high, according to soil and treatment afforded them.

Spring sown seedlings, potted in late fall, make desirable pot plants. I have never seen them used commercially, but, as they are easily and inexpensively grown, they would make a desirable novelty in the list of spring flowering plants. They will flower by the beginning of April in an ordinary greenhouse. A form now being offered under the name of Pink Perfection has somewhat clearer pink flowers than the type.

Veronica Longifolia Subsessilis.

While all the veronicas are useful perennials, some being adaptable for the rock garden and others for the herbaceous garden, V. longifolia subsessilis, with its rich, dark blue flowers, is the best of the family. Flowering in August and September, it makes an excellent plant, either for massing effects or grown in rows. It is well adapted for cutting, the rich blue flowers being useful in funeral designs when this particular color is required. Propagation is easy by root division, and to keep the plants strong and vigorous they should be divided and replanted every third year.

Montbretia Geo. Davison.

Montbretias are among the finest, freest flowering and hardiest of summer blooming bulbous plants. The old varieties, such as Pottsi, crocsmæflora, Cayon d'Or and Etoile de Feu, are well known, but the newer sorts, such as Germania and Geo. Davison, have much larger flowers and show an immense advance over them. There are quite a few still newer varieties now being offered, the results of hybridization by an English specialist, which promise to entirely eclipse anything grown now. M. Geo. Davison has flower stems a yard high. The large, open flowers are of a lovely orange yellow color and are freely produced in July and August. For cutting, these montbretias are excellent and it is surprising that they are so seldom seen in the markets. They ship well and keep satisfactorily in water.

their montbretia bulbs each fall. A better plan is to lift and replant them thinly in rows two to three feet apart about the end of October, in well drained land with a slope. I have never known them to winter-kill, and from fall planting much earlier and finer spikes are secured than from dry bulbs in spring. The bulbs should have a good coating of litter or leaves after the ground freezes, removing this as soon as the land thaws out.

Aconitum Napellus.

All the monk's-hoods are splendid hardy perennials. The forms of Aconitum Napellus are the most desirable for border plants. They are perfectly hardy and make a splendid show in August and September. They seem to do particularly well near the seacoast. I once saw rows and masses of them six to eight feet high in a number of gardens in Bar Harbor, Me., and at the Mount Desert Nurseries a large collection was noted, varying from pure white in color to the deepest blue. In a cut state the spikes of this handsome perennial are superb and cannot fail to rivet attention. Propagation may be effected by either seeds or by division, the latter method being the more satisfactory.

Chrysanthemum Maximum King Edward

Of the newer hybrids of Chrysanthemum maximum, C. maximum King Edward is undoubtedly the best. The flowers are pure white, three to four inches in diameter, and are produced in July and August. For cutting they are unexcelled at that season by anything in the line of hardy perennials. For massing effects nothing can be finer than this chrysanthemum, and it makes a useful forerunner to the better known and useful C. uliginosum. King Edward grows two and a half to five feet in height. It can be propagated either from seed or from root division, in common with other members of the family. It will flower in five to six months from seed and is well worthy a place in every retail grower's hardy border.

Heuchera Sanguinea Grandiflora.

Heuchera sanguinea is a well known and popular hardy perennial. The variety grandiflora has much greater vigor, the spikes being longer and flowers larger. The flowers are of a lovely coral scarlet color and are valuable for cutting. It is easy to raise a good batch of these heucheras from seed, which, if sown under glass in February and March, will produce strong plants in the fall. The so-called white form, H. sanguinea alba, is an even freer grower than the scarlet one. The flowers are, however, of a dirty white color and it is much less desirable in every way than H. sanguinea.

HOLLYHOCK PLANTS.

Is there much demand by the trade for hollyhock plants? R. F.

There is usually a fair demand for hollyhock plants and if you can produce plants clean of rust, they should sell readily. C. W.

MEDIA, PA.—Eugene A. Perrey has purchased the greenhouses of L. J. Perrey & Son and has removed them to Dorsey, Md., where he has purchased a farm and will continue the business of growing violets. His favorite varieties are California and Princess of Wales.

.....BUSINESS AND OTHER NOTES.....

NEWBURGH, N. Y.—The Yuess Gardens Co. furnished the decorations for the Pfister-Gardner wedding, at the bride's home on Bridge street.

OSHKOSH, WIS.—The Oshkosh Floral Co. has been incorporated, with a capital of $3,000, by E. P. Barnett, Janette J. Barnett and Clement MacMahon.

ST. JOSEPH, MO.—Lou Hardman says he believes most of the privet hedges and many hybrid perpetual roses went to the bad in this section during the winter.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—The Haggerty Floral Co. furnished the decorations for the Albert-Friedman wedding, March 17, in the Jewish synagogue at Mill and Vassar streets.

CHATHAM, N. Y.—R. E. Shupheld, of the Chatham Floral Co., who has been spending the winter, as usual, at Fruitland Park, Fla., expects to sail for the north April 16.

KANKAKEE, ILL.—The water tank at the greenhouses of Charles Schafer recently fell from its 30-foot tower, crushing in one corner of a house. The loss was about $150.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—William Cunningham had the best Easter trade in all his experience. The weather was summer-like, with a temperature at times as high as 80 degrees.

RUTLAND, VT.—T. M. Barrett, formerly of this city, has bought a florist's business in Portland, Ore., and will remain there. Mrs. Barrett expects to leave for Portland about May 1.

HAMMONTON, N. J.—The greenhouses of Watkins & Nicholson were considerably damaged by fire on Monday evening, March 21. As the weather was mild, the stock was not greatly injured by exposure.

BENTON HARBOR, MICH.—A flower store has been opened at the rooms occupied by A. J. Youngs, at 143 Pipestone street. Mrs. Youngs recently visited Grand Rapids for the purpose of securing a supply of the latest designs.

WATERBURY, CONN.—A store, to be known as the Flower Shop, has been opened in the Waterbury Bank building by Miss Nella B. Smith and Miss Helen G. Bangs. Miss Edith Henderson will act as their assistant. The store is said to be unusually pretty and artistic.

JAMESTOWN, N. D.—The Wheeler Floral Co. did a surprisingly good shipping business for Easter, filling orders from all over the state and from western Montana. The warm weather hurried the garden and truck vegetables so that they were almost ready for sale in the last week of March.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—Previous to Easter there had been rumors here that Easter lilies would be extremely scarce, but John N. Champion, when interviewed on the subject, stated that the lilies were apparently as plentiful as in other years and also as much in demand as ever. Charles Munro also stated that the supply seemed to be abundant.

WOODSTOWN, N. J.—I. B. Coles says it was the best Easter he ever has enjoyed.

DAYTON, O.—The five new houses being built by the Miami Floral Co. are 33x240 feet each.

SCRANTON, PA.—Work has been begun on the foundations of the new greenhouse for the city park system.

ALLISON PARK, PA.—John L. Wyland, the veteran and successful carnation grower, announces his intention of selling out and removing to the west.

ALMA, ILL.—W. S. Ross has been shipping quantities of narcissi that are quite a different article from the small, short-stemmed jonquils that are commonly sent north from southern Illinois.

ALVIN, TEX.—T. W. Carlton says the crop of cape jasmines does not give promise of being earlier than usual. He has about 1,000 bushes and expects to cut about May 15. Mr. Carlton says the Alvin crop in general will be about the same size as last year.

LANCASTER, O.—M. M. Miesse, the vegetable grower, says that the unusually warm weather in March brought out the lettuce quickly and he had a fine crop for Easter. He sold a large quantity at good prices. His tomatoes and cucumbers have made a good start.

KEARNEY, NEB.—Harry L. Hunt, foreman of the Kearney Floral Co., reports that the Easter trade was far in advance of last year, with plenty of Easter lilies, and sales about evenly divided between pot plants and cut flowers. He says that the excessively warm weather was hard on tulips and azaleas, but that prospects are bright for a good spring business.

ST. JOHN, N. B.—Herbert E. Goold had a fine display of Easter stock in his store at 90 Germain street, in the Masonic building, and was well pleased with the amount of business. Mr. Goold handles a good many Superbissima ferns and handles them so well that they attract much attention and sell readily. The Easter trade was also highly satisfactory to most of the other florists, including W. & K. Pederson, in their various stores; Mrs. H. S. Cruikshank, at 159 Union street; Adam Shand, opposite the Royal hotel; Campbell's Flower Store, 193 Charlotte street, and J. E. Quinn, in the country market.

AUGUSTA, GA.—In the last part of March there was ideal spring weather here and flowers were plentiful, both indoors and outdoors. The woods were full of dogwood and jasmines, and the town was full of tourists, all delighted with Augusta. The florists all report better Easter trade than ever. Balk's Nursery was kept extremely busy all the week and was in full crop with Bride, Killarney, Beauty and Richmond roses. This firm's Easter flowers were on time and of a superior quality. Spiraeas, azaleas, hyacinths and Easter lilies all sold well; 800 Easter lilies were sold on Saturday. Prices on lilies were from 50 cents to $2 per plant.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Special Prizes For Annual Show.

The following are the special prizes offered for the annual exhibition of the National Chrysanthemum Society of America, to be held at Morristown, N. J., in conjunction with the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society, November 2, 3 and 4, 1910:

Class I: William Duckham special; first, $10; second, $5; for the best six blooms of Chrysanthemum Ohunda. Prize offered by William Duckham, Madison, N. J.

Class J: Anton C. Zvolanek special; $10, for the best three varieties, three blooms to a stem, any chrysanthemum. Prize offered by Anton C. Zvolanek, Bound Brook, N. J.

The secretary will be pleased to add to this list any other specials from firms or individuals willing to contribute a prize.

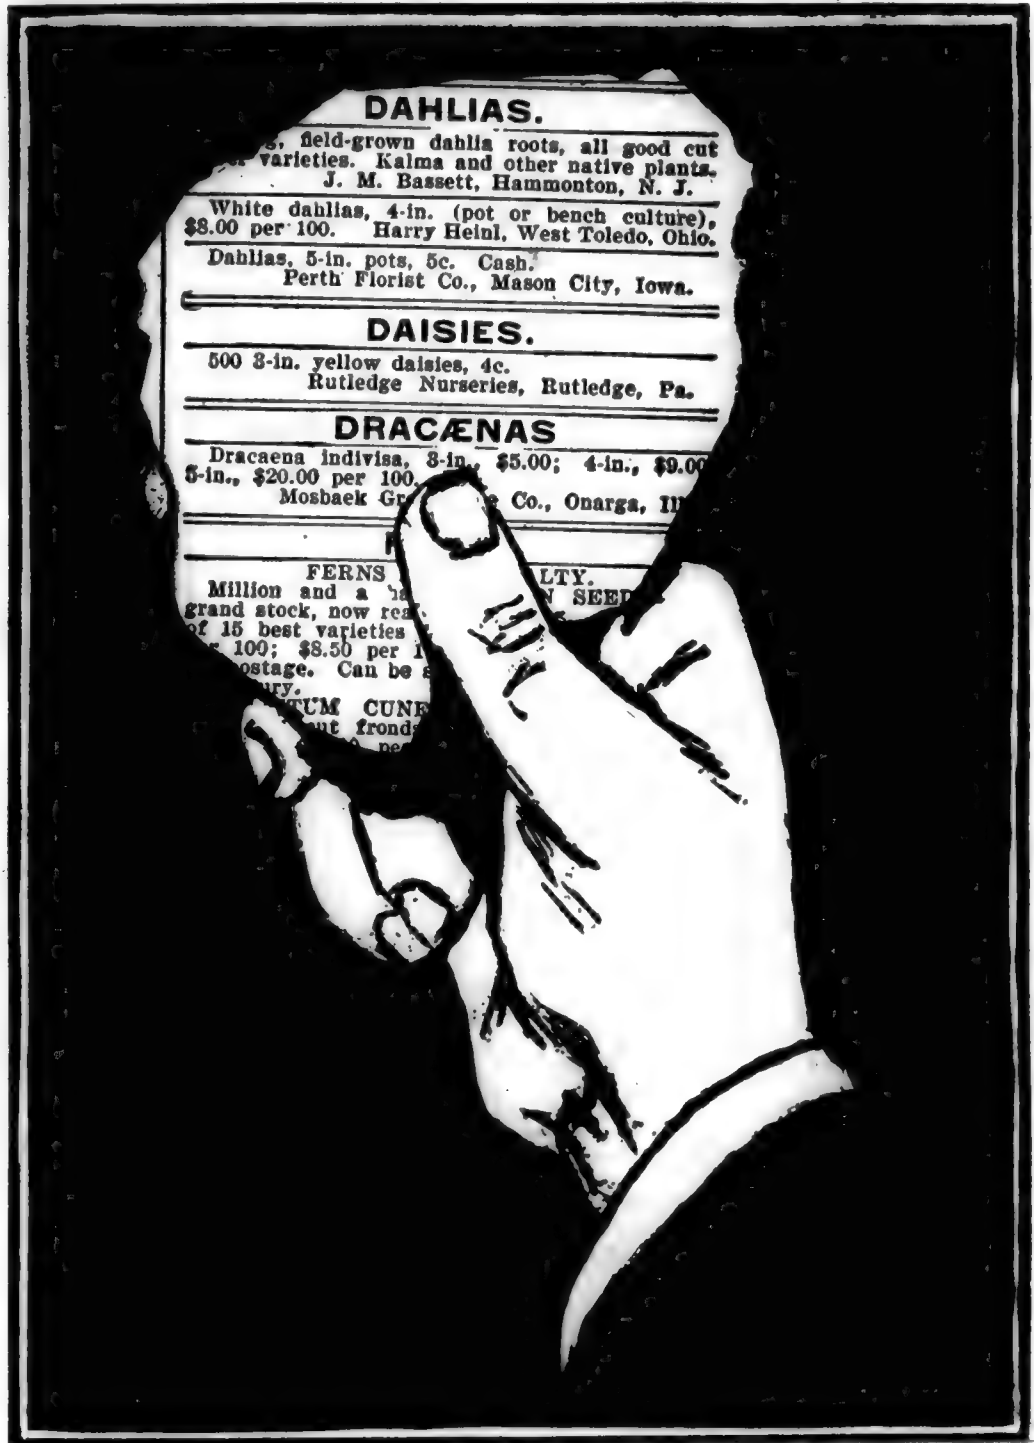

President Elmer D. Smith has appointed E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., chairman of the executive committee of the Chrysanthemum Society of America.

C. W. JOHNSON, Sec'y.
Morgan Park, Ill.

WEST STOUGHTON, MASS.—The business formerly conducted in the name of Walter B. Southworth now bears the firm name of Southworth & Greene.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—A store has been opened at 408 East Adams street by the Janssen Seed & Floral Co. Mr. Janssen has had eighteen years' experience in the flower and seed business.

These Are the Little Liners That Do the Business

PROFITS FROM PLUMOSUS.

Is Asparagus plumosus a profitable crop to grow for the wholesale trade? What should be the length of strings and in what temperature and soil should it be grown? What should be the returns from a bed 20x100 feet, in a house which measures eighteen feet to the ridge? What could be grown in the side benches in the same house. There are 5-foot posts and two feet of glass below the plate on each side.

We are planning to plant the plumosus eighteen inches apart, in a solid bed of the foregoing dimensions. When should we plant and how long does it take to mature a crop? Any suggestions about the culture and marketing will be thankfully received. I am located in north-eastern Ohio.

H. F. H.

Asparagus plumosus is a fairly profitable crop when well grown, and is produced in strings from six to fifteen feet long. For growing these long strings a period of two years is required from the time of planting, but during the first season a crop of short sprays may be had that will give some profit.

The bed should be well drained, and filled to a depth of at least one foot with a soil consisting of rotted sod and stable manure, one part of the latter to four of the former. The plants should be strong young stock from 4-inch or 5-inch pots, and a good time to plant them would be in May.

A bed twenty feet wide is too wide for convenient working, either in weeding, training or syringing, and would be much better if divided into three beds, with walks between. A night temperature of 60 degrees is most satisfactory, and regular syringing in bright weather is required. During the summer months a light shading on the glass is beneficial, but this should be removed before winter.

The side benches of the house could be occupied with a crop of Asparagus Sprengeri grown for sprays, or A. plumosus could also be grown there, without supports, for the same purpose.

As to the returns from such a house, so much depends on the market for such a product and on the quality produced that it is hard to estimate, for asparagus needs quite a lot of attention and plenty of good feeding if one aims for a high grade crop.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS, MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.;
treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

NEXT year Easter falls April 16, three weeks later than this year, but it's not likely to be any hotter.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two copies.

INQUIRIES must be signed with full name, and address must be given, to receive reply. Signatures are not used for publication in the REVIEW, but anonymous inquiries are not answered.

THE Commissioner of Internal Revenue, charged with the collection of the new Taft tax on corporations, has rendered a decision (No. 27) that the Florists' Mutual Hail Association is regarded as an insurance company and not as an agricultural association, and therefore is liable to the tax.

LOOK out for mildew when the weather changes. It is too much to expect that we shall have no more cool nights—we get them even in the regular summer months—and a bad dose of mildew while rose markets are oversupplied means that the affected stock goes to the dump.
Good, clean stock will sell well a little later. See that yours is in that class.

THE complete schedule for the orchid exhibition to be given at Boston May 26 to 30 has been issued by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. This is the exhibition at which a gold medal and $1,000 are offered as first premium for a group of orchid plants, with other similarly valuable premiums. Copies of the list may be had by addressing W. P.
Rich, secretary, Horticultural hall, Boston.

TO TEST GLASS COMBINE.

Every one agrees that the manufacturers of window glass are entitled to a living profit—probably to a better profit than last summer's low prices on greenhouse sizes gave the makers—but that they took the right way to get their profit is being questioned by the United States government. Indictments are to be asked against the organizers of the Imperial Window Glass Co. in the United States Court at Pittsburg, where the district attorney, Mr. Jordan, said: "The investigation of the Imperial Window Glass Co. has been under way for the past ninety days and agents of the Department of Justice have visited every one of the thirty-three plants operated under the charter of the company in eleven different states.

"The company was incorporated in West Virginia early this year and its alleged control of the window glass business is to be probed with intent to show that it is a monopoly in restraint of trade.

"United States Assistant Attorney General Grosvenor of Washington is here at present and is preparing the gathered data to place it before the special grand jury which has already been drawn.

"Subpoenas have been served on glass manufacturers in Chicago, Cleveland and elsewhere for their appearance here.

"The Imperial Window Glass Co. is a holding organization, the manufacturers pooling their output and selling through the company exclusively. Prices have been compared with the American Glass
Co. and there is but slight difference."

OBITUARY.

Mrs. W. E. King.

Orisa Ann King, wife of W. E. King, the florist of Santa Cruz, Cal., died March 28, at her home on Pennsylvania avenue, of cancer of the stomach, at the age of 55 years. The deceased was a native of Massachusetts and had lived in Santa Cruz for twenty-three years. She had been sick for the last year, and in bed just before her death for four months. She will be missed by a large circle of friends, and great sympathy will go out to the bereaved family. Besides her husband, Mrs. King leaves a son, Charles F. Spitler, by a former husband, and a daughter, Mrs. Nettie Fullom, who lives at home.

Mrs. Sarah Escott Smith.

Mrs. Sarah Escott Smith, mother of Henry Smith, the florist of 36 East Bridge street, Grand Rapids, Mich., died Saturday morning, April 2, aged 76 years, at the Smith fruit farm on West Bridge street road. She had been in poor health for about two years. Mrs. Smith was born in New Rochelle, N. Y., in 1833, and came to Grand Rapids with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Escott, in 1839. In 1856 she married George Smith.
They lived on a farm at Englishville till 1870, two years previous to her husband's death, when they moved to the West
Bridge street home, where she died.

Mrs. Smith took an active interest in all agricultural matters and was a prominent fruit grower in this section. She is survived by a son, Henry Smith, and one brother, George Escott, of Charlotte, N. C. She was much esteemed and had a wide circle of acquaintances.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

It has not often happened that the market has had so bad a week as the one which immediately followed Easter, and thus far in the present week there are no signs of betterment.

All the troubles which came upon the wholesalers during the Easter rush were due to the unseasonably hot weather, and as the weather did not change with the passage of the Easter extra demand, the troubles simply were accentuated—things were worse than ever. Under the influence of the hot sun, crops continued excessive and the quality of much of the stock was such that buyers would not touch it. At the same time, crops were large throughout the entire section that gets a part of its supplies from Chicago, and the shipping trade ran down to the minimum, as it always does when orders are most needed in this market. The more stock, the less business; the less stock, the more business; that's the rule. The bulk of the supply must now be disposed of outside the regular channels.

It is possible to record a scarcity in just one item—orchids. The departure of Lent always brings a crop of early spring weddings, and it found an insufficient supply of cattleyas. Valley also

NEW CROP OF FINE BEAUTIES

For years Beauty buyers have looked to us as practically without competition the moment hot weather hit the Beauties—our growers know how to hold the quality.

We are now just on with our Spring Crops. These compare specially well with any others now in market—nothing like them to be had elsewhere.

KILLARNEY

Our Killarneys are in a class by themselves.

Whatever the length you use—buds better, length for length of stem, than any other house can supply. While we have the extra special for all who want them, the bulk of our large Spring crop grades as select and specials the length all stores use in quantity. Also strong on Richmond, Bride, Maid and all other roses—fine stock in any quantity.

SWEET PEAS

We have an immense supply of Sweet Peas—grown by specialists. Can fill orders for 1000 or 10,000 all out of one lot, and you know the advantage of that—they're all good. No Peas on this market to compare with our "fancy" grade.

CARNATIONS

We are in heavy crop—we can fill large orders and many of them. There are no better carnations anywhere than our "select, large and fancy," but if your trade requires the "common" grade (ours are as good as some houses ship as fancy), we can take care of you. Let us know what you can use—we do the rest.

Lilies

You always can get Lilies here—the best Lilies in this market. All true giganteums—just the right kind of stock for the retailers to handle as cut flowers—they average about 3 flowers to the stalk. Just the thing for funeral sprays, also fine for church decorations for spring weddings. Plenty of Callas at low prices.

Bulb Stock

All bulb stock in quantity; Tulips, choice Jonquils and Daffodils.

Green Goods

sold fairly well. Of everything else there has been an abundance and to spare. It is probable that this market never has seen a week in which there was a greater waste of flowers. Beauties are in large crop. Roses are overabundant. Carnations never were cheaper than at this date. Lilies are everywhere, callas encumber the counters, bulbous stock is a glut, and violets simply are unsalable. The heat has affected the quality of everything. Only a small part of the many Beauties can be classed as good. The best bring fair prices, but the rest fetch scarcely anything. Special long roses never offered so good value as now. There is apparently an endless supply, Killarney and Richmond being better than the other varieties, but all selling cheaply; in fact, the buyer who was willing to speculate on a quantity came pretty near naming his own prices.

Not many of the colored varieties of carnations can be called good; the heat has faded them. A few of the best still bring 3 cents, but it is of record that 5 cents per bunch was accepted on clean-up sales last week, and some could not be sold even at that ridiculous price. Belated Easter lilies also have gone begging, and it is the general report that callas are about the hardest stock to sell; nobody wants them in quantity at any price. It is possible to sell most of the colored tulips, of which not many are received, but many whites have been wasted. Last week marked the height of the season for the southern bulb stock, of which the receipts ran probably higher than ever before in the history of this market. Because of the heat, a large part of the stock was utterly valueless upon arrival. In consequence consignees refused many shipments from unknown or irresponsible consignors. At one time last week the Adams Express Co. had two two-horse wagon-loads of southern jonquils which were being carted about in search of someone who would accept them for sale for the express company's account. The wholesale florists threw

The southern lilac arrived in the height of the glut and shared in its bad effects. Also, some of the lilac shows the same effect of the heat as do the jonquils and is arriving in unusable condition.

April 1 found violets in the condition usually associated with a date two months later. The good stores have stopped handling them, using the long-stemmed fancy sweet peas, which are so plentiful, in place of violets. The result is that no street salesmen would think of offering over $1 per thousand for violets, while many go to waste. On the other hand, there are so many fine sweet peas that no advance in price has resulted from the increased sale of these; it sim-of seeing their own receipts running to a fairly large figure, while the returns to individual growers are so small that they cannot possibly give satisfaction. The receipts of flowers are so extremely heavy that even with the bottomless prices and large waste a good sum of money must necessarily come in, but when it is divided up among the unusually large number of consignors now represented in each day's receipts, there is hardly anything for the little fellows.

However, if the heat holds a few days more the worst of the glut will be over and good stock will have a fair value once more.

Consignments of gardenias from eastern markets do not indicate any better conditions elsewhere.

March Weather.

So lamb-like a March never has been recorded by the weather bureau at Chicago. It was the warmest, driest and sunniest March in forty years; it had the hottest March day ever recorded (Easter Sunday). The maximum was 81 degrees in the weather man's aerie, where the records make mention of a March that had a day 12 degrees below zero. The rainfall last month was .29 of an inch, or only about one-tenth of the normal precipitation, which is 2.55 inches. Sunshine was abundant, being thirty-four per cent in excess of the average. There was no day on which the sun did not

Various Notes.

In Tuesday's election Peter Reinberg was reelected to the city council by a vote of 4,539. There was no republican candidate, though this was formerly a republican ward. A prohibitionist got 1,101 votes. J. C. Behrer made little impression on the republican plurality in his ward and C. A. Strail, brother of Fred Strail, of Bohannon's, fell 1,200 votes short.

Announcement has been received of the marriage of Gabriel Harris Pieser and Mrs. Kathleen Bronson Worley at Aurora, Ill., Saturday, March 26. Mr. Pieser is president of the Kennicott Bros. Co., and it was for his bride that Frank Schramm, of Arlington Heights, named his new light pink carnation, Kathleen B. W., which was exhibited at the Pittsburg meeting of the American Carnation Society.

E. C. Amling says he is urging all his growers not to neglect their stock just because prices now are low, for he feels sure there will be several weeks of good flower selling before the end of the season and that it will be the growers with the best stock who will get the money.

Mons Olson is again on deck in the store of Poehlmann Bros. Co., after ten days' illness. He looks the picture of health and has hard work making people believe he did not spend the time tinkering the automobile.

After living eight years in apartments overlooking Jackson park, E. E. Pieser now makes his home at 4015 Lake avenue.

D. T. Murphy, who has been at Manistee, Mich., for some time, is back in town again.

The seed stores are crowded. At Winterson's Seed Store John Degnan says he never has seen anything like such heavy counter trade at so early a date.

It is reported from Elgin that George Souster's No. 9 house was destroyed by fire April 2.

John Kruchten has been on the sick list for several days.

Kyle & Foerster received a letter accompanying a consignment of lilac from Alton, Ill., in which it was stated that shipments began this year twenty-six days ahead of last season.

Charles Drissler and Miss Mary Solt were married Tuesday morning, April 5, at St. Michael's church. The groom has been employed for some years in the city store of Wietor Bros., where all the buyers have come to know and like him.

Tim Matchen says that Peter Reinberg never has cut a heavier crop of Beauties than at present.

Robert Miller and L. L. Barton were in town last week on their way to Salt Lake City, Utah, where they will engage in rose and carnation growing for the wholesale trade. While here they obtained estimates on the material for two houses, each 40x300, which they will put up as speedily as possible. The firm name will be the Miller Floral Co. Both gentlemen have been for some time with A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.

W. N. Crosby, who represents the United States Express Co. in the wholesale cut flower district, says the records of his company show the shipping trade in wholesale cut flowers is more than fifty per cent greater than it was four or five years ago.

Henry Van Gelder, who has charge of the Percy Jones business, reports the arrival of the first outdoor lilac March 31, and says he has a local grower who has 20,000 outdoor tulips he will begin cutting before this week is over.

Ben Zollinger is no longer with Sinner Bros.

The A. L. Randall Co. is rearranging its floor space to give more room in the shipping department. One order April 1 was for 20,000 carnations, and another was for 10,000. Frank Johnson is on a southern trip.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time.

We received many fine orders through our advertisement in the Review and are practically sold out of stock for the season.—Fowler Bros., Westfield, Mass., March 21, 1910.

W. E. Lynch, at E. H. Hunt's, says business must be good with the country florists, for the number of orders is quite satisfactory. The trouble is, most of them call for special flowers not to be had in the smaller cities, rather than for roses and carnations.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

There are twice as many flowers coming into Philadelphia now as the market requires. The quality of most of the flowers is very fine indeed. The most critical buyer can find no fault, unless, perchance, the warm weather may have advanced some of them too much to be at their best at the moment they are needed. But what difference from a buyer's standpoint with such a wide range of selection? From a seller's standpoint there is a very wide difference indeed; his flowers bring decidedly less than they should and not all of them can be sold at anything better than a job lot rate, or its first cousin, the waste pile. This is the situation in brief brought on by an extraordinary spell of warm weather, which has continued almost without interruption for three weeks.

Beauties have become more plentiful, the price half that of Easter, ten days ago. They are in fair demand, the market always taking them up in times of depression. Choice blooms of Richmond and Killarney sell well at moderate prices. The poorer stock drags. Kaiserin is here in quantity, but does not sell against good Bride or White Killarney. Carnations fell to an absurd price last week, the street cleaning them up at figures that make one blush. They seemed a bit scarcer at the opening of the present week, giving a shade healthier tone to the market. Easter lilies are almost unsalable at any price; some are used for the weddings, but not a fraction of those offered. Callas have not fared quite so badly. The rear guard of the violets are in fair demand at low prices when presentable. Something better could be said of sweet peas if we could only sidetrack the excess; in other words, there is a good demand for quite a lot of peas. Cattleyas are in brisk request, but not so gardenias. Snapdragon goes freely. Asparagus sells, but not with vim as of yore. Daffodils are pretty nearly over. So also are good tulips. Southern daffodils look fagged. Forsythia is used by the shops.

Easter Notes.

There are a few points of interest in connection with the Easter business that were not covered in last week's reports. There was a positive, though limited, demand for specimen plants of Hydrangea Otaksa that was not satisfied. Despite the fact that Alice blue is a fashionable color this season, pink hydrangeas of a pretty shade were more in demand than blue.

The demand for daffodils was much stronger in proportion to the supply two weeks before Easter than it was during the days preceding that great festival, prices being far higher; in fact, nearly double those realized during the last week of Lent.

The rush of flower buyers to Atlantic City during Passion week was so great as to have a decided influence on the flower market in Philadelphia. Many of the leading retailers noticed that their best customers were out of town at Easter, a thing that has seldom happened. The result was a decided curtailment of the better class orders in many parts of the city, leading to the belief that should Atlantic City continue to grow in popular favor as an Easter resort there will be a limit to the demand for high grade stock.

One other point not brought out last week was the wonderful popularity of Magna Charta rose as an Easter plant. This grand old hybrid perpetual is practically the last survivor of a class of magnificent varieties once so freely forced in pots and in boxes for Easter and spring flowers. Magna Charta was extremely well done by a number of the growers and proved a favorite, probably fully as much so as before the advent of the rambler sisters.

A Story of Stephen Girard.

A little group of four were standing in the range of greenhouses devoted to roses at the Dreer place in Riverton, when Mr. Eisele remarked: "There has been too much Stephen Girard business in these roses this season to suit me." Neither Mr. Stroblein nor Mr. Clark made any comment on this assertion and Phil did not know exactly what it meant. A little later Mr. Eisele again referred to that Stephen Girard business, this time when looking at a lot of perennials in pots that had been moved out of the frame to make room for the roses. Then the Stephen Girard story came back to Phil, at first hazily, after many years of oblivion, but gradually it became clear as day.

The story of Stephen Girard: A man came to Stephen Girard one day to ask for work. A pile of bricks was pointed out. "Carry all those bricks over there," Mr. Girard said, "and pile them in that place as exactly as they now stand." The next morning the man again reported for work. "Take those bricks back where they were piled yesterday, putting them exactly as you found them," was Mr. Girard's order. The man appeared on the third morning. "You are just the man I am looking for," Mr. Girard said. "You have done what you were told and asked no questions; I have a steady position for you."

The application: The tea and hybrid tea roses, when first potted, were stood three deep in the rose range. Later, as the season opened, the perennials withered in the frame were removed to the open lot, the frames were raised and the two upper layers of roses now started into growth were placed there. One of the ingenious expedients adopted in an emergency by a man of resources.

The Roses at Riverton.

Since the wonderful improvement made in the varieties of hybrid tea roses suitable for outdoor planting in the various climates of this vast country, Riverton has become a hotbed of roses. It is pretty hard for the average florist to realize what this means. He is accustomed to thinking of Dreer's seeds and of the Riverton palms and perennials, with the various side lines of ferns and annuals. Perhaps three-quarters of the florists, if closely questioned, would admit that you might be able to get some H. P.'s at Dreer's. By H. P.'s would be meant hybrid perpetuals, not high-priced roses, as a prospective rosarian once suggested. They have some

H. P.'s there, though, in both senses; there are still some hybrid perpetual Jacqueminot, Magna Charta and so forth, for those who wish them, and there are some high-priced novelties brought from the Marne, the Seine and the Thames to the banks of the Delaware for trial, as Dreer's must always be a leader in every branch of horticultural industry.

Mr. Eisele is enthusiastic over hybrid tea roses. This is shown by the increase in the number of novelties, in the number of standard varieties, and in the number of plants in the houses and frames at Riverton. Some idea of the magnitude of the Dreer interest in roses may be obtained from the following rough figures: The number of plants, including teas, hybrid teas, hybrid perpetuals, climbers, etc., is fully one-third greater than last year, running up, approximately, to somewhere between 125,000 and 150,000 plants.

The number of varieties has been so much increased that novelties such as the peerless Lyon rose are now offered in quantity sufficient to warrant the belief that many of those desiring this and other novelties can get them. The trial bed, described in this column last fall, has proved so satisfactory that another bed of probably equal size has just been prepared and will be planted with the high-priced novelties from over the water. These H. P.'s are only considered a justifiable expense as an object lesson—money spent on a post-graduate horticultural education, so to speak, at the best school of learning, Nature's University.

An hour intelligently spent in such a rose garden on a summer's evening will enable the student to answer instantly such questions as, "Will this or that variety bloom continuously throughout the summer?" "Is its color pleasing?" "Is it of vigorous growth?" and so on. To have a reputation in roses, one must know what varieties will do well under given conditions.

Novelty Baskets.

Paul Berkowitz sent for some open work brass baskets to show a visitor one day this week. The visitor, mistaking Mr. Berkowitz's nonchalant manner, failed to grasp the real beauty of these baskets at a glance and, noting this quick as a flash, the member of H. Bayersdorfer & Co. quietly said: "That is the finest novelty in baskets I have ever seen." They were in two styles, both of dainty French workmanship formed of strands of brass woven together like willow or rattan. One style, called Maud Muller, reminds one of the heroine of that poem, in strong yet graceful lines of contour. The other, described as Princess, is of more delicate outline, gracefully sloping. Both are handle baskets, intended for the choicest blossoms.

Sign of the Rose.

The shop windows arranged by Charles Henry Fox for the seven days ending April 5 presented a marked contrast, well worthy description. The left window was a bridal canopy, with bride's bouquet, bridesmaid's arm bunch, flower girl's basket; everything, in short, appropriate for a pretty wedding, made of nature's choicest enhanced by floral art. The other window was filled by a large English bowl of forsythia sprays, the golden yellow casting a rich glow over the entire window.

Various Notes.

Henry I. Faust, of Merion, read an able paper on lilies before the Philadelphia Florists' Club in Horticultural hall April 5. Mr. Faust is a pastmaster in the art of lily growing, who received the distinction of a number of large contracts for plants this Easter.

M. Rice & Co. report progress on the addition that is being made to their handsome warehouse. The new story, which is expected to be finished next week, will give them in all 14,000 square feet of room.

Charles Pollis has succeeded N. D. Gachar as florist in Broad Street Station.

Miss Gloster, humorously described by Alexander B. Scott as "the most valuable man on the place," was summoned to Cleveland, O., last week by the sad news of the death of her sister, Mrs. Isaac Kennedy, wife of the grower once so well known here at Wyndmoor.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons executed successfully some exceptionally heavy plant orders at Easter.

The first meeting of the new city councils, April 4, brought many floral offerings, chiefly of blooming plants and American Beauties, to City hall for the city fathers, from their admirers.

Among the visitors this week: G. C. Personette and Mrs. Personette, Baltimore, Md.; William J. Stewart, Boston, Mass.

Louis Politis, of Thirteenth and Chestnut streets, returns to Greece this week to visit his father, who, he says, is now a centenarian.

The Market.

Easter trade this year was the best ever experienced by the florists of this city. There were no special features to distinguish it from that of last year, except the increased volume of business transacted. All through the week much interest was manifested by the crowds of flower buyers, who visited the stores and plainly indicated the unprecedented rush that followed on Friday and Saturday. The weather was ideal for flower selling. The temperature was 65 degrees, with a clear sky.

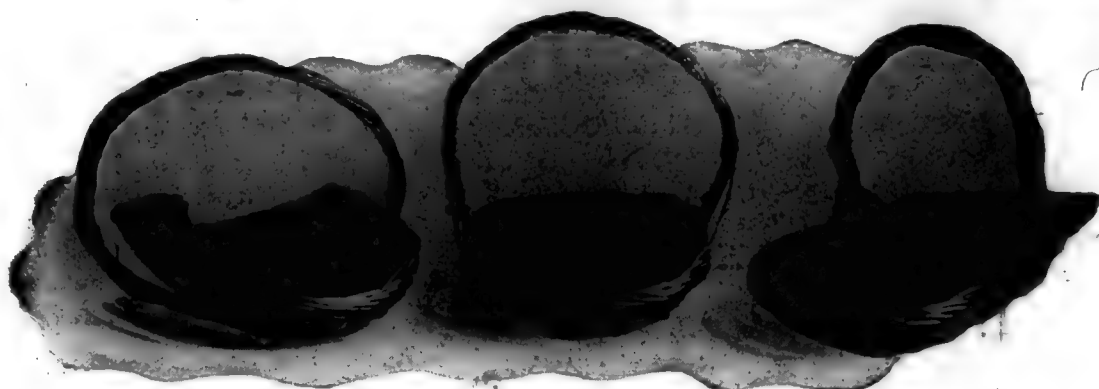

There was an immense stock of pot plants of all kinds to be had, including lilies, azaleas, roses, hydrangeas and bulbous stock, which was not nearly as good as last season. Lilies were a glut and were hard to move at any price; they could be had at 9 cents and 10 cents per flower. Some of the plants were only twelve inches high, while some were over five feet high, with four to eight buds and flowers.

It is clearly shown by each recurring Easter season of recent years that a full supply of everything in demand is the rule and not the exception, showing the futility of the attempts of some to maintain extraordinary prices because of the expected big demand. Growers and dealers alike are at last beginning to realize that the increased demand and the preparations to meet it with good stock are what makes the Easter season important to them.

Saturday morning was clear and warm and it remained for each one to meet the demands of the army of buyers that continued to come till late in the night. While much good stock could be seen on Sunday in many stores, the dealers and growers were, nevertheless, satisfied with the results.

Various Notes.

Last month came near being the driest March since 1871. Only .46 of an inch of rain has fallen in thirty-one days, while the normal rainfall for this period is 3.88 inches. The mean temperature for the month was 48.2 degrees, or 6.8 degrees higher than the average for thirty years. While, of course, this does not break the record, it was doing well. The only embarrassing feature of the situation is the fact that quite a number of the fruit trees have been deceived into believing this is June. Nearly all the cherry, apple and peach trees are in full flower, and there may be some vain regrets.

The Market.

Easter business with most of the florists was a trifle better than last year. The weather was extremely hot for three or four days preceding Easter, it being from 80 to 85 degrees in the shade. This hot weather was hard on bulbous stock and Easter lilies, which in many cases were already well advanced, causing them to become soft, and hard to handle. It also affected violets, most of which came from the Hudson river district. Those that did come in good shape did not last long. Lilies were more than enough to go around. Stock of all kinds was plentiful and I think no one should have lost any business from want of a supply. Some fine blooming plants were to be seen and found a ready sale.

The automobile show took place the week following Easter and helped liven things up for the florists, as most of the dealers decorated their places and thousands of carnations were given away during the week. The floral parade brought a number of autos decorated in natural flowers, some of them being quite elaborate.

Various Notes.

E. T. Barnes, of Spencer, Ind., has been sending in quantities of fine daffodils.

James Karins, with H. A. Dreer, was in the city looking after the trade last week. Mr. Karins made about three trips out to John Heidenreich's, but was unable to find him at home. No doubt Mr. Heidenreich was out trying to get acquainted with the mechanism of his new automobile.

A. Kempe sent in a nice lot of pot violets for Easter, but he missed it on his rambles this year. Mr. Kempe expects to build a new house this year.

A. Wiegand & Sons received a letter, with $10 enclosed, last week. The letter was probably sent by a former employee and stated that the writer had been attending Billy Sunday's meetings and wanted to lead a Christian life. The letter was signed "A guilty conscience."

Bertermann Bros. enjoyed a good business Easter. This firm had as fine a lot of blooming plants as one would want to see and reports a heavy sale on them. They used several automobiles, with good success, in making their Easter deliveries.

A. F. J. Baur, secretary of the American Carnation Society, has the annual report of that society on the press and expects to mail it next week.

Albert Pittet is hitting it right with his peas. He has had a heavy cut for the last month.

A. Wiegand & Sons report a satisfactory Easter business, they having cleaned up their entire lot of blooming plants. Their cut flower sales exceeded those of last year. This firm used four autos in making their Easter deliveries and experienced no trouble in getting their orders out on time. They had the decorations for the reception accorded former Vice-president Fairbanks, on his return home from his tour around the world.

B. F. Hensley, of Knightstown, sent in large quantities of carnations for the automobile show last week.

John Grande had his usual lot of fine

When Writing Advertisers

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Demoralization is a feeble characterization of last week's market. Lilies were sold as low as $1 per hundred! They are not much better at the beginning of another week. Thousands were not sold at all. The amount of discard sent to the river in the six days succeeding Easter would run any retail flower store for a year. Roses of all kinds and qualities went away when good at $1 per hundred. The pickled stock brought nothing. Even the weather took a hand in killing the picklers. One must have freezing temperature to ever dare risk embalming stock again in New York. The late shipments of violets for Easter brought good money, and the orchid handlers wore smile-wreathed faces, but of the other departments gloom settled down upon them like the fog of London or the darkness of Pittsburg.

The temperature fell 30 degrees April 3, and Monday came the first of the needed April showers. As to prices of cut flowers as the week opens, there is not much to encourage, but the tendency, if any, must be towards improvement. The best Beauties can be had for from 10 cents to 15 cents, the best Richmond for 8 cents or less, and Killarney, Maid, etc., for 4 cents. The price of $1 per hundred cash is not refused for select carnations, and as to violets, "Cut 'em out," is the dictum of one who knows how to grow them, "for they don't pay for the picking." Orchids and gardenias hold their place, because of the many weddings and dinners among the four hundred, and, in fact, through all this depression the millionaires have paid good fat prices and the society retailer has filled his coffers with the profits of the after-Easter season. The street man also flourishes. He sells his violets at 15 cents a bunch, and his roses and carnations at 10 cents a dozen. What an educator he has become! What would the wholesale man do without him, and the growers? To whom would his surplus go? In an overstocked market he is the greatest refuge. The department store man has also demonstrated his value. There would have been an earthquake without him.

There is a great problem—the problem of supply and demand—which this big city must solve. Perhaps the plant question will be the first to show clear skies, in the acceptance of the city's offer of space under the new bridge at Fifty-ninth street and First avenue.

Various Notes.

The tendency of the cut flower industry is towards concentration. It is possible before long that Twenty-eighth street, west from Sixth to Seventh avenue, may house the majority of the wholesale merchants in this line. Already two stores near the center of this street have been secured, by Walter Sheridan and Traendly & Schenck. These, with their cellars, give these firms double their former accommodations. It is rumored other Twenty-eighth street merchants contemplate stores of equal sizes on the floor above, and, in fact, the whole building could safely be utilized for the wholesale cut flower business, just as the Coogan building is now used by several leading firms and the Cut Flower Exchange. Already the old established firms of J. K. Allen, Gunther Bros., the Kefvar Co., Russin & Hanfling and the Forster Mansfield Co. are located here. One of the biggest wholesale houses on Twenty-eighth street near Broadway has sold its lease for $8,000.

Next Monday is the April meeting of the Florists' Club. A. C. Zvolanek has promised his delayed address. The house committee will dispense spring medicine and the dinner committee will modestly accept the club's commendation.

The Wilson-Hoyt Co. reports having enough bench work ordered to keep the factory at high pressure for a long time.

The plant growers are already planning for Decoration day. The supply will be abundant.

L. B. Coddington, whose output is handled by Horace Froment, is building another immense house this spring, by Hitchings & Co., with a glass area of 25,000 square feet.

April 13 on the Mauretania, H. Suzuki, of the Yokohama Nursery Co., sails for Europe. He will return to Japan via the Transsiberian railroad, reaching that Frank & Son, of Third avenue, sent a unique design to Deputy Commissioner Sinnott last week, a copy of the new bridge, five feet in length, composed entirely of Richmond roses. The use of designs for funerals apart from wreaths and crosses grows less daily in the city, the abnormal designs of the past being seldom seen, while the artistic and graceful bunches of loose flowers grow more and more in favor.

J. J. Coan, of the Growers' Cut Flower Co., found the new store a great convenience during the enormous shipments of the Easter week. A large ice-box and many improvements are planned for the new locality.

A. L. Young & Co. will concentrate their energies at 54 West Twenty-eighth street after May 1.

The Market.

The market since Easter has been somewhat overcrowded with stock in some lines, still we cannot say that business is dull, as funeral work has kept us going during the last week and some extra large pieces have been worked up. Out in the west end they are looking for considerable social work for this month, as all during Lent society keeps rather quiet, but according to the announcements in the daily papers, several weddings of good size may now be expected. As to stock, the wholesalers have had plenty of everything in season during the last week, and at prices that were much lower than the week previous. Long fancy American Beauties are down to $3 per dozen at any of the wholesalers. Other roses, too, are in plenty, with poor demand for colored stock. White seems to have the call, and the same can be said of carnations. All light colors sell well and the prices are down to $2 and $3 per hundred on fancies, which are all of fine quality.

Lilies have also come down in price and Harrisii is down to $10 per hundred blooms, with plenty of callas, also a few fine candidums. Other bulb stock, such as Dutch hyacinths, tulips, jonquils and valley, is more than can be disposed of at present. Sweet peas have been in good demand and the best have been selling up clean most of the week. Smilax is extra fine and plenty of it on hand; also all other greens, including galax and fancy and common ferns.

Various Notes.

E. W. Guy, of Belleville, was a caller last week. Mr. Guy says the fire that occurred at his place a few days before Easter caused him at least $2,500 damage, without any insurance. He is at a loss to know how the fire started, as the weather was such that no firing was needed. He will start rebuilding early this summer.

The Volkman Floral Co., on Easton avenue, reports a big Easter business and is at present busy in planting-out work. Landscape work has been heavier than in any previous years.

Miss Edith E. Ostertag, daughter of Henry Ostertag, was married last week to John W. Doeali. Miss Ostertag is well known in the trade here, being with her father in the store. A reception was held at the residence, 3003 North Spring avenue.

Miss Schnell, of East St. Louis, Ill., says that her Easter business was satisfactory and that blooming plants sold well—in fact, better than ever. There was also a better call for cut flowers than last year.

C. C. Sanders reports that everything sold well and his trade was much better than last year. They have been kept busy with nursery stock of all kinds. California privet is having a big demand.

George E. Kessler, landscape architect of Kansas City, Mo., and connected with our city park department, says that early in May he will make a trip to Rochester, N. Y., the convention city, as a guest of the civic improvement committee.

The Kelley Floral Co. says they had a nice Easter trade in cut flowers and plants. Goldfish, one of their specialties, also sold well. They are among the largest handlers of goldfish in the city.

The show houses of the west end florists are again in shape, having been replenished with stock. The day after Easter they looked like empty places for rent. Mrs. Ayers and George Waldbart did the best business in years. They completely sold out of everything on hand.

Adolph Brix says this year was the banner Easter with him. Since he is again in possession of his greenhouses,

Quite a few wedding orders have been booked for this month with the uptown florists. The social work is looking up since Easter and a big month is looked for in decorations and cut flower work for weddings, balls, receptions and dinners.

Among the downtown florists trade has been reported good since Easter, there being quite a lot of funeral work turned out. Grimm & Gorly, Riessen Floral Co. and Sanders had a large share of it all week.

The Ladies' Florists' Home Circle will hold its monthly meeting Monday afternoon, April 11. Miss Birdie Meinhardt is on the program to entertain the ladies with something interesting.

The Florists' Club will hold its regular monthly meeting Thursday afternoon,
April 14, at 2 o'clock, in Odd Fellows' hall. President George B. Windler says he will have something interesting and hopes the members will attend this meeting in full force. J. J. B.

Seed Trade News.AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

GENERAL rains during the last few days have improved the situation in the seed trade, both from the point of view of the seed grower and of the seed seller.

PLANTING conditions now are the opposite of what they were a year ago. April of 1909 was a wet month and it affected the selling end of the seed business, as well as the preparations for the new crop.

HARRY A. BUNYARD, 342 West Fourteenth street, New York city, secretary of the National Sweet Pea Society of America, has issued the preliminary schedule for the second annual exhibition of the society, to be held this summer. Many special prizes are donated by seedsmen.

THE Maryland Agricultural Experimental Station, College Park, Md., has issued a bulletin, No. 141, descriptive of variety tests, seed breeding and selection with field corns. The record shows the source from which the seed was obtained and includes the names of several well known seed houses.

PRODUCE handlers assert that the Bermuda onions grown in Texas give every indication of driving the original Bermuda onion from Bermuda out of the markets, even out of the eastern markets where freight is a considerable factor. This year first shipments from Bermuda and from Texas reached New York almost simultaneously.

THE N. L. Willet Seed Co., of Augusta, Ga., has increased its capital stock, the new issue being taken by Neeley Ransom, of Paris, Ky., he paying, it is said, a handsome premium over par for it. Mr. Ransom has been with the Willet concern for nearly a year and his purchase of the stock thoroughly identifies him now with the management.

OFFICIALS of the Burlington railroad are making a campaign in Iowa to induce the farmers to test all of their seed corn before planting it. Recent extensive tests which have been made by E. G. Holden, of the State Agricultural College, disclose the fact that fully fifty per cent of the seed corn in Iowa will not germinate, owing to injury which the corn received through frost.

"We have just had from an inch and a half to two inches of rain, which was very much needed for getting the ground in proper condition for planting beans," wrote F. L. Hogue, of the Hogue-Kellogg Co., Ventura, Cal., March 29. "We have an abundance of moisture now to mature the crop, which will be planted about May 1, and everything looks very favorable for a good bean crop in California this season."

THE summer weather has brought an unprecedented rush to the seed stores. Mail orders are pouring in from the procrastinators and counter trade has leaped into flood tide. It looks as though it would be a short season, and short seasons are not liked.

ADVICES from lima bean growers report a light but beneficial rainfall in the growing districts of southern California during the last week. The total precipitation since January 1 is estimated at one and a half inches, which is much below normal, and while this may help to put the ground into workable condition, a much greater rainfall is needed to assure a good crop.

FIRE AT TRENTON, N. J.

Fire destroyed the seed house and cut flower store of M. C. Ribsam on the night of Wednesday, March 30. The fire originated in the basement of the adjoining store, also owned by Mr. Ribsam and leased to another merchant. The flames spread rapidly, completely destroying both stores. The loss is estimated at $50,000.

Mr. Ribsam reopened for business this week in temporary quarters one square away from his destroyed building. Ar-

AMMONIATED LAWN LIME

Kills Weeds—Makes Grass Grow

Applied as a light top dressing to lawns, it kills all flat leaved weeds, such as Dandelion, Daisy, Plantain, Sorrel, Chickweed, Moss, etc., in 48 hours and without other fertilizer produces a wonderful, luxuriant, rich green growth of lawn grass—which is distinctly noticeable 50 feet away.

The use of Ammoniated Lawn Lime supersedes hand weeding of lawns, putting greens, etc. It saves the grass from being pulled up and in many cases ruined. Grasses take a new, vigorous growth, avoiding probable trouble in future.

Quantities: If very weedy, 1 lb. to 40 sq. ft.; 25 lbs. to 1000 sq. ft. (20 x 50). Half to one-quarter amount if moderately weedy.

Rawson's New Midsummer Aster

This is one of the best Asters for midsummer or late crop and we recommend it highly. Flowers are large and are borne on erect, long stems, often 2 feet in length. We offer the following colors: Pure white, delicate shell pink, royal purple, true lavender and bright rose. ¼ oz., 60c; oz., $2.00. All colors mixed, ¼ oz., 50c; oz., $1.50.

Rawson's Late Branching Aster

This is the best American Branching Aster grown today. It is a late cropper and a money maker. Flowers grown from our seed invariably bring from ½ to 1c a flower more in the wholesale market than other similar strains. We can furnish the following separate colors: Crimson, dark blue, light blue, rose pink, shell pink, scarlet and white. ¼ oz., 30c; oz., $1.00. All colors mixed, ¼ oz., 25c; oz., 75c.

We have many other good strains of Asters and Specialties for Florists, all described in our Special Catalogue to Florists (mailed free).

"NOT HOW CHEAP—
BUT HOW GOOD"

Short sheets make the bed seem longer. Cheap bulbs make the money seem to last longer. That's the way it seems, but the facts are different. As a matter of fact cheap bulbs are generally the most expensive to handle. It's the net results that count, and the best net results are obtained from the best quality bulbs, which, of course, cost the most money to buy. Horseshoe Brand Bulbs will average more profit per thousand than any other brand known. Try them.

LIVINGSTON'S TRIAL GROUNDS.

One of the indispensable adjuncts at an up-to-date seed shop is a trial ground. Time was when this was not a necessity, but nowadays a seedsman must know a great many things he could get along without in days gone by. In the first place, competition is so keen, especially for the trade of those who plant for profit, which is by far the most important end of the business, that the seedsman must know that his strains are as good as those of his neighbor; he must know before the average planter finds with the supply not equal to the demand. It is said that the value of bone will remain high so long as the price of live stock holds up and the kill is as light as at present at the stock yards.

THE MINNEAPOLIS SEED SHOP.

The Minneapolis Journal can not refrain from expressing its surprise that some denizens of the city that strives to be known as "making good" still send to such far-off places as New York and Philadelphia while there is such a nice man as Jesse Northrup right in their own town ready and willing to supply all local needs in seeds; furthermore, the Journal devotes a column to telling how well Northrup, King & Co. are fixed. These are a few of the things, by no means the most laudatory, that are said: "At 26 to 32 Hennepin avenue they out which is best, else he will wake up only when his trade has left him. Also, the various laws which have been enacted to regulate the seed trade, while they have little bearing on garden seeds, make it desirable to know how each lot of seed acts when planted.

The accompanying illustrations are from photographs taken at the trial farm of the Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O., where there are trials under number of the seeds from all their sources of supply and the same varieties sold by the principal houses in the trade.

In both the pictures there is to be had a glimpse of the greenhouse establishment, which includes some 60,000 feet of glass, used for producing plants for the catalogue trade and for cut flowers for the city retail flower store, carnations being the principal cut flower crop grown. There also is a considerable acreage of nursery stock on the farm.

FERTILIZER MARKETS.

Demand for fertilizers has slackened noticeably since the middle of March and from all appearances the needs of the large buyers of general farm fertilizers are pretty well supplied. As a result of appreciation that the time for high prices is past for this season, several of the ammoniates begin to reflect weakness, and there is some competition to get business, especially in the fish manures, and this has had a tendency to bring down prices materially on some late sales. Nitrate of soda is quoted at salts are still in low supply, and while prices have not eased off, a tame situation exists. Acid phosphate remains in fair request at former prices, but bone is cleaned up and prices are entirely nominal in both steamed and ground. For steamed bone $20 to $21 per ton is quoted, and for ground bone $26 to $27, occupy their own building, comprising five floors and full basement. In this building are located the general offices, the retail store, and stocks of vegetable and flower seeds. They also occupy at 724 First street N, a six-story building, besides two basements where grass and field seeds are stored and cleaned. It is possible to unload a car of seed from trackage in the rear, clean it ready for seed, and load again in the same or another car within a few minutes. Many carloads of timothy, clover and other grass seeds, as well as seed corn and other seed grains, are handled in the course of a day.

"In addition to the large buildings mentioned, Northrup, King & Co. have a two-story seed corn warehouse at St. Louis Park, a suburb six miles from the city. In this building the seed corn is cured and is selected before shelling and grading.

"In these three buildings there are employed from 175 to 200 people. Throughout Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Iowa, Montana, Washington and Oregon, as well as in Canada, there are from 7,000 to 8,000 merchants who are handling Northrup, King & Co. seeds. Throughout the year a large force of traveling men is employed to visit these merchants.

"Seeds are sold not only in the localities mentioned, but to every state in the Union, and to all countries on the globe. Large orders have recently been received from the agricultural departments of Russia, China, Japan and various British colonies in Australia and South Africa. A very large edition of a handsome catalogue is printed every spring and mailed broadcast all over the world. In the preparation of this catalogue is involved a very large sum of money; four carloads of fine book paper are required each season to print the first edition. It includes between 300 and 400 half-tone illustrations made from photographs. The postage runs to many thousands of dollars.

"In addition to maintaining the warehouses mentioned, this firm grows every season many thousand acres of field corn, sweet corn, beans, peas, etc. The seed is furnished and is planted and cultivated under its direction, and its crop experts continually travel from one locality to another where the fields are located to superintend detasseling of the corn fields and the roguing of the beans and peas.

"Special interest attaches to the seed-testing department and the bag-filling machine. Every lot of seed which is sent out is first examined for purity and tested as to germination in a special germinator, which is a duplicate of the one in use at the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C."

BOSTON,

The Market.

Continued abnormally warm weather, heavy shipments of cut flowers and drooping prices have been features of the market since Easter. The looked for cool spell, which many felt was bound to follow the Easter warm wave, has not arrived. The heat is seriously affecting the keeping qualities of the flowers, of which there is now a considerable overplus. Roses of the better grades are still selling well, especially Beauties and Killarney. My Maryland is showing up well and promises to be a good warm weather sort.

SPECIAL GLADIOLUS OFFER

AMERICA

A few points of merit—Color: A beautiful soft flesh pink, very light and much like "Enchantress" Carnation, except slightly tinged with lavender. Size: Growth very strong and healthy, producing beautiful dark green foliage, and strong, erect spikes of the largest flowers. Purposes: For florists' use its color makes it everything to be desired; delicate, attractive and absolutely new. It is most desirable for planting in beds in parks, private estates, etc.

AMERICA. The best commercial pink in existence. 1st size bulbs, 100, $4.00; 1000, $30.00; 5000, $125.00.

ATTRACTION. Deep, dark, rich crimson with a very conspicuous large pure white center and throat. At once a most beautiful and attractive sort, 100, $4.00; 1000, $35.00.

AUGUSTA. Lovely pure white with blue anthers, 1½ to 2½ inches. 100, $2.25; 1000, $20.00; 5000, $90.00.

BLUE JAY (Baron Hulot). The finest blue Gladiolus yet seen. It is a rich deep color of indigo shade. The only real blue Gladiolus on the market. 100, $9.00; 1000, $75.00.

BRENCHLEYENSIS. Extra fine red variety, 1½ to 2½ inches. 100, $1.50; 1000, $12.00; 5000, $55.00.

COLUMBIA. Light orange scarlet, freely blotched and penciled with bluish-purple. Throat freely mottled. 100, $2.00; 1000, $15.00; 5000, $70.00.

CERES. Pure white, spotted with purplish rose. 100, $1.50; 1000, $12.00; 5000, $55.00.

MAY. A lovely pure white flower, finely flaked, bright rosy crimson. 100, $2.00; 1000, $15.00; 5000, $70.00.

NEZINSCOTT. Bright blood scarlet, with deep velvety crimson black blotches and white mottlings in throat. 100, $4.00; 1000, $30.00; 5000, $145.00.

SALEM. Fine salmon-pink, maroon blotches. 100, $6.00; 1000, $40.00.

SULPHUR KING. The finest yellow Gladiolus. 100, $15.00; 1000, $140.00.

Stump & Walter Co

50 Barclay Street, NEW YORK

Bride and Maid are almost unsalable; long-stemmed blooms go at 2 cents, while Killarney of similar grade will bring 8 cents. Mrs. Aaron Ward and Rhea Reid are each showing up well at present.

Carnations are showing the effects of the torrid weather. Such varieties as Enchantress are coming badly faded. Prices have dropped to $10 per thousand, not a few lower; the best go at $2. Single violets are down and out, but doubles of moderate quality will come in a week or two longer; 300 for $1 is an average rate.

Marguerites are more plentiful; the yellow ones sell the best. Sweet peas are coming in tremendous quantities; poorer grades bring little, but good stemmed flowers are selling well. Lilies are overplentiful and a slow sale. There were many cut lilies left from Easter. Callas are more plentiful. Bulbous stock is shortening up. Some good Spanish iris is arriving and meets with a ready sale. Lilium candidum is of good quality, but sells slowly now.

Valley, myosotis, pansies, ixias, ranunculi, mignonette, tritonias, centaureas, calendulas, wallflowers and quite a variety of other flowers are seen. For these sales are somewhat uncertain, a good call one day and little demand the next. Ten weeks' stocks are a drag, while snapdragons, unless they are of pink or other taking shades, sell poorly. There is a steady call for Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus and adiantum. Trade in pot plants since Easter has been quiet, but baskets of pansies, forget-me-nots, daisies, etc., are making their appearance, and planting of these will be quite general a month earlier than usual.

Various Notes.

L. E. Smith, of Tewksbury, is handling large quantities of extra fine yellow and white marguerites at 2 Park street. They have the best stems I have seen this season.

Bride and Bridesmaid roses would seem to be on their last legs in the Boston market. A prominent salesman reported 12,000 of these unsold a few days ago, against a surplus of only 200 Killarney. Short Killarney brought as much as best quality Bride and Maid.

S. J. Goddard will sail, June 8, per S. S. Teutonic for England, returning about August 1. He will spend his time chiefly in England and the Channel Islands and will visit many trade establishments, particularly carnation specialists.

Charles T. Boyle, of Galvin's Tremont street store, is quite sick with rheumatism.

Pink Delight carnation is going to be as abundant as Enchantress in the Boston market next season, unless all signs fail.

N. F. Comley expects to grow 20,000; L. E. Small has 4,000, and about every carnation grower is going to plant it heavily.

Julius H. Zinn had a pretty window arranged with the new rose, Mrs. Aaron Ward, April 1. This rose is well grown by W. H. Elliott and seems to be taking the popular fancy.

Thomas Pegler, at 6 Park street, is handling extra fine Richmond and Killarney roses; President Seelye, Winsor and other carnations, from H. W. Field, of Northampton.

Edward J. Rogean, at 6 Park street, is handling large and finely grown roses from A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.

Mrs. Philip L. Carbone and Miss Carbone were among the passengers sailing on S. S. Romanic for Naples from Boston, April 2.

Thomas Pegler, at 6 Park street, is the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, April 19. A number of timely topics will be discussed through the question box. Other business will include the election of a successor to the late treasurer, Edward Hatch.

and John Barr's new variegated seedling are realizing top prices at 2 Park street at present.

W. B. Goodenow is still bringing in large lots of extra fine Campbell violets. He will plant tomatoes heavily again this season in his houses.

William Spillsbury finished a successful single violet season April 2. He will now devote his energies to cucumbers and tomatoes for a few months.

Mann Bros. have the best Spanish iris I have seen this season. This flower sells well now, when many are tiring of carnations and roses.

March proved a record breaker for heat. Skies were almost continually clear. Vegetation is now about three weeks ahead of the average season.

The first step in the present season's fight against the gipsy moth in the vicinity of Boston was made last week, when 100 colonies, containing 1,000,000 Japanese parasites, were planted in the badly infested sections. In July 1,000,000 more will be liberated. The parasites attack the gipsy moth eggs, in which the embryonic caterpillars are contained.

The early season is making strenuous times for the local nurseries, which are simply overwhelmed with orders and are working practically night and day in an effort to keep abreast of them. A recent call at the Bay State Nurseries found a big force of diggers and packers at work, with more orders on hand than ever before at this season.

George W. Butterworth hopes to pay another visit to Europe during the coming summer, but not until after the big orchid show, at which some of the South Framingham specimen cattleyas should be in evidence.

R. & J. Farquhar Co. is having the busiest season on record in its seed department and has a lot of landscape work on hand, for which they would welcome a spell of cooler weather.

Entries to the big orchid show in Boston will close April 30. Those already received are in themselves sufficient for a fine exhibition. W. N. CRAIG.

COMPOST FOR GENERAL STOCK.

I should like to get your advice as to building a compost heap which would be suitable for violets, carnations, chrysanthemums, callas and bedding plants. Is it necessary to mix new soil with the soil taken from benches? Would you advise to mix in some wood ashes? If so, how much? G. A. R.

It is not the best kind of policy to use old soil from benches until it has been exposed to the elements for at least a year, and two years would be better.

where the soil is of a fibrous, loamy nature, and build this in a pile, using four loads of loam to one load of decomposed cow manure. Leave this for a week or two and then chop it up. In a few days it will be ready for the benches.

The proportion of wood ashes to use when mixing would be about one peck to each load of compost. When the plants require more potash the ashes are easily applied, and, being quite soluble, act quickly. RIBES.

Vegetable Forcing.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, April 5.—Cucumbers, $1 to $1.35 doz.; lettuce, 25c to 27½c box; radishes, 25c to 75c dozen bunches.

NEW YORK, April 4.—Mushrooms in moderate supply and steady. Cucumbers dull. Lettuce weak. Radishes and rhubarb without change. Beet tops, 50c box; cucumbers, 90c to $1.25 doz.; cauliflowers, $3.50 box of 12 to 14; lettuce, $1 to $1.75 strap; mint, 15c to 25c dozen bunches; mushrooms, 15c to 40c lb.; radishes, $2 to $2.50 hundred bunches; rhubarb, 25c to 40c dozen bunches; tomatoes, 10c to 20c lb.

BOSTON, April 4.—Hot weather; heavy arrivals from the south and increased hothouse supplies have caused declines in prices. Trade is quite good. Cucumbers, $3 to $7 box; tomatoes, 20c to 30c lb.; lettuce, $1 to $1.25 box; bunch carrots, $1 doz.; bunch beets, 1.75 doz.; parsley, $1.25 to $1.50 box; radishes, $2 to $2.25 box; rhubarb (local hothouse), 5c to 6c lb.; romaine, $1 doz.; escarolle, 75c to $1 doz.; mushrooms, $1.25 to $2 basket.

MUMS AS A CATCH CROP.

We should like to know if mums ought to be set outdoors a while, or be put in the house as soon as lettuce and radish are out in the spring. I see where one man says the cuttings ought to be all started by March 1, and another says there is plenty of time after March 1 for all. Are cuttings broken from the new plants good to put in the sand to raise plants, and do they need to be broken back the same as carnations?

W. D. P. & S.

Chrysanthemums started March 1 are intended to furnish large specimen blooms for exhibition purposes. May 1 to June 1 is a suitable time to propagate for commercial blooms. The shoots which come from the base of the old plants are the best for propagating purposes. Those rooted in April and the early part of May can be pinched once if necessary, and two or three shoots allowed to grow, which will each carry a nice flower. As a general thing, one flower is allowed per plant. The cuttings should not go out of doors at all. Pot off singly when rooted. Stand on a bench and plant directly from these into the beds or benches. Do not allow them to remain long enough in the pots to become hard or the roots matted. When one bloom per plant is to be carried, no pinching must be done.

C. W.

CHICORY.

Will you kindly tell me the name of the enclosed vegetable and how to grow it?

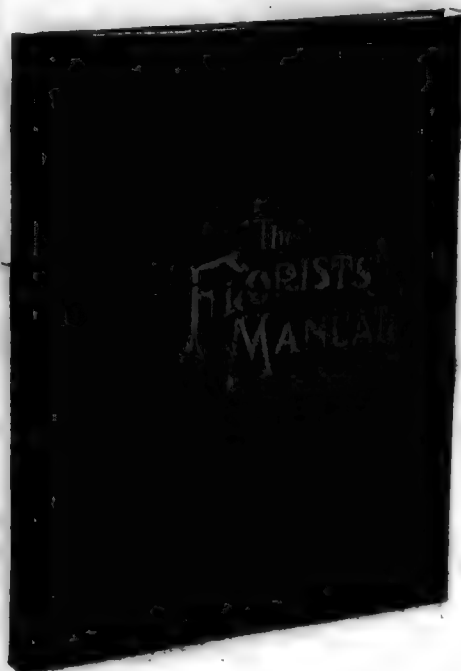

A. J. P.

The vegetable is chicory, a common crop in France and other parts of Europe, but comparatively little known in this country.

There are several quite different varieties of chicory. One large-rooted variety is known as a substitute for, and an adulterant of, coffee, the roots being roasted and ground for this purpose. The samples submitted, however, are new, bleached shoots from roots of the salad variety, which have been grown outside in summer and forced in a dark place in winter.

The culture is simple and the plants are prolific. I believe that in a few years it will be grown extensively in this country. The chicory should be grown on a good, soft, rich piece of garden soil, which should need no application of fertilizer at the time of putting in the crop.

The seed is sown in rows, like parsnip or vegetable oyster seed. The rows should be fourteen or sixteen inches apart. After the plants are up nicely, they must be thinned out, leaving them seven or eight inches apart in the row. Do not plant them until about May 1. Keep them well cultivated and weeded until fall.

In November the roots, which somewhat resemble horse radish or salsify, are carefully lifted. They should not be all taken in at once, but in several batches at different times.

A shed like a mushroom house, or under benches in the greenhouse where there are no heating pipes, will be suitable places for forcing. The place must be dark, like a mushroom house, in order to bleach the shoots properly.

The roots are packed in good soil about three inches apart each way, leaving the tops showing above the surface of the soil. All leaves are trimmed off to within a half inch of the crown. Fine soil should be worked in between the roots and the bed should be well watered, filling in more soil where needed, but being careful to leave the tops in sight above the surface of the soil. They must be kept moist and dark and all drafts must be excluded. They should be sprayed occasionally and kept at a temperature of about 60 degrees day and night. In about three weeks the sprouts or bleached heads will be salable. Select only well blanched tops and cut with a sharp knife.

It is well to have the roots stored in a cool shed or cellar, where they can be

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

This city has been having the most delightful spring weather, with the temperature just right to bring the people out.

Trees and shrubbery will be in blossom in a few days if this weather continues, and will certainly be injured if we have a hard frost. Lilac is in full leaf. Magnolias are almost ready to open their flowers and many of the earliest blooming shrubs are showing color. The single early tulips in some places are already in bloom, as also are the Emperor narcissi. All of this the first week in April makes us fear for our spring flowers, when we remember that snow and frost are common and always expected at any time this month, not to speak of the first two weeks of May.

However, business has been good all the week, cleaning stock up nicely, and there has been plenty of it. Violets are getting smaller every day and it will not take much more warm weather to finish them. The southern daffodils which came into this market have scarcely paid the express charges. In most cases whole consignments arrived soft as mush.

Various Notes.

Ben Elliott has learned a new method of getting off a moving trolley car. He says about two somersaults will let you settle right; at least, that was his experience.

Fred Burki and P. S. Randolph put in one evening at the automobile show, looking into the mechanism of the various makes. They both have the bug and the price and I am anticipating a ride before long.

Phil Langhans has a set of plans and specifications ready for planting his summer place at Allison Park—the work of a whole winter, which, if carried out, would do for a public park.

Uncle John Wyland has the Oregon fever and is offering his beautiful home and greenhouses at Allison Park for sale. A good chance for some one to get a bargain.

Albert Lorch made a record-breaking cut of carnations for Easter. His crop came just right, to the minute.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. reports March as having been the best month since the firm has been in business.

The A. W. Smith Co. has added a flower and garden seed and vegetable plant department on the third floor, and this bright weather has kept them busy.

Mrs. W. D. Faulk, of Homestead, Pa., has been ill since before Easter.

E. C. Ludwig, who is always busy, had an unusual run of funeral work last week. He is thinking seriously of installing auto trucks and selling his horses and wagons.

H. L. Blind & Bros. are also getting an automobile. The posy business is getting so fast that horses will not answer these days. These are speedy times.

As horses are too slow, the florists are all buying automobiles, and now, with these, the city is too slow, for every now and then some florist and his machine are hauled in for breaking the city ordinance against speeding. On Easter Sunday morning the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. made a delivery of violets to Randolph & McClements, something over five miles from their store, in exactly thirteen minutes from the time the order came over the telephone. There was an ordinance "busted" that trip.

Speaking about going some—about sixty-five years ago B. A. Elliott, one of our pioneer florists, had a greenhouse on Thirtieth street, in the south side, known then as Brownstown. He loaded his plants on a wagon built for the purpose and pulled it over to the city market himself. The next year he bought a spotted pony and felt bigger than those fellows with their automobiles.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June, 1910.

NURSEYMEN'S spring lists were issued in anticipation of normal weather conditions and do not in all cases fit the season.

C. A. BENNETT, Robbinsville, N. J., reports an exceedingly brisk sale for stock the last few months. California privet is one of his specialties.

G. L. WELCH & Co., Fremont, Neb., have purchased seventeen acres of land for an addition to their nursery. The tract has a frontage of a quarter of a mile along the Union Pacific railroad.

THE Oregon apple growers who are fighting the Lafean bill in congress, establishing a standard size for apple boxes, claim to have assurance that the bill will not be passed by the present congress.

THE season is advancing too swiftly to suit the nursery interests. Everybody is on the jump in an endeavor to get as much done as possible, for it looks as though the season might prove to be the shortest on record.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture has issued a bulletin entitled "The Substitution of Lime-sulphur Preparations for Bordeaux Mixture in the Treatment of Apple Diseases," that will be of interest to orchardists and nurserymen.

C. GROOTENDORST, of F. J. Grootendorst & Sons, Boskoop, Holland, sailed April 2 per S. S. Rotterdam, to devote sixty days to calling on American nurserymen. He makes his headquarters in New York with P. C. Kuyper & Co., 10 Broadway.

S. B. HAMPTON, manager of the Corona Lemon Co., Corona, Cal., has testified that it costs $163.94 an acre, on an average, to maintain a bearing lemon grove each season, and that the average yield is ninety-seven boxes a year. Mr. Hampton stated that there are about 16,000 acres of bearing lemons in California, while the shipments amount to between 5,000 and 6,000 cars a year.

THE Commissioner of Internal Revenue, charged with the collection of the new Taft tax on corporations, has rendered a decision (No. 48) to the effect that "the amount received by nursery companies from the sales of trees, etc., less the amount expended for seedlings and young trees, is to be included in gross income. The amount expended for labor, salesmen, etc., is to be deducted as expenses."

THE DENVER MEETING.

It has not been possible to secure reduced railroad rates to Denver for the thirty-fifth annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen June 8 to 10, but the low summer tourist fares will be available. Rochester plans a special sleeper, well filled, and another doubtless will go out from either St. Louis or Kansas City.

The Brown Palace hotel has been chosen for the headquarters. E. P. Bernardin, Parsons, Kan., is in charge of the trades display and promises a good exhibition. F. A. Weber is chairman of the entertainment committee and has arranged a number of novel events. J. W. Hill, of Des Moines, has charge of the program and is a well known believer in the old saying that "brevity is the soul of wit." Therefore he has ar-

Also we have on hand a very fine collection of Hybrid Teas, Everblooming Roses, such as Killarney, Cochet, pink and white, Kaiserins, etc.

Prices upon application

Ramblers and Other Climbing Roses

CRIMSON RAMBLER. American Grown. The only stock for forcing. Large heavy plants, two years old, mossed and packed in bundles of 10, 3 to 4 feet, $1.25 for 10, $12.00 per 100; 4 to 5 feet, $1.75 for 10, $15.00 per 100; 5 to 6 feet, extra heavy, $2.25 for 10, $20.00 per 100.

PAUL'S CARMINE PILLAR. Flowers large and free; color rosy carmine. Two-year-old, field grown. 85c for 5, $15.00 per 100.

DOROTHY PERKINS. Lovely shell-pink color. $1.25 for 10, $12.00 per 100.

TAUSENDSCHON. The new Rambler Rose. The name translated means a "thousand beauties." Color beautiful rose, shading to pink. $2.25 for 10, $20.00 per 100.

LADY GAY. A seedling from the popular Crimson Rambler, which it resembles in habit and general effect. The flowers are of a delicate cherry-pink color, which fades to soft white. Strong plants, field-grown, 4 to 5 feet. $1.75 for 10, $15.00 per 100.

Flower of Fairfield The Everblooming Crimson Rambler

This variety is a sport from the beautiful Crimson Rambler, is similar in color, more brilliant and lasting than the old favorite. It also possesses the further advantage over the Crimson Rambler in the fact that it flowers profusely on the young wood the first year. Flower of Fairfield is a vigorous grower and free bloomer. It starts to bloom early in the Spring and continues until late in the Autumn. It is rightly termed "perpetual blooming." 40c each, $3.50 for 10, $30.00 per 100.

Veilchenblau (Violet-Blue)

It has long been the desire of rosarians to secure a blue Rose. In Veilchenblau we have practically approached this color. The steel-blue flowers of this new Rose appear in large clusters, are semi-double, of medium size and keep in bloom a long time. The showy yellow stamens, contrasting with the blue flower, give the whole a striking appearance. 60c each, $5.75 for 10, $55.00 per 100.

Baby Rambler Roses

BABY DOROTHY. The same in habit as Baby Rambler, but the color of the flowers is similar to Dorothy Perkins. It makes an excellent pot plant for forcing. Price for strong, field-grown plants, 85c for 5, $10.00 per 100.

CATHERINE SEIMETH. A White Baby Rambler Rose, larger and better flowers than the type. White with yellowish center. 85c for 5, $15.00 per 100.

MRS. WM. H. CUTBUSH. Color intense crimson and exceptionally free-flowering. 85c for 5, $15.00 per 100.

MME. NORBERT LEVAVASSEUR (Baby Rambler). Strong, field-grown plants. 85c for 5, $15.00 per 100.

THE TREE BABY RAMBLER. (Grown as a Standard.) The popularity of the Baby Rambler has suggested the growing of it as a tree or standard. 40c each, $3.75 for 10, $35.00 per 100.

BABY DOROTHY. (Grown as a Standard.) For description, see above. 75c each, $6.25 for 10, $60.00 per 100.

We also have a fine stock of Hybrids and Hybrid Teas, standard grown.

Something New in Roses for Florists HALF STANDARD BABY RAMBLERS

These are Baby Ramblers, grown on stems or standards about one and one-half feet high, and will be a novelty for your trade you cannot profitably overlook. They are offered for the first time in this country in the following varieties:

BABY DOROTHY (Half standard). Deep pink. 60c each, $6.00 per doz., $45.00 per 100.

BABY RAMBLER (Half standard). Crimson. 45c each, $4.50 per doz., $35.00 per 100.

BABY CATHERINE SEIMETH (Half standard). White. 45c each, $4.50 per doz., $35.00 per 100.

SPRAYING.

Spraying trees and shrubs becomes more of a necessity each year, and every florist should know something about it. Quite a number are now carrying spraying outfits and this class of work forms an important part of their work, yielding also a good profit. The man or woman who will not spray cannot expect good crops.

Spraying for San Jose, oyster shell and other scales should be done while the trees or shrubs are dormant. Except in the more northerly states, it is now late to use either the lime sulphur solution or the soluble oils. Bordeaux mixture is the standard fungicide for rust, scab and fungous diseases. It does not kill insects, however, as some imagine. Arsenate of lead, at the rate of eight pounds to 100 gallons of water, is the best of all remedies for all leaf-eating insects. For the codling-moth on apples and other fruits, a thorough spraying with Bordeaux and arsenate of lead should be given as soon as the blossoms fall, using a nozzle which will give a fine, misty spray.

The spray pumps used for fighting insects can also be advantageously used for shading greenhouses, doing the work in a fraction of the time necessary when brushes are used.

For aphids there is no better remedy than kerosene emulsion. It is well to prepare a good supply of this now, as it will soon be needed. Dissolve one-half pound of any good, hard soap in a gallon of boiling water. Churn until a white emulsion is formed. One gallon of this to ten gallons of water will kill aphids on any trees or shrubs. It is also excellent for chrysanthemums, and at the above strength it will not injure the foliage if kept well agitated while being applied.

EVERETT, WASH.—V. Kangley has sold his greenhouses and business to Charles Ieuter, formerly of Streator, Ill.

SEATTLE, WASH.—Wm. R. Gibson, manager of the Hollywood Gardens, says that plans are made for the early removal of the retail store to much larger quarters. Business is excellent.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—Petitions in voluntary bankruptcy were filed in the United States district court March 24 by Alexander Mann, Jr., who fails for $3,062, without assets.

WALLA WALLA, WASH.—Huff & Young, who at present have five good sized greenhouses, are contemplating the erection of additional buildings, including an office and perhaps more greenhouses. Hampton Huff, the senior member of the firm, has been engaged in the business here for the last fifteen years, and two years ago he associated himself with Fred M. Young, a florist of life-long experience.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—The California Ladies' Flower & Plant Co. has been incorporated, and its papers regularly filed with the secretary of state at Sacramento. It has a capital stock of $75,000, of which $1,000 is paid up. The officers and incorporators are Mrs. W. C. Ralston, president; Mrs. F. K. Firth, vice-president; Mrs. Lucy M. Hayes, secretary; Mrs. Thomas H. Stevenson, treasurer; Mrs. George Ralston and Mrs. California Newton. It is expected that a large nursery will be established and flowers will be grown to supply the local and coast markets. It is understood Mrs. Thomas H. Stevenson will be the active manager of the company.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

During the week before Easter a good deal of fog prevailed and rain was predicted every day, but it held off until Easter Sunday, when it rained hard all day. On Monday morning there were twelve inches of snow on Mount Lowe and the white covering extended far down the sides, being three inches deep at Rubio Canyon. A carload of the snow was brought down to the grounds of the Hotel Maryland, in Pasadena, where the eastern guests had the pleasure of participating in a snowball battle on the rose-bordered lawn, snowballs and flowers making a novel combination.

The florists all had fine Easter displays and there was a great demand for all kinds of flowers. Easter lilies, of course, had first call and there were many thousands of them sold. Most of them were of medium length, though there were some remarkably tall ones, which are always sought after for church decoration. There were to be seen in most of the stores some attractive made-up baskets of lilies and ferns, as well as many combination baskets. Cut lilies sold at $4 a dozen stalks. They never sell by the blossom and bud here, as they do in the east.

Pans of valley sold exceedingly well and there were beautiful spiræas to be seen in all the stores.

There were no azaleas, as they are all through blooming. Only a few pans of tulips and hyacinths were seen. Lilacs were scarce. Violets are gone.

Roses and carnations were plentiful, as were also smilax, plumosus and ferns, which were used profusely in trimming the churches, all of which were elaborately decorated. Thousands of Easter lilies and roses were used, and the callas and marguerites must have run into hundreds of thousands. Besides being banked everywhere, the callas were made up into numerous crosses, of varying sizes, up to ten feet high in some of the churches. The pastor of one of the churches asked that 20,000 lilies be supplied by the members of the congregation, and more than 30,000 were given, many of them being Easter lilies, which were banked ten feet high on three sides of the chancel.

There was a great demand for boxes of prepared orange blossoms, as they are the only flowers which the tourists can send east, besides being a novelty.

Various Notes.

The park conservatories had a large and beautiful Easter display of orchids, hyacinths, tulips, narcissi and a variety of other bulbous flowers. As the rain prevented many from going out on Easter, there were crowds of visitors last week.

Wright's Flower Shop rented a vacant store on Broadway for the overflow and it was filled with Easter lilies and callas, which went fast.

The Market.

Easter has passed into history as one of the best in the annals of local trade within recent years. Owing to the quiet condition of business prior to the middle of Easter week, many of the storekeepers were fearful of laying in a large stock of flowers. As a consequence some were caught napping and at the last moment did not have enough stock on hand to fill orders. The heaviest demand was for cut Easter lilies, and the fact that at the end of the week there were not enough flowers in the town to supply the local men shows how lively business was. The weather was cold for a week or more preceding Easter and blossoms did not open as fast as was expected; in addition, the extraordinary amount of shipping that was done by many of our houses easily used up all available stock. With carnations there was little trouble, except in the case of the pure white sorts, but these were scarce. Lilies in pots were in about sufficient quantity to fill all orders, but no unsold stock has been reported. About the same report could be made on azaleas, rambler roses, hyacinths, primulas, cinerarias, ferns, etc.

In the week after Easter, trade kept well on the move, with plenty of funeral work. The weather has turned quite warm again and all kinds of stock are on a downward tendency as far as price is concerned. Bulbous flowers of all kinds are rapidly passing out of season, and everything else is becoming more plentiful.

Various Notes.

MacRorie & McLaren are shipping large quantities of fine nursery stock to San Gabriel valley, to ornament the grounds of H. E. Huntington.

Thos. Redmayne has severed his connection with the Hotel Rafael, at San Rafael, and will devote his time in future to landscape gardening.

Henry Gresens has returned from a trip to Germany and taken charge again of his establishment on Park street, Alameda.

The Piedmont Seed & Floral Co. is permanently located in its new premises, 64 San Pablo avenue, Oakland.

Do-moto Bros. are busily engaged in moving most of their pot plants to their new grounds at Elmhurst. They will demolish many of the old structures on Central avenue, Melrose, Cal.

David Neely, one of San Francisco's pioneer florists, is dangerously sick at the Roosevelt hospital, in Berkeley. Mr. Neely is 78 years of age.

H. H. Lilienthal, a landscape gardener of Berkeley, Cal., claims to have originated a new race of roses, having edible pods. Mr. Lilienthal has been experimenting along these lines for a considerable time and now professes to have discovered an entirely new and valuable fruit.

TROUBLE WITH PLANTS.

I have some hardy phlox in 3-inch pots. The growths wilt and die as fast as they come up. Some are dry, some are wet and both do the same. Rose-leaved geraniums do the same. No insects to be found on either plants. Boston and Whitman ferns have a gray floury substance on top side of leaves and turn brown and fall off, the stem remaining green, but the fern finally dies. Have had that trouble since last fall. Please give remedy.

A. D. H.

Keep the hardy phlox in a coldframe. At this time it will be much better in the open altogether. I cannot explain the cause of the drying up of the shoots and foliage on this and the rose-leaved geraniums, unless it be from too much heat and dryness at the root. A too dry atmosphere may have caused an attack of red spider or thrips on your ferns. Cut off the affected fronds and maintain a moist atmosphere. Neither of these pests will thrive under such conditions. If the soil is in good condition and drainage perfect, the plants will want abundant supplies of water. Some shade will, of course, be necessary. They do not want a close, stuffy house, succeeding better under cooler conditions.

Double Your Carnation Profits—Last Chance to Buy

The trade has certainly bought liberally of Carnation Dorothy Gordon this winter and spring—orders for rooted cuttings have taxed our producing capacity nearly to the limit, but we're proud of the stock we've sent out, and judging by their kind letters, our customers are pleased, too. And next winter, when all those splendid plants come to bloom and these florists begin to make money as they have never before made it from carnations, they'll be still better satisfied! Have YOU delayed getting in your order for this magnificent new Carnation? If so, this advertisement is addressed to you; we have just a few thousand more cuttings in the sand for April 15th delivery, and when these are taken, no more will be available till next winter.

We urge you, if you want to double your carnation profits, not to delay; the merit of this splendid new variety has been thoroughly proved and the only possible loss you can experience in the matter is to let this opportunity slip by and stick to the old sorts you've been growing in the past.

Carnation Dorothy Gordon

has a splendid pedigree, a long list of good qualities, and an enviable record of prizes and awards. It is a seedling of Lawson on Enchantress, possessing the principal merits of these varieties without their faults. It is vigorous in growth and is perfectly free from disease. Its flowers are a trifle darker than Pink Enchantress; they are borne in double the quantity, and are of exceptional size—averaging over 3 inches in diameter. They are very fragrant and keep exceptionally well. The market price paid for Carnation Dorothy Gordon is regularly 50 per cent more than that paid for Enchantress.

From the very first, Dorothy Gordon has established a splendid record as an exhibition variety. High awards were given it at the meeting of the American Carnation Society in 1908 and at the National Gardeners' Association meeting in New York in 1909. This season it has attracted much attention and has won further renown at the Pittsburg and Toronto meetings.

In order to give the trade a fair opportunity to test it thoroughly, we have from the first sold rooted cuttings at a price which would get it established everywhere. This low figure still prevails, and the remaining stock will be sold at these prices: $10 per 100; $75 per 1000. No further offers this season.

LOUISVILLE.

The Market.

Business for Easter was the best in years and local florists are well pleased. Never before were there so many plants to be had, and stock, on the whole, was good. With regular summer weather, there was no trouble in getting stock in on time. Cool cellars and sheds were greatly in demand, to hold back the most forward stock, as the thermometer registered 88 degrees March 24, and kept close to that mark on Good Friday and Saturday.

Easter lilies were most in demand and the supply was a little short, though more local growers handled them than ever before. Carnations looked sleepy and were about equal to demand. Good roses were in fair supply and cleaned up. Violets were all to the bad and nothing was doing in this line. Some good sweet peas were to be seen and they sold well. Beauties were in good shape and sold out clean. Other cut flowers, such as forget-me-nots, mignonette, stocks and bulbous stock, were in good supply. Orchids, valley and gardenias were about equal to demand. Prices on all cut flowers were advanced just a little.

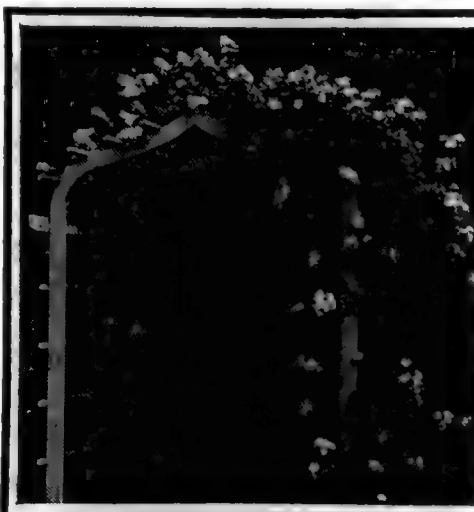

There was nothing startling in the way of decorations, but all plants to be had were in the different churches. Green goods were about equal to demand. In the way of blooming plants, one could see everything from geraniums to apple trees and then some. Some good lilacs, rhododendrons and azaleas were to be seen and cleaned up nicely. Some few pans of bulbous stock went to the dump, owing to the warm weather, but were not missed, as there was plenty of it to be had.

Business since Easter has been good. Quite a lot of funeral work has been turned out and the demand for cut flowers has been good. Carnations are short in supply, but there are quantities of other stock and the shortage is not noticed much. The greenhouse men are putting in some busy days, planting pansies, ivy and shrubbery.

Various Notes.

Fred L. Schulz is well satisfied with his first Easter in his new store.

SCARLET GLOW. (New) an extra good bright scarlet, a large flower and exceptional keeping qualities. It is in perfect health, and has that early and free flowering habit that characterizes a paying commercial variety. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

PINK DELIGHT. Clear waxy shell pink. The variety that won over Enchantress at the A. C. S. meetings, Indianapolis and Pittsburg, January, 1909 and 1910. It has all the good points to make it the leader and with its unequaled substance, the best keeping and shipping carnation in the light pink class.

All of our early April delivery is sold. We are booking orders for late April delivery only. Pink Delight makes a quick and well shaped growth, and the April cuttings of this variety are as good as February and March of most all other varieties. $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

We have White Perfection, Rose-pink Enchantress, White Enchantress, Winona, Enchantress, Aristocrat, Beacon.

SANGAMO BRILLIANT PINK

Experienced carnation growers who have visited our place, and have carefully watched Sangamo this season, claim it will produce twice as many blooms as any other variety grown today. It is not only the most prolific carnation, but the calyx does not burst, and the stem is always long and stiff; therefore, Sangamo increases your profits more than two-fold. We not only invite growers to visit our place to see for their own satisfaction, but we will pay your railroad fare from Chicago to our place and back again, if you will only come. It is not too late for Sangamo. Our best plants were propagated in March and April last year.

WASHINGTON.

Z. D. Blackstone held a special sale on the day before Easter in a store near his own. Here some $200 worth of plant odds and ends not up to the Blackstone standard were marketed; damaged decorative stock, poorly flowering blooming plants, and so on. Mr. Blackstone is confident that sale did not in the least affect regular business at his own shop. Here is a good suggestion for every florist.

M. E. C.

EVANSVILLE.

The Market.

Easter trade was unusually good this year and everybody was satisfied. Some report the best business they ever had. The weather was ideal. The month of March seemed like one long spring day—there was so little change in the temperature.

The warm weather hurried the Easter lilies along until there were not many left for Easter. Bulb stock was about gone. Roses and carnations were plentiful and were most called for, though sweet peas, violets and lily of the valley were in good demand. Pot plants of all kinds sold well. Roses brought as high as $2 for the best. Carnations were sold for 75 cents per dozen; the price was low because of the quantities on hand.

Various Notes.

The Blackman Floral Co. had its usual big trade. This firm had a great supply of all kinds of stock, both cut flowers and potted plants.

Julius Niednagel & Sons had a large cut of roses and carnations and sold out clean.

J. C. Elsperman reports the best trade he ever had. He has finished the two new houses and has them filled.

Louis Fritsch says business was fine and that his trade keeps increasing right along.

Nellie Goodge was well pleased with her trade.

B. F. Kramer did a good business. He handled more plants than last year.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The summerlike weather which prevailed the week previous to Easter continued through last week, and this increased the receipts, which ran way ahead of the demand. While there was a good deal of stock sold, considering that it was right after a holiday, still there was more than enough coming in daily, so that stock left over from the day before did not cut any figure. Plenty of lilies have been coming in the last few days.

Various Notes.

M. A. McKenney & Co. say that Easter trade with them was exceptionally fine. While they sold a lot of cut flowers, they notice an increase from year to year in plant sales. Everything considered, they are well pleased.

The Currie Bros. Co. has been so rushed with funeral work since Easter that they could not say whether business financially was ahead of last year. "We had all we could wish for, with plenty of stock in all lines, with the single exception of lilies; ran short on these before Saturday," is the way Roy Currie expressed himself.

Walter M. Maas & Co., 128 Oneida street, experienced their first Easter, and they claim that business ran way ahead of expectations and several good sized decorations since then have kept them on the jump. They, too, say that good pot plants were a better proposition than cut flowers.

Clem Pollworth, of the C. C. Pollworth Co., in reviewing Easter business, remarked that it was quite noticeable that the smaller and cheaper grades of pot plants did not sell as readily this year as in former seasons.

Gustave Pohl and the Mueller & Schroeder Co. are consigning snapdragons of extra fine quality, to the Holton & Hunkel Co. these days. The snapdragons were a good proposition last week. E. O.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

Ideal weather conditions have conspired to keep retail trade good after Easter, and the usual numbers of weddings and social functions have created a demand for cut flowers and plants. Plants have been used to a large extent in decorative work and have brought good prices. All cut flowers have been plentiful.

Various Notes.

Extensive building operations on Main street east have occasioned some changes in location among the florists. Thomas Cogger moves from the corner of North and Main streets to 58 North street. E. C. Campbell goes to Chili avenue and will have his retail store in connection with his greenhouses. The Rochester Floral Co. is now located at 245 Main street.

W. T. Fonda was the host at a dinner given to thirty of the young ladies from the business department of James Vick's Sons, at the Pinnacle club, Wednesday evening, March 30. Bowling, dancing and music were enjoyed.

The monthly meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association will be held April 11 at the club rooms, Cutler building.

Supt. C. H. Vick has matters well in hand for the S. A. F. trade exhibition. A floor plan of Convention hall has been prepared, which shows the total area of space available, the amount devoted to cut flowers, plants, machinery, etc. Copies of the rules governing the trade exhibit have been printed, and copies of both plan and rules will be mailed at an early date to exhibitors who showed at Cincinnati, and to others interested. Some changes in the rules were made by the executive board at the recent meeting, and a new schedule of rates for space adopted. The new rates are as follows:

The smallest amount of space sold is....	$ 5.00
50 square feet.....	10.00
100 square feet.....	20.00
150 square feet.....	29.00
200 square feet.....	38.00

SELECT FERNS For Fine Store Trade

We offer a grand lot of exceptionally well-grown plants of the different varieties of Nephrolepis, which will be found one of the best selling and most profitable plants that florists can handle. Our stock is in unusually fine shape, and we will guarantee it will please the most exacting, as it is exceptionally good value at the prices quoted.

Improved Elegantissima. The finest of all this type. It was introduced by us in 1905. This form of Elegantissima has been greatly improved, and shows no tendency to revert to the Boston, making it the most valuable fern of this type. Strong plants, 4-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.; 6-in., $6.00 to $9.00 per doz.—according to size; 8-in., $12.00 to $18.00 per doz.—according to size.

Superbissima. Introduced by us in 1908. A very unique and distinct novelty. Its distinguishing characteristics are its dark green foliage and dense growth. Fronds are very heavily imbricated, making them very dense and compact. Strong plants, 4-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.; 6-in., $6.00 to $9.00 per doz.—according to size; 8-in., $12.00 to $18.00 per doz.—according to size.

SMILAX AND OTHER GREENS.

"The latest thing in smilax," says a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser, "is T. Rochford & Sons' yellow-leaved variety. With most florists the yellow-shaded foliage is more appreciated than the deep, somber green. At Cragg, Harrison & Cragg's, I noted a variegated form, and I may say here that the normal form is beautifully grown. Planted in boxes in rich soil, and arranged in double rows, with just sufficient room to pass between each two, thin twine is used to take the trails up. This is fixed in the bed with a peg, and taken up to a wire run horizontally above. I have found that good drainage is an essential, and loam, leaf-mold and well rotted manure in about equal parts. Grown in an intermediate temperature, and frequently syringed to keep down red spider, it gives but little trouble.

"At one time I grew Smilax argyrea and it was pretty, but I am afraid it would not be productive enough for general market work, yet it would be worth a trial. The only thing against it is that it is rather prickly. The long, slender trails of various plants are now so much in use, that anything fresh that can be introduced would be welcome. Ficus radicans variegata ought to prove useful. It would be slow to work up a stock of strong plants that would give much return, but once a succession of good plants was established, they would pay to grow for cut foliage. I have used the ordinary green form effectively for tall vases; also Ficus repens. Asparagus Sprengeri is now extensively used for decorations, both in short sprays and long trails, and it may be grown under almost any conditions, being nearly, if not quite hardy. But for long trails some heat should be given and plenty of moisture. I have seen instances where this and also A. plumosus nanus have suffered much from red spider where kept too dry in heat. Of the last named it is not necessary to say much, except that there is a considerable variation among seedlings. That with the flat, frond-like branches, though growing to a great length, is regarded as the true nanus, and it is when propagated by divisions that the dwarf habit is sustained; but even then when potted on, and given liberal treatment, they often ran away. The variety with more irregular plumose branches is pretty, but does not make such a good price in the market. A. tenuissimus may be referred to as being useful, especially as a pot plant. It is remarkable that this is the only asparagus that I have been able to propagate from cuttings. The small side growths will root freely in the close, warm propagating pit."

WOMEN IN HORTICULTURE.

Laura Blanchard Dawson, daughter of Jackson Dawson, of Jamaica Plain, was the lecturer March 5 before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Boston, speaking on "Horticulture as a Profession for Women." Miss Dawson dwelt upon the growing importance of women's work in horticulture. One of the earliest women gardeners in this country was a Miss Lamballe, of South Carolina, in the middle of the seventeenth century. Abigail Adams was a successful gardener. Many women have written books on horticulture. Previous to 1880 there were six women members of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society; now there are many.

There are departments of horticultural work for which women are particularly fitted, said Miss Dawson. In Germany there are five horticultural schools conducted by women. The first of these was started about twenty years ago. The best paid work in German horticulture is teaching gardening in the sanatoriums, where gardening is a part of the occupation of the patients. In England there are two good horticultural schools exclusively for women. About eighty pupils are graduated each year.

One of the most important of horticultural pursuits is the growing of flowers for the retail trade, said Miss Dawson. One to succeed in this line must have executive ability. In the middle west it is the common custom to have women to make up wreaths, wedding decorations, etc., florists insisting that women have better taste and skill in this line than men. In addition to high scientific knowledge, to succeed in growing flowers for the wholesale trade, one must have good health and tremendous nerve force. Women can make a success of raising orchard fruits, especially if they have in connection with it a plant for putting up fruit in cans. Women have also successfully grown fancy vegetables for market. The average woman should not attempt such work as raising plants for landscape gardening. The growing of herbaceous plants, however, affords an opportunity for women.

Miss Dawson then said that no woman should attempt landscape gardening without possessing more than the average strength. To do a week's work in an office on plans, following this with a month in the field, is not easy for any woman. The woman landscape gardener must know architecture, grading, drawing, the technique of planting and have a great sense for color and form.

Miss Dawson said there should be opportunities for women as consulting gardeners. In small towns, where there are many small places, kept by some gardener who looks after several of them, there would be an improvement in the gardens if they were looked after, in the busy season, by some skilled gardener, who may not have the strength to do more strenuous work.

There are opportunities for women to learn horticulture in private horticultural schools and in the state agricultural colleges. A school of horticulture for women exclusively is soon to be opened near Philadelphia, and students at Wellesley and Smith colleges may take horticultural courses.

In conclusion, Miss Dawson warned her hearers that no woman should undertake to enter horticultural work for profit unless she has strength, health, ability and some capital.

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

Always An Effective Advertising Medium

Appears this spring to be giving advertisers even better results than usual.

As witness such letters as these, written almost the same day and representing all parts of the country:

(These are not the same letters that appeared in this space last week. This is a fresh batch.)

The heliotrope advertisement has done too much work already.—A. W. Higgins, Westfield, Mass., April 2, 1910.

Never had stock move faster than from that last adv.—W. Frank & Sons, Portland, Ind., March 31, 1910.

The adv. sold us out.—G. E. Fink, Roselle, N. J., April 2, 1910.

We are sold out of the stock advertised in the Review.—Fifth Avenue Floral Co., Columbus, O., March 31, 1910.

Cut out alternanthera and snapdragons; all gone.—D. R. Herron, Olean, N. Y., April 3, 1910.

Stop the adv.; it sold the stock.—R. K. Stokesberry, Leetonia, O., March 30, 1910.

The adv. did its work well; you will hear from me again as soon as stock is in shape.—F. E. Cremer, Hanover, Pa., April 4, 1910.

Returns have been quite satisfactory.—Laughlin Seed Co., Kenton, O., March 30, 1910.

We are receiving plenty of inquiries for catalogues.—Grootendorst & Sons, Boskoop, Holland, March 19, 1910.

No florist need let surpluses go to waste; nor need he be content with his limited local field. The Review carries your offer to the whole trade.

Greenhouse Heating.

NOBODY seems to be worrying about that coal-miners' strike. In fact, the operators in the bituminous fields appear to welcome the shut-down as preventing overproduction, while the half-dollar drop in the price of anthracite took effect as usual April 1. But it is not safe to let the supply in the bunkers run low. We shall have frosty nights this month if experiences are not a poor guide.

DATA ON HEATING.

the draft will probably be greatly benefited. Sometimes a metal extension of fifteen or twenty feet can be used at small cost and to good advantage when the chimney itself would not permit the extension to this height if brick were used.

RADIATING SURFACE OF PIPE.

It is evident, from the nature of many inquiries received by the REVIEW, that a considerable number of florists have no accurate way of estimating the extent of radiating surface in a specified length or quantity of piping. In other words, they have no way of estimating what amount of piping is necessary to supply the required radiation. When they are informed that a certain size of greenhouse requires a certain number of square feet of radiation, they are still in doubt as to how much piping they must install.

The following table shows the amount of radiating surface, expressed in fractions of a square foot, in each lineal foot of pipe of the sizes commonly used:

Size Pipe.	Sq. Ft.	Size Pipe.	Sq. Ft.
1-inch.....	.344	2 1/4-inch.....	.753
1 1/4-inch.....	.435	3-inch.....	.916
1 1/2-inch.....	.497	3 1/2-inch.....	1.047

By means of this table, it is easy, of course, to compute the radiating surface in any stated quantity of piping. In 125 lineal feet of 2-inch pipe, for instance, there are 125 times .622, or 77.75 (nearly 78) square feet of radiation.

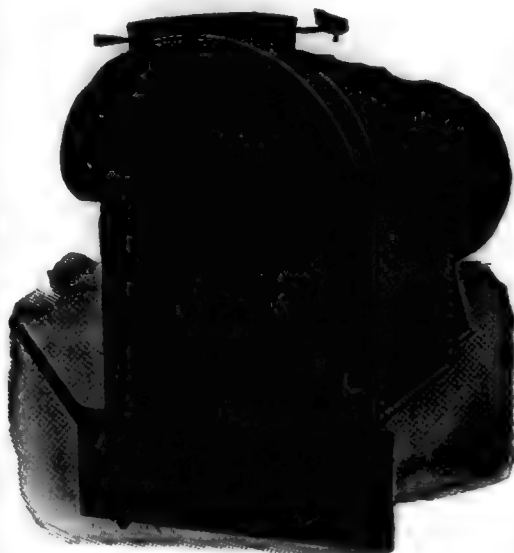

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Satisfactory reports continue to be received from all sides concerning the Easter business, all of them being in like tenor—"Best ever." As a rule, in this city, after each one of the so-called "floral holidays" business is stagnated and nothing doing. Last week, however, proved an exception, as there was an unusually good trade. Steam and Water

The most economical and efficient Boiler for Greenhouse Heating.

Centralize Your Heating Plant

The economy in heating large ranges of glass from a central plant is so great that the first cost is repaid in a few years.

Following are a few plants which we designed and installed:

THOMAS YOUNG, Jr.

Bound Brook, N. J.

150,000 square feet glass heated by steam from a central plant. The exhaust from pumps is passed through a condenser, which heats two 150-foot propagating houses with hot water.

F. R. PIERSON CO.

Scarborough on Hudson, N. Y.

150,000 square feet glass heated by steam from a central plant. The steam is passed through condensers and the water is forced through the houses with circulators.

tions and other social functions are customary after the Lenten season, but it was not these entirely that caused the business here. Cut flowers have been in especially good demand, while funeral work has been brisk.

Various Notes.

A feature of the decorations at one of the Newport churches on Easter Sunday was a Harrisii of unusual size and beauty. It was grown by John B. Urquhart, gardener for R. L. Beeckman, and given by him to one of the classes in the Sunday school, of which his daughter is a member. It was grown from an ordinary bulb in a 6-inch pot and had the unusual number of seventeen buds and blooms. It was exhibited at the recent meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society and awarded the society's certificate of merit, being admitted to be the largest and handsomest plant of its kind ever shown to the society.

Thomas Tullie, 206 Bay View avenue, Edgewood, has been bringing in some fine ferns.

The condition of Henry M. Wilson, of Newport, continues serious, and it is feared that it will be several months before he recovers sufficiently to attend to his nurseries.

J. G. Jensen is preparing for a rearrangement of the gutters on his range of houses, which have been giving him considerable trouble.

Some of the finest mignonette seen in the local market is being brought in by Mrs. P. F. Conley, of the Elmwood Greenhouses.

James B. Canning is doing a big business in bedding plants for spring delivery. He reports that his Easter business exceeded anything since he started in business thirty years ago.

William Appleton is confined to his home by serious illness from a complication of kidney troubles.

Johnston Bros., on Dorrance street, had an excellent lot of azaleas which came into bloom too late for Easter. They placed them on sale last week and no trouble was experienced in moving them to good advantage.

John F. Wood is in the market with the first early arbutus, and last week he sold several large invoices from Cape Cod at good prices.

There has been a general shifting among the attaches of Thomas J. Johnston & Co. Miss Emily Sellev, after more than a dozen years, has been succeeded by Miss Edith Sims as head bookkeeper. Jerome Powers has succeeded Ambrose Morrison, who has resigned to become a jewelry salesman, while Albert Hambly, of Newport, and "Doc." Brookes, of Albany, N. Y., have taken positions.

T. O'Connor had the decorations for the Grosvenor wedding, March 29, and the Lippitt dance, March 28. Daffodils and genistas, relieved by palms and southern smilax, formed the color effect of the latter.

Mrs. G. H. H. Mercer had the decorations for the dinner party at the Agawam hunt, March 29. Sweet peas, lily of the valley and narcissi formed the principal feature.

Nathan D. Pierce, Norwood Greenhouses, Norwood, has just received twenty-six cases of nursery stock, principally boxwood from Europe.

Oscar Schultz, of Newport, recently lost a valuable horse by distemper.

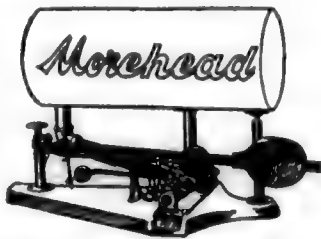

O. H. Williams is giving up his retail store on Mathewson street.

Eugene McCarron is heavily booked for outdoor landscape work this spring.

The first step in the development of the new city nursery at Roger Williams park was taken last week, when 500 young tulip trees arrived. Another shipment, consisting of 500 red oaks and 100 poplars, is expected in a few days.

W. H. M.

AVON, MASS.—Embert F. Oliver has recently found it necessary to enter a complaint at police headquarters against persons who have been breaking glass in his greenhouses.

SALVAGE.

We have some lily of the valley in bloom in pots. Are the bulbs any good after they bloom once, and do cyclamens bloom again after they have bloomed once; also are hyacinths good for anything after blooming once?

W. D. P. & S.

Lily of the valley is of no value after once blooming in pots. Cyclamens it does not pay to carry over a second year. Young plants are more satisfactory. Hyacinths are of no use a second year. Tulips and narcissi could, however, be planted outdoors and will, as a rule, flower well if left there undisturbed.

GRAND RAPIDS.

The weather conditions preceding and surrounding this Easter were abnormally warm; favorable in causing lilies to hit Easter just right on the one hand, yet spoiling quite a few Formosas that were being held in cold quarters and were too far advanced to stand from 60 to 64 degrees outside night temperature, and a July sun and heat in the daytime. It caused carnations to bloom profusely, there being plenty for both retail and shipping. It spoiled the violet crop; the quantity of single in sight a week before was large; one grower who expected to pick 100,000 blooms had to content himself with about 6,000, and others had the same experience proportionately. There was no need to even think of wrapping plants, the day being ideal for delivering, and while a greater volume of trade was handled, it was with less effort and more promptly than usual. Although the writer has lived in Grand Rapids twenty-seven years, never has he seen so warm a March as this year, nor yet so cold a winter, and now it looks as if spring was really with us.

Pot plants were most popular and sold in preference to cut flowers; of course, the lily led, every plant, even to the last scrub, being sold out, and had there been many times more they could have been shipped outside, as the demand was far in excess of the supply. The same may be said of all the first-class potted plants and also cut flowers. Azaleas followed the lilies in popularity, and the good hydrangeas were sold out, although the hydrangeas and crimson ramblers are not as much sought after as formerly. Tulips, valley, Von Sions and hyacinths sold freely and were cleaned up close. The few lilacs and rhododendrons that were out met a ready sale.

The demand for violets was far in excess of the supply, but carnations and roses, except Beauties and red, were in sufficient supply.

It was an unusually satisfactory Easter from all points of view and prices ranged as follows: Beauties, $2 to $6 per dozen; roses, $1.50 to $2; carnations, 75 cents, except in department stores, where they went for 35 cents; violets, 50 cents a bunch; lilies, $3 per dozen; callas, the same; Von Sions, 75 cents; tulips, 50 cents; pot lilies, 20 cents per bud; azaleas, $1.50 to $5 each; ramblers, $1 to $2.50 each; bulb stock in pans, 50 cents to $1 each, and hyacinths, 25 cents each. DETROIT.

The Market.

Business for the last week has not been quite as rushing as it was before Easter. Perhaps this was so arranged by some kind fate to give the tired florists a rest after the Easter rush.

Good stock of every variety was plentiful, but the demand was lacking; consequently many good roses, carnations, etc., were left for the street merchants to dispose of.

The outlook for this week is better, as business was lively on Monday and there was every indication that it would be a good week.

Various Notes.

The presence of Mrs. Sullivan back in the store gives it the appearance of former times. For many months Mrs. Sullivan was too sick to even be on her feet, but with good care and a long rest she now appears spryer than before.

Ben Koeberle, for many years in the employ of John Breitmeyer's Sons at the Mack avenue place, has built several houses and embarked in business for himself.

The automobile business has grown to such an extent in Detroit that it is hard for a florist to get help in the greenhouses, as all good available material is being picked up by the automobile people.

E. A. Feters is looking for a good store man. Mr. Feters has several wedding decorations on for this month.

Table decorations have been the feature in one of Breitmeyer's windows for some time and have attracted much attention.

Miss Ella Reisdorf, of Schroeter's, was laid up for a week after Easter with the grip. H. S.

MASTICA

FOR Greenhouse Glazing

USE IT NOW.

F. O. PIERCE CO.

P. O. Box 294
NEW YORK

Mastica is elastic and tenacious, admits of expansion and contraction. Putty becomes hard and brittle. Broken glass more easily removed without breaking of other glass as occurs with hard putty.

NOW IS THE TIME TO BEGIN!

A COMMERCIAL CURVED EAVE RANGE

Of course, the Curved Eave, when it is built our way, is practical for the commercial house.

Here is one we built over eight years ago, and Mr. Menand, the owner, swears by it.

Glass breakage at the eave? Not any more than in any of our other constructions—which is practically none.

Strong? Certainly it is strong. Why shouldn't it be, as the frame work is all steel and the bars are each one backed by a metal reinforcement from the first purlin down to the sill? It makes a fine looking house, and there are no two ways about it—it's lighter.

Advertising is excellent. The house which doesn't advertise nowadays is headed for "Extinction Street." We have used many forms of publicity and found that all have merit of some sort, but the best advertising of all can be summed up in two words,

"GIVING VALUE"

Give a man 100 cents' worth for every dollar, and DO IT ALL THE TIME, and he will be satisfied, and moreover he won't be quiet about it. He will tell his friends and acquaintances, and that is great advertising which doesn't cost a cent.

"VALUE" advertising is strongly in evidence in all our Extensive Lines. Our Beautiful Katalog tells all about it. Yours for the asking. It saves money for U.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

CHARGE ACCOUNTS.

Where most retail florists are complaining of the necessity for long credits, the difficulty of making collections and of too few cash sales, the Fleischman Floral Co., Chicago, is advertising its desire to open charge accounts. Mr. Rubel, president of the company, and George Wienhoeber, who is the store manager, have demonstrated, not only their competence in the technical or artistic part of the flower business, but also have proven their ability as business getters. To put it conservatively, there is no other of the regular retail stores in Chicago that uses more stock, so their efforts to apply to the flower trade the same methods that are employed in stores in other lines are worth more than momentary attention. One of the reasons frequently advanced for lack of progress in the retail flower business is that florists are by nature artists, and artists, you know, are not supposed to possess more than rudimentary commercial instinct. So anyone who will show the way to apply up-to-date business methods to retail flower selling should be, if he is not, welcomed by the craft as a second Moses.

"All the better class department stores carry charge accounts," said Mr. Rubel, in speaking of his plans, "and they are the means of holding for them a great deal of trade that might otherwise be scattered among a number of stores. This is particularly true of those customers who have charge accounts in only one store, and it is not likely that many flower buyers will have such accounts with more than one, or at most two florists. Charge accounts lead to more free buying; every merchant knows that. Make a buyer produce the cash every time a purchase is made and you will, with the average customer, make neither so many nor so large sales. And in the flower business, where so large a part of the purchases are for gift purposes, charge accounts and a stock of your customers' engraved cards are a special help to the telephone trade.

"We are following the department store principle rather closely on these charge accounts, for the years the department stores have handled them has familiarized the public with the system and made it comparatively easy to operate. The department store draws a sharp, clear line between credit accounts and accommodation accounts. Some of the stores that have the largest numbers of the latter do not accept credit accounts at all. The credit account is the kind the installment-plan furniture house carries. The department store's accommodation account is quite different: it implies the ability and willingness to pay at any time—the time is once a month—and the store simply opens the account for the accommodation of the customer, to save the customer the bother of cash payment with every purchase. The leading stores are exceedingly careful to make plain the fact that monthly payment is expected and make free exchange of credit information. Unless otherwise requested, they send the family bill to the office of the head of the house (where it is followed by a polite form letter if it doesn't get prompt attention), and they have so accustomed a large body of responsible people to the idea of monthly payment that it seems it will be the florist's own fault if he gets several months' business tied up on his books."

Everyone who has thought at all on the subject will agree with Mr. Rubel that cash payment and free spending do not go together.

THE YUESS STORE.

At Newburgh, N. Y., the Yuess Gardens Co. does pretty nearly everything that pertains to the horticultural line. In addition to the greenhouse plant out on Third street, there is the store at 91 Water street, where a wholesale and retail business in seeds is done, and where all classes of plants, nursery stock and garden requisites are handled, as well as cut flowers. But at holiday times everything makes way for the seasonable specialty, whatever it is. At Easter two floors were devoted to the display of blooming plants and the photographs taken that are reproduced in this issue. One of these shows the exterior of the building, the whole of which is occupied with the sales end of the business; another is an interior view, while the third is a specially good picture of the Easter window.

The Easter business increased more than twenty-five per cent as compared with the best previous record, for which satisfactory result no small credit is given to the effectiveness of the newspaper advertising that was done in the early days of the week preceding Easter. A special feature of this advertising was an invitation to the public to visit the two floors flower show and, once getting the crowds in the place, not many left without purchasing.

CHARGE FOR RENTED PLANTS.

Please tell me what are the customary charges for renting plants, such as palms, ferns, etc., in pots for decorative purposes. We have been renting these for the openings of millinery and dry goods stores and for a few weddings. We have been charging twenty per cent and have had some complaints. Our sales yard is located one and one-half miles from the business district. We do our own delivering. K. N.

In this city there are at least fifteen florists who are in a position to supply palms for store, wedding or funeral decorations. Some have only a few dozen plants, while others have enough palms for renting purposes to fill two moving vans. I hardly believe that any two of these florists charge just the same price for renting their palms.

It is wrong to base the rental price of ferns or palms on the size of the pot, as it does not necessarily follow, because two plants are in the same size of pot, that they are worth the same price.

Plants should be rented according to their actual value. If this were done by everyone, then our prices would, no doubt, be more in unison. To most people who rent plants a palm is a palm, no matter if half of the leaves are yellow or partly dead. If one florist says, "I will loan you a dozen palms at $4," and another asks $5, the four-dollar man will get the order in most cases, especially from people who have not rented many palms, even though six of the five-dollar lot are equal to the whole dozen of the others.

Some florists have considerable money invested in pot covers, pedestals, etc., and every plant rented is placed in a neat, clean, well-fitting basket or cover; this, also, must be considered.

In his query, K. N. says that he delivers the plants. He can hardly expect to do otherwise. In fact, he will find it cheaper in the end to deliver and handle his own plants than to trust them to people who know little or nothing of how palms should be handled.

Getting down to the main issue of the question—there are none of us in business for pleasure alone, and if we supply good, healthy palms for decorative purposes, we have to be paid for them or we cannot exist. Therefore, the people who want to pay cheap prices get cheap looking plants and poor service.

Now, as to what is a fair price, I should say that such palms as kentias, being in most common use, should rent for about ten per cent of their retail value, this price to include transportation, arrangement if desired, and a cover on each pot. Ferns should bring more than palms, in proportion to their value, as they are more easily injured. A fern that you would sell, retail, for about $1 should rent for from 25 cents to 35 cents. This may seem a little steep, but after a fern has been rented two or three times it is not fit to sell at half its original value.

The foregoing figures would be for renting the plants for from one to three days. If they are wanted for a longer period, the charge should be half as much again. A palm which would rent for 50 cents for two or three days is easily worth 75 cents for the week, as they often come back with a leaf dried up. Exposure to the dust and dry heat in a store is also injurious.

In these northern states, where we have such long, cold winters, many florists charge more for renting plants during the winter months, as the risk of their being frozen or partly frozen is so great.

From the inquiry, it appears that K. N. wishes to make a profitable business out of renting palms. There are florists who will throw in or loan free of charge a dozen or so of palms for a wedding or funeral, providing they receive the flower order. Perhaps they charge enough more for the flowers to pay for the palms. Still, this is hardly plausible, for the public know pretty nearly what flowers cost. I would not advise this plan, for it hurts one's own business—cheapens it, in fact. When an undertaker sells a casket, does he give the use of his carriages, etc., for nothing? Hardly.

Never overcharge, but have backbone enough to ask a fair price for your stock and you will gain the respect of a good, desirable class of customers. H. S.

NEW SOURCE OF BUSINESS.

This is the season for the reappearance of the automobile parade as a factor in the flower business. Indeed, the season is starting earlier this year than ever before.

Last year's automobile parades were so successful that they promise much good business for the florists this season, and in seasons to come. The illustration on page 8 gives an idea of what good orders such a parade of decorative vehicles means to the florist. This is an auto decorated by A. Wiegand & Sons for a parade in Indianapolis the last day of March. Nothing but natural flowers was used, including 1,000 carnations and 400 American Beauties.

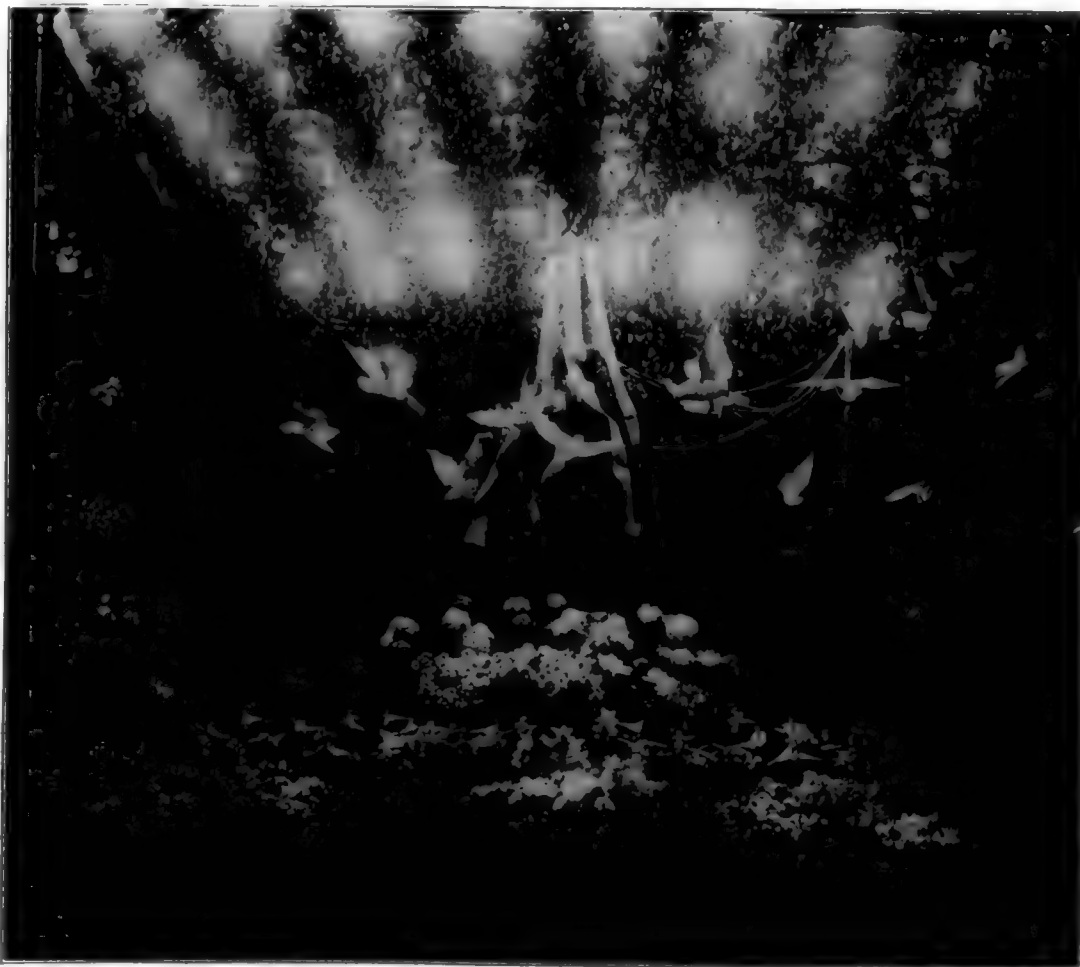

There are those who say that the automobile has done injury to the flower business; that people who ride in autos are too possessed of the speed mania to have thought of flowers, but if we can get them to spending their money for decorations like these it may be the means of the florists breaking even, or a little better.

CARBONE'S FLOWER STORE.

Mention has already been made, on several occasions, of the charming and artistic new flower store opened during the last winter by Philip L. Carbone, at 342 Boylston street, Boston. Mr. Carbone has been in the florists' business some fifteen years. He formerly occupied a smaller store, in a basement at 256 Boylston street, the lease of which ran out and which was only vacated a few days ago, as well as a store at Harvard square, Cambridge. The new store is the most unique of its kind in Boston and perhaps in America. It has a depth of 150 feet and ample height and breadth, with two large show windows.

Much of the charm of the store is due, however, to the fact that it is not on one level, as can be seen by the illustrations on page 7. A broad, handsome staircase about the center of the store leads to an upper floor, where there is a bewildering display of Italian and other ware, suitable for vases, urns, window and piazza boxes and other purposes. Many of these contain aspidistras, Phoenix Roebelenii and other plants, to show how excellently adapted they are as plant receptacles. A balcony on the same level runs the whole length on each side of the other portion of the store, this being also used to display the extensive assortment of imported pottery.

This store is unlike the average flower store. There is no crowding of the windows with masses of plants and cut flowers, but suitable receptacles are used to show off each variety's individuality. The same ideas of good taste prevail throughout the store. Mr. Carbone's aim is to keep on hand plants and flowers that are out of the beaten track, and he is constantly on the lookout for—and ever ready to pay for—anything new or uncommon. In addition to a large and increasing Boston and New England trade, he has many New York customers.

So famous have his Italian and other garden wares become that he finds it necessary to make one or two European trips each year for novelties, and with him are to be found articles not procurable elsewhere. He returned only the week before Easter with a big line of new goods and he starts on a western trip to show his novelties in a few days. Mr. Carbone has already made several western trips and has quite a number of customers there. No trade visitor to Boston should fail to visit his beautiful store at 342 Boylston street. They will be much surprised at the variety of goods displayed and pleased at its exquisite arrangement. W. N. CRAIG.

HERBACEOUS BORDERS.

[An extract from a paper by Arthur E. Thatcher, of Arnold Arboretum, read before the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club.]

In this country it is probable that herbaceous plants have not yet attained the same degree of popularity as in Europe, but with the ever-increasing love for outside gardening, which is so noticeable here, I feel sure that the day is not far distant when their merits will be fully appreciated. In no country in the world can they be grown more successfully, and one has only to notice the luxuriance of the native flora, such as solidagos, asters, cypripediums and lobelias, to see this.

I should like to say a word here about the cultivation, as one frequently meets people who are under the impression that herbaceous plants, when once planted, can be left to take care of themselves for an indefinite period, but this is quite erroneous; and though they may not be so exacting in their requirements as the denizens of glass houses, yet to maintain them in good health and produce the best results the necessary amount of attention must be given.

Preparations for the Border.

In making a herbaceous border, if it is to be permanent, it should first of all be seen that the drainage is good, as few except semi-aquatics will succeed under water-logged conditions. The border should be not less than six feet in width, but much finer effects can be produced if from eight to ten feet can be allowed. A good background is always desirable and two excellent subjects for the purpose are climbing roses or a row of sweet peas, but, of course, what to use must be decided by the situation of the border. Trench the soil in the fall to a depth of two and a half to three feet, incorporating plenty of decayed manure or other enriching material, and leave the surface in a rough condition till spring, so that the climatic effects may sweeten the soil and render it in good condition for working.

The latter part of March or the first two weeks in April is the best time to plant if the frost is out of the ground sufficiently, and it is advisable, if one is not well acquainted with the subjects, to make a plan of the border beforehand, showing where each variety is to be planted. Harmony of color is of great importance and can only be obtained by making a plan or having a good knowledge of the plants, and of equal importance is the arrangement.

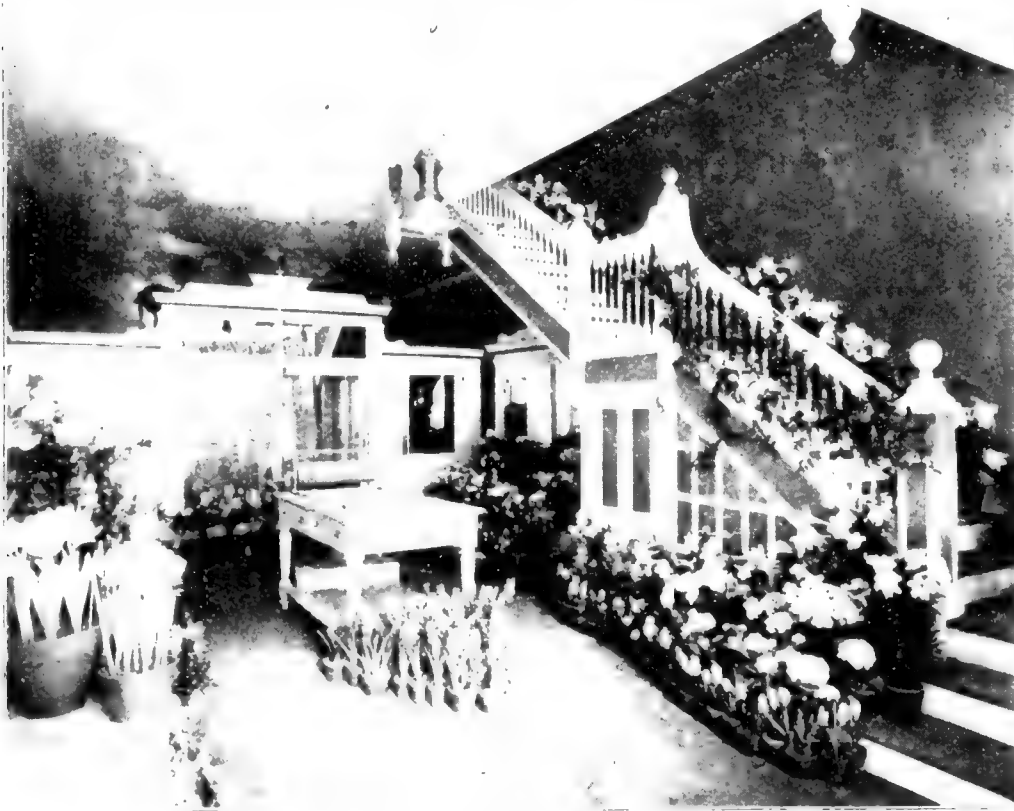

Arrangement of the Plants.

Tall-growing plants must, of course, find positions at the back of the border, but the mistake is not infrequently made of carefully graduating the heights so that the tallest are at the back and the lowest at the front, just as one would arrange geraniums on a greenhouse bench. In this way plants lose their individuality, for much of the charm of the border depends on seeing each separately. The most effective arrangement is obtained by planting some varieties in groups and others as single specimens. By having plants of medium height near the front of the border, much greater depth results and the general effect is altogether more pleasing.

Early flowering varieties should not be too near the edge of the border, unless they retain good foliage till the fall, and others which flower at a later season should be in front of them, so that no bare places are apparent. By a judicious selection a succession of blossoms may be had from spring till late in the fall, but to obtain such a desirable condition it is necessary to be well informed about the large number at our disposal and then they can be ordered from the catalogues, but, failing this, I would suggest going to a good nursery where herbaceous plants are a specialty, and picking out what appear to be the most suitable. It is well to remember that the best plants are always the cheapest in the end and that it pays to procure one's plants and advice from the most reliable and up-to-date nurseries.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Nephrolepis.

After Easter the prices of carnations rule comparatively low and there are usually certain benches which it will pay to pull out to make room for some crop for Memorial day. At this busy season, when work of every kind crowds us, it is difficult to care properly for every crop, as we would wish. Among those which are liable to be forgotten are the nephrolepis. We will want a lot of them in the fall and must not forget to get plants under way now. A side bench is an ideal place for them. Mix some well rotted manure in the old carnation soil, if you decide to use it for the ferns. New compost would be better, but many prefer to utilize the old soil. Young plants from pots and runners can alike be planted here.

Use a hanging curtain of cheesecloth along the path side of the bench to furnish shade and exclude air. Soak well after planting; after that give frequent gentle sprayings. As the plants become established and grow apace, a mulch of old and well-rotted manure will keep the soil cooler and moister. The glass should, of course, be shaded, but not heavily. The old Boston fern, N. exaltata Bostonensis, retains its lead over all the newer introductions and is still as popular as ever as a house plant. N. Whitmani seems to come more true than any of the sports. Amerpohlii is coming to the front, while elegantissima has many friends. Barrowsii and Scottii will soon be included among the "has beens."

Shading.

Shading is a necessary evil. We cannot well do without it during the summer months, if we wish to have presentable plants. Palm houses have received shade before this time, as also have ferns in variety. Naphtha and white lead makes an easily-applied and inexpensive shading. For large houses it pays to cover the glass with one of the sprayers used for Bordeaux mixture or for general spraying purposes. On smaller houses a long-handled brush answers well. About all flowering plants, including carnations, are now benefited by a little shade. Do not, however, put a dense shade on any house, merely because we chance to get a few early hot days. We may get spells of dark, damp weather, when all possible light through the glass will be needed.

Show Pelargoniums.

The earlier show pelargoniums are now flowering. They are easily damaged by an overplus of heat or sunshine. Give the glass over them some shade and do not play the hose among the flowers, as it will speedily cause damping of both foliage and flowers. Show pelargoniums revel in a cool house; 45 degrees at night is high enough, and at 40 degrees they would be more at home than at 60 degrees. Look out for green aphids. Heavy smokings from tobacco stems will cause all expanded flowers to drop to pieces. Mild fumigations once a week will keep the plant lice in check. Feed the plants liberally whenever the pots are well matted with roots. Do not attempt any propagation of show pelargoniums. Wait until early July, or until the blooming season is practically ended, and then take some cuttings; or wait until the plants are dried off, and when pruning back, preparatory to resting them, plenty of suitable wood can be had.

Primulas.

The earliest pricked off seedlings of primulas are now growing nicely in flats and will be all right there two or three weeks longer. Never allow these seedlings to crowd one another unduly before transplanting. A light bench or shelf, with a minimum of 48 to 50 degrees, is all right for primulas. It would be far better to have it cooler than warmer. It is not yet too late to sow seeds of P. Kewensis, stellata and obconica. These late sown seedlings will not develop into specimen sized plants, but will make nice little stock for 5-inch pots, or for making up into pans. Within a month all the primulas will do vastly better in a coldframe, in which a few inches of warm manure was firmly tramped and a bed of fine cinders placed over it. Seed will germinate best in a warm, moist house, but the flats or pans should be moved to cooler quarters soon after the seedlings have germinated.

Memorial Day Crops.

Ten weeks' stocks come in useful at Memorial day. They are not ordinarily good sellers, but on May 30 almost any flower can be disposed of. Those which were recently benched should be along in good season if given a light house, with a minimum temperature of 48 to 50 degrees at night. Have the surface soil scratched occasionally. A certain proportion are sure to come single. It is best to pull these out as soon as they show themselves, as they are of little value for cutting.

Double feverfew is grown a good deal for Memorial day, and when it comes in season it proves invaluable for using in mixed bouquets. It is a somewhat coarse flower and its odor is not specially inviting, but purchasers can get a nice bunch for a quarter and it is generally in big demand. As it is a strong rooting subject, benches in which it is getting well established should have some liquid manure. A top-dressing of cow or sheep manure will also prove beneficial. A temperature similar to that for ten weeks' stocks suits it.

Spiraea Japonica in pots, 'boxes or benches is another useful crop for the coming holiday. Plants should now be nicely started. They will stand hard forcing if necessary and can hardly be overwatered. Do not overlook the new pink variety, Queen Alexandra. The color is just what you will need. Its price is now becoming quite reasonable and it should prove a popular florists' plant. Be sure to fumigate very lightly where spiræas are growing.

In the case of lilies intended for Memorial day, if the buds show early in May they will be all right. It is easy to give them a little extra heat if they seem rather late. L. longiflorum giganteum is the most useful type for late flowering.

Gladioli, with their large, showy spikes of flowers, are always a welcome Memorial day asset. As we are likely to have some pretty hot weather in May, which may send them along faster than could be wished, it is best to cut them as soon as the first flowers open and place them in a cold room. The flowers will open just as well as on the plant and will last better.

Sowing Hardy Annuals.

Some of the hardier annuals that are suitable for cutting should now be sown outdoors. We like to get these in by the middle of April, before the ground becomes too dry and warm, as they then do much better. Among the more useful of these annuals are: Mignonette, lupines, larkspurs in a variety of colors, poppies in variety, of which the Shirley is the most desirable; Leptosyne maritima, Gaillardia picta Lorenziana, Centaurea imperialis and C. cyanus, candytuft, coreopsis in variety, sweet alyssum and scabiosa. The soil for all these seeds should be thoroughly pulverized. Avoid thick sowing, or, if you prefer to sow thickly, thin severely while the seedlings are quite small.

Auto Decorated by A. Wiegand & Sons, Indianapolis.

Dimorphotheca Aurantiaca.

Dimorphotheca aurantiaca, the new and attractive annual from Namaqualand, South Africa, which has appeared in the cut flower markets to a limited extent during the last winter, is well worthy the attention of the trade. The plant has a neat branching habit. The flowers resemble marguerites, but are much more graceful. The rich orange-golden flowers average two and one-half inches in diameter and are borne in the greatest profusion. The dark zone in the flower renders it all the more striking. While the flower has the habit of closing up at night and during cloudy days, we find that after being cut forty-eight hours and kept in a warm room it will remain open. Its keeping qualities are remarkable, flowers lasting four or five days in good condition. As this annual can be bloomed from seed in eight to nine weeks, it is likely to be much more widely grown another season. It succeeds as well in the open border as in a greenhouse bench.

Peonies.

Peonies promise to be exceptionally early this season, being already in active growth. The ground among them should be either forked over or cultivated. As a general rule, we advise a dressing of well rotted manure on the beds or rows late in the fall. To encourage growth still further, a sprinkling of nitrate of soda at the rate of 250 to 300 pounds per acre, applied now, will materially improve the flowers. Any planting omitted for any reason in the fall should be completed without delay. Spring planting of peonies, however, is far less satisfactory than fall setting.

Smilax.

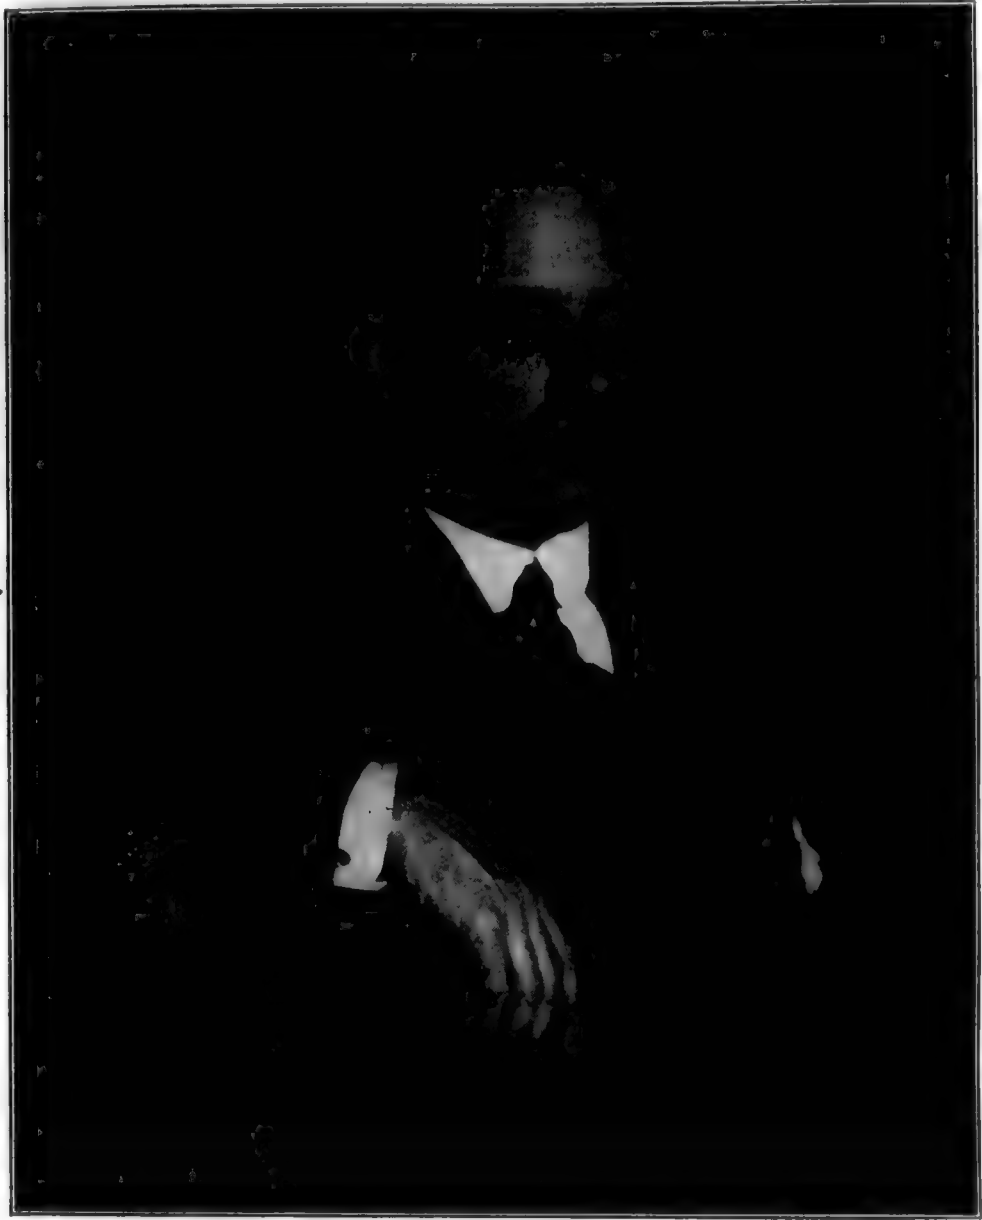

Pot off the little smilax seedlings before they become too crowded. They enjoy a temperature of 60 degrees. As crops in the beds are cut down, give the plants a few weeks' rest before starting them up again. Also apply a mulch of decayed cow manure. Be sure to get new strings in position before the new growths can become entangled. Smilax is less in demand than it used to be, but the average country florist can always find use for a few dozens or hundreds of strings per season.

PENNISETUM RUPELIANUM.

I have some Rupelianum (purple fountain grass) which was sown in March and is three inches high. This is my first experience with it. I want it for borders of canna beds. Does it stool out, or does it grow up singly, and how closely should it be set? I am potting them now singly in 3-inch pots.

W. H. S.

The Pennisetum Rupelianum will stool out and flower the first season from seed. Had you sown the seeds in January, however, they would have done better. The best method of propagation is to lift a number of the old plants and store anywhere over winter, out of the reach of frost, dividing these in January or February, and start in flats of sandy loam and later potting them. These divided portions prove much better for bedding than seedlings. Plant the latter twelve to fifteen inches apart. C. W.

CHARLES H. VICK.

A familiar face at the S. A. F. conventions, as well as at the meetings of the American Seed Trade Association, is that of Charles H. Vick, of Rochester, N. Y. Since boyhood, Mr. Vick has been identified with the seed business, receiving his early training with his father, James Vick, than whom no better known nor more highly honored seedsman ever served the American people. Charles H. Vick became actively identified with the firm of James Vick's Sons after the death of his father, and has been uninterruptedly associated with the business for nearly thirty years. His wide experience in horticultural lines generally made him a most valuable man to the directors of the St. Louis Exposition, and the appointment of superintendent of horticulture was only a slight token of the esteem in which he was held by the managers of that exposition.

At the exhibition held by the Rochester Florists' Association in November, 1909, only one name was mentioned for manager, and that was C. H. Vick; the great success of the exhibition, both financially and educationally, was due in a large measure to his untiring efforts.

At the recent meeting of the executive board of the S. A. F., Mr. Vick was appointed superintendent of the trades display to be held in connection with the convention in August.

Mr. Vick's unfailing courtesy, his optimism, his good nature at all times, make him extremely popular with his associates, and no gathering of local seedsmen or florists is complete unless "C. H." is present. Mr. Vick will be a busy man during convention week, but every visitor will be sure of a "glad hand" and a word of welcome from the trade's superintendent.

CUTTING BACK BEGONIAS.

I have some tall begonias that I have used for decorating. Can I cut them back? If so, when and what is the best treatment to bring them in flower for fall and winter? F. J. V.

Your begonias are presumably of the fibrous rooted section, such as gigantea rosea, nitida alba and President Carnot. Any or all of these can be cut back quite hard and planted outdoors after danger of frost has gone. Lift about the end of September. If your plants are getting of unwieldy proportions, it would be advisable to take cuttings of each kind. These root easily and can be grown along into nice plants in 6-inch pots before winter, either in a cool greenhouse or a cold-frame. C. W.

INDIANA FLORISTS.

The Northern Indiana Florists' Association will hold its regular meeting in Rochester, Ind., April 20, 1910. The Dunn Co. and J. H. Shelton, city florists, will entertain all visiting florists at one o'clock luncheon. This promises to be a very interesting meeting.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Nephrolepis.

After Easter the prices of carnations rule comparatively low and there are usually certain benches which it will pay to pull out to make room for some crop for Memorial day. At this busy season, when work of every kind crowds us, it is difficult to care properly for every crop, as we would wish. Among those which are liable to be forgotten are the nephrolepis. We will want a lot of them in the fall and must not forget to get plants under way now. A side bench is an ideal place for them. Mix some well rotted manure in the old carnation soil, if you decide to use it for the ferns. New compost would be better, but many prefer to utilize the old soil. Young plants from pots and runners can alike be planted here.

Use a hanging curtain of cheesecloth along the path side of the bench to furnish shade and exclude air. Soak well after planting; after that give frequent gentle sprayings. As the plants become established and grow apace, a mulch of old and well-rotted manure will keep the soil cooler and moister. The glass should, of course, be shaded, but not heavily. The old Boston fern, N. exaltata Bostoniensis, retains its lead over all the newer introductions and is still as popular as ever as a house plant. N. Whitmani seems to come more true than any of the sports. Amerpohl is coming to the front, while elegantissima has many friends. Barrowsii and Scottii will soon be included among the "has beens."

Shading.

Shading is a necessary evil. We cannot well do without it during the summer months, if we wish to have presentable plants. Palm houses have received shade before this time, as also have ferns in variety. Naphtha and white lead makes an easily-applied and inexpensive shading. For large houses it pays to cover the glass with one of the sprayers used for Bordeaux mixture or for general spraying purposes. On smaller houses a long-handled brush answers well. About all flowering plants, including carnations, are now benefited by a little shade. Do not, however, put a dense shade on any house, merely because we chance to get a few early hot days. We may get spells of dark, damp weather, when all possible light through the glass will be needed.

Show Pelargoniums.

The earlier show pelargoniums are now flowering. They are easily damaged by an overplus of heat or sunshine. Give the glass over them some shade and do not play the hose among the flowers, as it will speedily cause damping of both foliage and flowers. Show pelargoniums revel in a cool house; 45 degrees at night is high enough, and at 40 degrees they would be more at home than at 60 degrees. Look out for green aphids. Heavy smokings from tobacco stems will cause all expanded flowers to drop to pieces. Mild fumigations once a week will keep the plant lice in check. Feed the plants liberally whenever the pots are well matted with roots. Do not attempt any propagation of show pelargoniums. Wait until early July, or until the blooming season is practically ended, and then take some cuttings; or wait until the plants are dried off, and when pruning back, preparatory to resting them, plenty of suitable wood can be had.

Primulas.

The earliest pricked off seedlings of primulas are now growing nicely in flats and will be all right there two or three weeks longer. Never allow these seedlings to crowd one another unduly before transplanting. A light bench or shelf, with a minimum of 48 to 50 degrees, is all right for primulas. It would be far better to have it cooler than warmer. It is not yet too late to sow seeds of P. Kewensis, stellata and obconica. These late sown seedlings will not develop into specimen sized plants, but will make nice little stock for 5-inch pots, or for making up into pans. Within a month all the primulas will do vastly better in a coldframe, in which a few inches of warm manure was firmly tramped and a bed of fine cinders placed over it. Seed will germinate best in a warm, moist house, but the flats or pans should be moved to cooler quarters soon after the seedlings have germinated.

ORCHIDS

SEASONABLE ORCHID NOTES.

Dendrobium Nobile.

Dendrobium nobile and its many forms, together with many hybrids, are now done blooming. As the young pseudo-bulbs are already making considerable headway, any rebasketing or potting should be done without delay. Many growers err in growing dendrobes in too large pots and baskets. They will make excellent growth in such, but a large body of compost holds moisture too long and thus it frequently happens, when the resting period comes in fall, that there is just sufficient moisture held in the compost to start many of the nodes into growths, instead of flowers. We advise, therefore, the use of small baskets and pots, which may require more frequent waterings when the plants are growing, but which dry out quickly and harden up the bulbs better than larger ones.

For compost we find equal parts of sphagnum moss and fern fiber good. Many plants will probably not require that anything be done to them; others will be benefited by a little surface dressing. A small house, which can be kept warm and moist, suits these dendrobes and they should be syringed overhead every afternoon. Those hanging near the roof should be of the largest size, allowing the small plants to stand on the benches. If a special orchid house is not at command, the warm end of a rose house, where a little shade can be given, or well up to the light in a palm house, will answer well for the growing season.

Cattleya Mossiae.

Cattleya Mossiae is now in season. While the plants are in flower, keep them somewhat drier at the root. Also use some shading on the roof. The sun is now getting powerful and the flowers burn quite easily. It is surprising what a fine variety of types are had from even a single case of newly imported plants. The price is low and the possibility of a white form, like Wagneri, or a Reineckiana, with its white sepals and petals and rich labellum, adds a piquant interest to the blooming of all new stock. This cattleya is so easily grown that any florist who can handle orchids at all can grow and flower it creditably. As a general rule, the first crop of flowers will repay the initial outlay.

Coelogyne Cristata.

Coelogyne cristata, a popular winter flowering orchid, will in some instances require rebasketing or new pans. It is unwise to pull the plants apart until the bulbs have crowded and built themselves up so as to injure the flowering qualities, as they bloom poorly the first season and only moderately well the second season after being pulled in pieces. Use abundant drainage in every case. Fern fiber, not chopped fine but left in good sized lumps, with a few lumps of charcoal and a little moss, makes an ideal compost.

Coelogyne are often found growing in a cattleya house. This is altogether too warm. They do better in a winter minimum of 50 degrees, and in summer a north house or coldframe suits them. They enjoy frequent overhead sprayings in the growing season, and an abundant water supply. Those newly divided should, however, have less moisture at the root than the established plants. The latter, after May, will enjoy a watering with weak liquid manure once in ten days. Large specimens, well matted with roots, will be benefited by stronger doses.

There are several forms of C. cristata. The one most commonly seen, with round bulbs, is hardly worth growing. The flowers are narrow and there are usually only three or four on a raceme. In the Chatsworth variety the flowers are large and broad and four to six flowers are carried on a raceme, and not infrequently seven to nine on vigorous plants. C. cristata Lemoniana, with its lemon yellow center, is a pretty variety, while hololeuca or alba, with pure white flowers, prolongs the season by blooming later than the other forms named, although it is of a somewhat more sprawly habit.

Vanda Caerulea.

Vanda caerulea, the most useful fall blooming orchid and the only really good blue orchid in cultivation, should not be too heavily shaded. Never mind if the plants do not take on the dark green color of those under heavy shade. The paler foliaged ones will flower better. The cool end of the cattleya house, close to the glass, is now a good position for these vandas, and while they flower nicely in baskets, we like to see the roots push down into pots, as they are then easier to control. No orchids with roots hanging over the sides of the pots, pans and baskets will flower as satisfactorily as those with their roots in the compost. The plants with exposed roots will produce poorer spikes and the bulbs or growths will show a more enfeebled growth; yet many people say they like to see a lot of roots hanging out in search of moisture. It is surely time for this old fable to be exploded. These aerial roots on cattleyas, laelias, dendrobes and other varieties are encouraged by a too close, stuffy atmosphere. Air freely on every possible occasion; even at night, when warm, continue to leave a chink on.

Geraniums

DISEASED GERANIUMS.

I am sending you samples of geraniums which are affected with some disease. It made its appearance last spring on a bench of S. A. Nutt. I sprayed them with Bordeaux mixture, or rather dipped them, but of no avail, as it completely used them up and afterward spread to the Buchner, Ricard and Poitevine. The trouble commences in March or April and gets worse as the season advances. It starts in different places and seems to spread. When a number are affected they give off an offensive odor, like potato blight. The roots seem to be affected also and become tender and brown. This disease always starts on S. A. Nutt first. You will note that the samples are in different stages of development. Can you advise any remedy?

F. W. M.

The disease is not at all an uncommon one. We imagine that almost every grower has had it on some occasion in a more or less virulent form. The cause is hard to determine without knowing something of your temperatures and general culture. Not infrequently a somewhat similar blight attacks geraniums outdoors, especially during spells of moist, hot and sunless weather. Such conditions render the growths soft and an easier prey to disease. During dry, sunny weather the same trouble rarely occurs. Under glass we have found that a too moist atmosphere and too much moisture at the roots and on the foliage, added to insufficient ventilation, will create conditions which will cause disease to appear and spread.

It is possible that this may not be the cause of your plants becoming affected, but our experience has been that with full sunlight, abundant ventilation, a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees, frequent spacing of plants to prevent crowding, removal of dead and decaying foliage and allowing plants to dry out well between waterings, the growth becomes so hard and the leaves so tough that they are practically disease resisting. Avoid spraying the plants overhead. There is a great temptation to do it on all warm days. It only tends to soften the foliage if persisted in. Geraniums potted in soil containing a large proportion of decayed cow or horse manure are more susceptible to disease than those potted in loam and fine bone. The latter promotes a firm floriferous growth. The former tends to make soft plants. It would be a good idea for some of our state experimental stations to study this subject, which is an important one for many hundreds of growers.

C. W.

GRAFTED OR OWN-ROOT.

I should be glad if you would tell me what advantage there is in using grafted roses for forcing, instead of own-root stock. Which kind of stock would you recommend in the forcing of Maid, Bride, Killarney, Richmond and My Maryland?
F. W.

Some roses, such as those mentioned by F. W., with the possible exception of My Maryland, do better when grafted on Manetti, because the Manetti is better provided with roots and can consequently take up a larger amount of food than these varieties on their own roots.

This last season there have been complaints of My Maryland showing a tendency to go to rest when grafted stock was used.
RIBES.

SOOT AS A FERTILIZER.

What are the fertilizing elements contained in boiler soot? Is soot of any value for use on rose benches or for other crops?
A. F. A.

Soot is the volatilized, unconsumed portion of coal. Soot from bituminous coal contains the following elements: Charcoal, 371 parts in 1,000; salts of ammonia, 426 parts; salts of potash and soda, 24; oxide of iron, 50; silica, 65; alumina, 31; sulphate of lime, 31; carbonate of magnesia, 2.

It is an excellent manure when used in the liquid form, in the proportion of six quarts of soot to one hogshead of rain water. It must never be applied to plants that are in a state of rest.
RIBES.

LARVAE OF MAY BEETLE

Please advise me whether the large white rose grubs, the larvæ of the May beetle, can be killed in the field economically by the use of some chemical, such as carbon bisulphide or Vaporite, and without injuring the soil for roses after it is put in the greenhouses. I am not fixed so that I can steam the soil.
J. H. B.

The larvæ of the May beetle is frequently abundant in grass land. If the sod was plowed last fall and left rough over winter, many would be killed. A good harrowing now will loosen the soil sufficiently to allow robins and other birds to destroy many of the pests. Either carbon bisulphide or Vaporite would be costly to use on the field, but if your compost can be stacked up, it will not cost much to suffocate all the grubs with the carbon bisulphide. It is better used when the soil is damp, as the fumes are then more penetrating. With a pointed hard-wood or iron stake bore holes eighteen inches apart each way, allowing them to go down within a foot of the bottom of the pile. Pour about a teaspoonful in each hole, immediately covering it up.

Vaporite is an English preparation, which kills cutworms. I have only used it on a small scale, as I am afraid it would be much more costly than the carbon. Using the latter preparation will not injure soil or plants in the slightest. I have used it on the benches containing growing plants and no injury has ever been done by it. No other agency other than steam will so quickly and inexpensively rid compost of these and other pests. Carbon bisulphide costs about 25 cents per pound commercially. Avoid using any matches while applying it, as it is of a highly explosive nature.
C. W.

AN ENGLISH VIEW.

From the Horticultural Trade Journal we get the following view of American roses:

"American growers do not seem to be able to extol the virtues of the Killarney rose sufficiently. The mere term of bread and butter variety is quite inadequate, even the beloved American Beauty being unable to dim the luster of Killarney. This variety has been the chief selling sort this winter, in the big cut flower markets, where we hear it said, 'what a wonderful rose this is,' another remarking that 'no other variety will break and flower so readily.' On this side, however, we do not find it figuring as the chief market sort. Why is it? Can it be that in the United States Killarney is a different flower to what we get under glass? I have never had the opportunity of growing this variety inside, but the white sport plainly shows its value for such work. The wood bristles with eyes, all of which break into growth at the least incentive, while grafts seem to rush away immediately. Speaking of white roses, has any grower ever tested Frances E. Willard? It was introduced several years ago in America, and at the time it was attracting some attention owing to its purity and vigor. I have searched many lists, but can find no British firm quoting it. I believe it is a hybrid tea.

"Among the newest American roses, Lady Duncan and Daybreak call for attention. Both are hybrid Wichuraianas, and should prove worthy of being added to the rapidly extending list. The first named resulted from R. Wichuraiana x R. rugosa, and should prove quite an ironclad in hardiness. It has the habit of Wichuraiana, and the foliage, spines and flowers of rugosa, the color being bright pink, the numerous yellow stamens making a strong contrast. It gained a silver medal several years ago, to be precise in 1900. Daybreak came out of Wichuraiana x Dawson. The flowers are single, deep yellowish pink, cup shaped and carrying deep orange stamens. Both are said to be splendid forcers. Jackson Dawson is the raiser.

"Another climber of possible value is Dr. Van Fleet, which is being sent out by Peter Henderson & Co. It resulted by crossing Souv. du Pres. Carnot with Wichuraiana. The flowers are of enormous size, four inches and over, the color being pink, deepening in the center. In form they resemble a loosely built tea. The variety is a tremendous grower, and it gained a silver medal in 1908, as the finest novelty."

WEAK GROWTH OF YOUNG STOCK

We are mailing you a carnation cutting and should like to be informed as to its disease and the treatment needed. Will you kindly advise us?
W. & K. P.

If the specimen forwarded is a fair sample of your young carnation plants, I would advise you to discard them and to buy fresh stock from someone who has thrifty young plants. It is now too late in the season to do as much doctoring up as plants like these would need to get them into fair condition. They have the appearance of having been too crowded and at the same time kept too wet. Their weakly appearance and the loss of the foliage may be attributed to these two causes. Leaf-spot, rust and fairy ring may also be expected if such conditions are kept up long enough.

If any of the cuttings seem worth saving, I would pot them into 2-inch pots if you have them in flats. First clean them off well. If they are in pots, I would take a little soil off the top and replace this with good, new soil. If the plants are quite potbound, I would advise a small shift, say from 2-inch to 2½-inch pots. Spread them out a little, if necessary, to prevent crowding, but in that case the pots should be plunged to the rim in sand, to prevent drying out. Dust them with Grape Dust and give plenty of fresh air. Water carefully and keep their surroundings clean and sweet. There is nothing that equals fresh, pure air to make plant growth clean and strong.

TO PREVENT SPLITTING.

Noticing that there are a good many references in the REVIEW to the splitting of carnation calyxes, I thought that an item or two from my experience might be useful. I find that if I run my houses at a temperature of 42 to 44 degrees for the first two nights after disbudding, I have extremely few split blooms—scarcely five per cent. I also take this precaution: For one week after I have fed my carnations, whether with lime, mulch, bone or sheep manure, I run my houses at 42 to 44 degrees. This keeps the plants from running too quickly to bud.

FERTILIZER MIXTURES.

In a bulletin of the U. S. Department of Agriculture published in 1905 the danger of indiscriminate mixing of fertilizing materials was briefly explained, and a diagram was given (reproduced in the REVIEW of July 20, 1905) which indicated what combinations may be safely made of some of the more common fertilizing materials. The present illustration is a somewhat more elaborate diagram of the same kind, including, in addition to the materials shown in the simpler diagram, bone meal and the new nitrogenous fertilizers, lime nitrogen (calcium cyanamid) and Norwegian nitrate (basic calcium nitrate), prepared from the nitrogen of the air. In this diagram the dark lines unite materials which should never be mixed, the double lines those which should be applied immediately after mixing, and the single lines those which may be mixed at any time.

SOILS AND FERTILIZERS.

The National Council of Horticulture says there is no soil so poor that it cannot be made to grow flowers, vegetables, shrubs and trees well, if properly treated. Successful cultivation demands two things—a good mechanical condition of the soil, and richness. The first is really as important as the second, or even and allow the rain to wash it in gradually. If the soil has been cultivated before and has plenty of decayed vegetable matter in it, excellent results may be had with artificial fertilizers.

Bone is good, but it is not a complete fertilizer. Wood ashes should be used with caution, as the large amount of lime they contain may do mischief. The best is what is known as a complete fertilizer. Ask when you buy it how to use it and never use more than the directions permit. A light sprinkling over the soil after spading or plowing, and then raked in, is best. Chemical fertilizers are strong and will kill or injure plants if used to excess.

A USE FOR SWEET PEAS.

The immense popularity of the sweet pea as a vase and bouquet flower is a thing apart from its fame as an exhibitor's blossom. There is another manner in which it is entitled to be highly valued, however, and that is as a garden ornament.

Instead of viewing an annual that requires to climb as an untidy grower, let us see what can be done to show it off to the best advantage, and yet make it add to the effect of the pleasure grounds. To begin with, banish the usual pea stick; it is the too wide practice of training sweet peas upon this that has caused it to be relegated to the kitchen garden, or placed in rows and groups in reserve beds. Single plants tied up to a slender bamboo cane each make excellent pillars, and enable the real grace and beauty of stem, foliage and bloom to be fully appreciated. It should be remembered that Mr. Brotherston, a noted Scottish grower, gave similar advice some years ago. He counseled: "Grow the plants singly, allowing each plenty of room. If you are able to get plenty of good loam, allow each plant one and a half barrowfuls, and of leaf-soil half a barrowful, incorporating these with the top spit of the garden soil."

In no other way can the sweet pea against a fence, or not far from the wall or trellis covered by roses, or may occupy the middle row of borders and long-shaped beds in the open.—Gardeners' Magazine.

SOLANUM JASMINOIDES.

The accompanying illustration shows a plant of Solanum jasminoides which was planted against a chicken coop five years ago in Soquel, Cal., and which now almost covers the building. It is locally known as the potato vine and is in bloom practically the year through, though the heaviest bloom is seen in the spring and summer months. It seems to be immune from insect pests and is a most satisfactory vine under such conditions as prevail on the southern Pacific coast.

RHINEBECK'S VIOLET OUTPUT.

How many violets does Rhinebeck produce in a season? It is a question often asked.

The estimates vary greatly, but one of the means of guessing at the figure is supplied by the Violet Growers' Association, which reports having used approximately 100,000 corrugated pasteboard boxes during the season now closing, the boxes having been supplied by the Fort Wayne Corrugated Paper Co. The average box contains 2,500 violets, rather more than less. Therefore, the boxes of the Rhinebeck Violet Growers' Association have carried away at least 25,000,000 violets this season. The secretary of the association states that the association handles about ninety-five per cent of all the boxes used in the vicinity. On this basis the output of the district would be not less than 26,000,000 or 27,000,000 flowers for the season.

NAME OF FLOWER.

I am sending you a bud of some kind of lily. If you place it in water I think it will bloom out full. A friend of mine brought the bulbs from near the Andes mountains, in South America. He was in search of orchids. Can you name the variety for me?

C. P. M.

The flower belongs to the amaryllidaceæ family, but as it arrived in a withered condition its name could not be determined. It is evidently a handsome and desirable bulbous plant.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market is convalescent. Saturday it sat up and took notice. Monday there were symptoms of renewed health. The worst is over, but it was a close call. If a halt had not come to the depressing conditions, we would now be writing its obituary. The weather has been much cooler. One night there was even a touch of frost. The week opens encouragingly. The normal spring temperature continues. The change is a most welcome one to the seedsmen and nurserymen, who are simply swamped with orders. A week of summer heat in March and early April was too much to bear.

There is little change of prices in the cut flower market. A few selected Beauties touch 20 cents, and in quantity the same quality later in the day will go for 10 cents. So it is with all varieties, and even yet the boxes go at far below their value. The street has about everything to offer, except orchids. Just now the lilac has the center of the stage. The more important. Given a soil in good mechanical condition, it is simply necessary to work in the proper amount of well decayed manure at planting time.

Never dig fresh manure into the soil just before planting. If you have none which is well rotted, and cannot get any, then spread the fresh manure thinly on top of the ground, between the plants, plant be fully shown as an individual instead of a member of a crowd. Those cultivators who wish to discover whether certain varieties that seem much alike really possess points of difference, cannot do better than adopt this method. Rows of bamboo-trained sweet peas, the pillars wide apart, make a beautiful background to a border of low-growing annuals south has about finished its daffodil demonstration and is sending enormous quantities of the purple variety of lilac, the street men absorbing most of it. Next come arbutus and outdoor valley and tulips. It takes a wonderful market to absorb it all. There is no city on earth that could use the enormous arrivals profitably except New York. Unlike the old days when shipments were made to all parts of the country, now the shipping trade is almost nil and the big city must find or make the market within its own environs to absorb it all.

Carnations are perfect in quality now, but it is hard to realize over $10 per thousand for them, except the novelties. Violets do not pay the cost of picking them; the few that arrive are not wanted. The street men were selling them at 10 cents per bunch Saturday. Lilies have improved a little, but the best of them could be had at $4 per hundred. Orchids hold at the present quotations, but gardenias were as low as $5 per hundred. Smilax is good property to have, some of it selling up to $2.50 per dozen. There is an abundance of snapdragons and forsythias, and the retail windows are filled with blooming plants.

Since Easter there have been many weddings and dinners. A great many floral offerings have been sent to the boats, as farewells to the great opera stars who are leaving for Europe, and the theaters are still in full blast, with their nightly offerings of flowers at the production of new plays. The market will now proceed "on the even tenor of its way" until Decoration day.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the club April 11 had an attendance of seventy-five, with President Miller in the chair.

W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., secretary of the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association, gave an account of the society's negotiations with the city for market space. He reported the space to be placed at the trade's disposal to be well adapted for the purpose, with a measurement of 170x275 and forty to sixty feet in height, with a similar space outside the enclosure for wagons. The space is cemented. Electric lights, heat and glass sides are also promised by the city. A public and permanent market was insisted upon by the florists, the city to retain control of same, to build stands to suit tenants. Spaces 8x20 and 15x15 are not to cost over $2.50 a week, with a lesser rate promised at the start of the enterprise. Rules are to be agreed upon between the city and the various florists' associations. Speedy attention is urged, because the park commissioner has applied for the place as a public playground. It was suggested that petitions be completed, to be presented to the city controller, with the names of all interested. President Miller considered the city's proposition a good one, better than any other ever made or ever likely to be made. John Birnie said it was an ideal place for the purpose. Mr. Nugent said he believes everything will be done by the civic authorities to make the great cut flower and plant market one of the finest in the world, the same privileges being accorded as all the other markets enjoy. William J. Elliott feared the burden of care would be excessive during the dull, hot months, but John Birnie seemed confident the market, once established, would be maintained every day in the year and at a reasonable cost.

Harry Turner thought the proposition

a practical one and hoped the Florists' Club would endorse it. James Dean considered the opportunity a golden one and if the offer were not accepted it would be a great mistake, predicting many changes in the next five years. F. R. Pierson spoke in behalf of the project and declared present methods will be revolutionized. W. H. Siebrecht added that the city's object is to make a permanent market, to build offices and arrange for every department of the horticultural business, doing all that can reasonably be asked, and covering an entire city block with its conveniences. P. O'Mara, in speaking of his efforts on this line in the past, said that the project had been under consideration for years and referred to the many public markets in European and American cities, suggesting that all the interested parties should get together and work in harmony.

A joint meeting of all the trade associations was suggested, and later in the evening this was decided upon, the club's rooms having been secured for that purpose Monday evening, April 18, at 8 o'clock. Mr. Siebrecht said the city was coming to the florists. The controller wanted practical evidence of their intent and then the men in authority would go ahead without delay.

On C. H. Totty's motion the Florists' Club endorsed the proposition and asked its members who so desire to collaborate with the other societies in behalf of its speedy consummation.

H. A. Bunyard reported for the outing committee, July 1 having been selected for the event, but owing to inability of many to attend on that date the committee was authorized to select another day and report at an early date.

Mr. McTaggart and C. A. Krick were elected to membership and each gentleman addressed the club and pledged hearty support. Messrs. Merritt, Melstrom and Weir were proposed.

Walter Sheridan reported for the dinner committee, showing an attendance of 261, forty-eight guests, and a deficit of only $21.75, expressing also thanks for the donations of flowers and the fine work of the decorators. F. R. Pierson offered his check in payment of the debit balance, but the club, while expressing its appreciation of the offer, voted to pay the amount from the club's treasury. The committee was awarded the thanks of the club and many expressions of satisfaction with the evening's enjoyment were given, R. E. Berry waxing especially eloquent.

John Young expressed his thanks for the club's telegram, received by him during the meeting of the executive committee at Rochester.

Hitchings & Co. offered a silver cup of $25 value to be awarded each year, the class for exhibits being left with the exhibition committee. The thanks of the club were tendered the donors.

A letter from Prof. L. B. Judson, of Cornell University, Ithaca, was read, urging the club's endorsement of the bill now before the legislature, granting $50,000 for the erection of greenhouses. F. R. Pierson spoke in its behalf and the necessity for the appropriation, and the motion to endorse was unanimously carried.

F. H. Traendly spoke for the Rochester convention and moved the appointment of a transportation committee. F. H. Traendly, John Young and H. A. Bunyard were appointed. F. R. Pierson gave a glowing account of the meeting of the executive committee of the S. A. F. at Rochester and predicted the most admirable and successful convention ever held. He said Rochester is an ideal city in every respect. He also referred to the executive committee's intent to ask the Department of Justice to investigate the high and unreasonable price of glass and the illegal organization that has accomplished the iniquity.

A. C. Zvolanek, the sweet pea expert, addressed the club interestingly on his recent visit to California and his meeting with Messrs. Fischer, Lonsdale and other eastern celebrities there.

A committee was appointed, J. H. Pepper, R. E. Berry and J. Austin Shaw, to draw up and send resolutions of sympathy to Judge Vesey, of Fort Wayne, because of his great bereavement. Touching tributes were paid to the memory of his estimable wife, so suddenly called away, whom everybody loved and honored.

Exhibits were many and of great merit. Louis Dupuy, of Whitestone, exhibited hydrangeas, Hortensia La Lorraine, a light pink, and Avalanche, a snow white of rare excellence, for which a certificate of merit was granted by the committee. Mr. Dupuy, Jr., addressed the club. Kessler Bros. exhibited specimens of their new fern and one of Scottii in comparison. The difference is marked. Mr. Kessler, in speaking to the meeting, gave the credit for its discovery and growth to Emil Savoy, of Secaucus, from whom the entire stock was purchased by his firm. An award of merit was given E. Fardell, gardener for Mrs. H. P. Booth, of Great Neck, L. I., who exhibited vases of stocks, Empress Elizabeth and Queen Alexandra, for which he received a vote of thanks. He also exhibited a vase of ranunculus, which received similar appreciation. Mr. Fardell gave a valuable address on their propagation, answering many queries.

Various Notes.

Miss Susan Scott Lustgarten, of Elmhurst, daughter of Charles Lustgarten, was burned to death Friday night, April 8, at an entertainment at the Adelphi College, Brooklyn. The young lady was only 19 years old. She possessed great musical talent and artistic skill and was the only child of the bereaved parents, who have universal sympathy in their great affliction. The funeral, on Sunday, was largely attended and the floral remembrances were of great beauty.

The sympathy of their many friends is also extended to George M. Stumpp and to Mr. Winnefeld, of Lehnig & Winnefeld, of Hackensack, N. J., in the loss of their wives. Both were greatly respected and beloved by a wide circle of relatives and friends.

Secretary Siebrecht of the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association, is enthusiastic as to the market proposition made by the city, favoring concentration at the New York side of the new bridge at First avenue and Fifty-ninth street. The association, at a special meeting last week, endorsed the plan unanimously. The managers of the early market, Mr. Siebrecht says, will undoubtedly accept, and so, at no distant date, the dream of John Birnie and many other enthusiastic plantsmen in favor of an American Covent Garden will be fulfilled. The location is an ideal one and the room and accommodation and general facilities cannot be excelled.

Rumors of many moves on West Twenty-eighth street continue. Some enterprising firms are securing leases on property, with a view to subletting or selling leases at a profit. Some have obtained favorable terms for remaining between Sixth avenue and Broadway. Those who are obliged to go to make room for skyscrapers are hustling for new quarters. Some of the present second-story men will be on the ground floor.

Mr. Lutz, formerly in the growing business near Far Rockaway, has established a retail business at 546 Hudson street, under the title of the Hudson Florist.

Early in June the champion Astoria bowler, John Miesem, and his wife, will leave for a pleasure trip to Europe, but with the understanding that he will return and lead his club to victory August 17 at Rochester.

Tuesday, April 12, was ladies' night at Astoria. Bowling continues there as enthusiastically as at the first of the season, and there are several high rollers in the membership. The prize last week was given by Mr. Bleckwin. At the ladies' tournament on Tuesday everyone received a handsome prize.

Thursday and Friday, April 14 and 15, John H. Taylor, the veteran rose grower of Bayside, will sell his entire stock of household furniture, prior to a European trip.

Chandler Taylor, the entomologist, representing the Kentucky Tobacco Product Co., of Louisville, Ky., was in the city several days last week.

John Mangam, for ten years in the service of Frank Millang, the wholesale florist, has undertaken the retail business on his own account at 413 Gates avenue, Brooklyn, an excellent locality and not far from the greenhouses of Robert G. Wilson.

W. A. Blaedel & Son is now the title of the firm at 402 West Twenty-third street, Mr. Blaedel, Jr., having advanced to partnership honors April 1.

Carl Jurgens, Jr., of Newport, has acquired space with Joseph A. Millang, of the New York Cut Flower Co., in the Coogan building, and will handle bulbous stock, valley and Beauties, in all of which he has a national reputation.

Alexander Smith, of Woodside, lately welcomed a visit of the stork—another sign of early spring.

The new seed firm started under the name of Buds, at 76 Barclay street, has as its manager Carl R. Gloeckner, for many years in the employ of J. M. Thorburn & Co.

J. K. Allen made an official trip into Massachusetts last week with a carload of civic boomers, in behalf of many improvements contemplated in and around Kearney, N. J., where he resides and stands "ace high" in municipal progress.

The auctions are crowded. The suburban women have heard of the bargains. Prices have not been so satisfactory in years. Many varieties of hardy roses are snapped up at $20 per hundred. The men look like landed proprietors and most of the faces are unfamiliar. The rooms are too small for the growing patronage. The streets also have merchants at every corner downtown, offering trees, plants and bulbs for sale. The seedsmen are handling great quantities of fruit trees. Prices are away up, but only where they belong.

Emil Tschupp, of the firm of John Tschupp & Co., West Hoboken, N. J., died Friday, April 8, and was buried Tuesday, April 12. Ford Bros. handle the firm's shipments.

After a three months' siege of rheumatism, Mr. Watkins, of W. E. Marshall & Co., is again at his desk. The firm is having a busy season.

E. A. Slaterry, an old New York boy, now with W. J. Palmer & Son, of Buffalo, is visiting friends here.

One of the fortunate ones on Twenty-eighth street is J. J. Fellouris, whose lease of No. 52 holds good, while so many find it necessary to change their quarters. The best piece of luck, however, was the sale of the lease by one of the wholesale firms for an even $10,000, and with the luck was coupled business shrewdness, expert management and nerve.

A. L. Miller, of Jamaica avenue, Brooklyn, sold 60,000 of his own strain of pansies and says he could have sold 150,000 if he had grown them.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

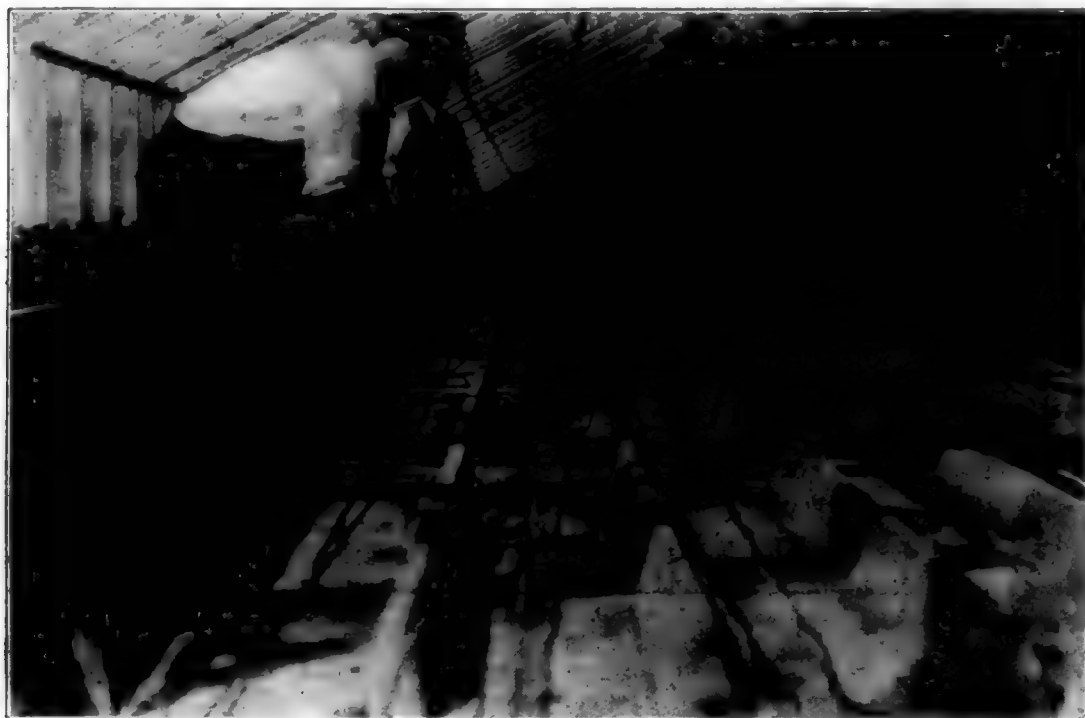

S. B. Wertheimer returned last week from his annual trip to the European fountains of inspiration for ribbon men.

ONE-PIECE CONCRETE BENCH.

Samuel Lum has one of the good sized places at Chatham, N. J., a town scarcely less famous for rose growing than is Madison itself. The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph taken in Mr. Lum's establishment, where the entire range is being equipped with the so-called concrete-steel benches, constructed under the Wilson-Hoyt system. The illustration shows the bench builders in the act of oiling the steel forms preparatory to pouring the concrete.

In this style of construction a steel form is used as a mold and the bench is reinforced with wires running through the concrete. The raised parts of the mold, shown in the illustration, give drainage. Quite a number of the places in Madison and Chatham have been trying out these benches and as a result are installing more of them this season. The day is undoubtedly coming when wood benches will be completely displaced by permanent construction.

CONCORD JUNCTION, MASS. — Leonard Cousins, Jr., has his pansies in fine shape. Owing to the mild spring weather so early in the season, pansies are as far advanced as they would be in May in ordinary years. They are covered with blossoms and his fine, large field of 250,000 is a sight worth going far to see. Shipments are being made daily to florists all over the country.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. W. J. Vesey.

The entire membership of the florists' profession will be startled and shocked by the unexpected news of the death of Mrs. W. J. Vesey, a former president of the Ladies' S. A. F. and one of the best known and most highly esteemed women connected with the trade. She was the wife of Judge William J. Vesey and one of the most prominent women in Fort Wayne, Ind., her home city. She was stricken by an attack of heart disease while riding on a Fort Wayne street car, and died suddenly shortly before 8 o'clock Friday evening, April 8, a moment after she had been taken from the car and assisted into a drug store at Broadway and Taylor street.

Dr. C. H. English, the family physician, stated that death had been due to arterio-sclerosis, combined with fatty degeneration of the heart, from which Mrs. Vesey had been suffering for some time, and that in all probability the fact that Mrs. Vesey had hastened in order to catch the car may have contributed to the crisis at this time. Close friends of Mrs. Vesey were aware that she had been subject to a heart weakness, but they were wholly unprepared for the distressing shock of news of her sudden death.

During the afternoon Mrs. Vesey had been a guest at a social affair, and in company with her youngest daughter, Miss Catherine, she was on her way downtown to attend the performance of "The Music Master" when she was stricken. Mrs. Vesey and her daughter boarded the northbound Broadway car at Maple avenue, and a moment after she was seated in the car Mrs. Vesey became ill and stepped out upon the rear platform to secure air.

When the car neared Taylor street the car was stopped, and a number of the passengers assisted Mrs. Vesey into the drug store. She was seated upon a chair in the front portion of the store, and a moment later collapsed as if in a faint. She was then carried to the rear of the store and attempts were made to revive her, but a physician, who had been hurriedly summoned from his office next door, found that death had intervened.

Attorney A. J. Vesey, a brother-in-law, was called from the Masonic Temple in the belief that Judge Vesey had not yet arrived in the city from a trip to Warsaw. The husband was reached by telephone at his office a little later and told that his wife was very ill. He hastened to the drug store, his brother meeting him on the way there and breaking the news to him that his wife had passed away. The coroner had been notified, and an ambulance at once removed the remains to the Vesey home, at 2602 Thompson avenue. David Vesey, a son, who is attending Michigan University, at Ann Arbor, reached the city the same evening, bringing a number of college friends to spend the vacation with him, and news of his mother's death was communicated to him as he alighted from the train.

Mrs. Vesey's age was 47 years. She was born in Decatur, Ind., a daughter of the late Judge David Studebaker, was educated at Decatur and in the Fort Wayne M. E. College, and was united in marriage to Judge Vesey July 25, 1882. Six children were born to this union, all of them, with the husband and father, surviving. The children are Margaret, Sallie, Dick, William J., David S. and Catherine Vesey. Miss Sallie is a student at DePauw and Dick at Ann Arbor, but the latter had gone to Greencastle to spend the vacation holidays. Miss Margaret is one of the vice-presidents of the Ladies' S. A. F. for the present year.

Mrs. Vesey was widely known as a florist and an authority on horticulture, and her love of flowers had led her to engage with her husband in business as a florist, the firm being W. J. & M. S. Vesey. In the Vesey greenhouses, in Fort Wayne, have in the last few years been developed some of the notable advances in the floriculture of America, and they have won recognition at all the larger horticultural exhibits of the country.

Socially, Mrs. Vesey was one of the most widely known and prominent women of her city. She was active in religious work, and was a member of Wayne Street Methodist Episcopal Church and president of its Ladies' Aid Society. In addition, Mrs. Vesey had been for several years the president of the Young Women's Christian Association. Her culture, her enthusiasm and her kindly charm made her universally admired and esteemed in a wide circle of acquaintances.

The following communication from A. F. J. Baur, just received by the REVIEW, expresses well the general feeling of bereavement caused by Mrs. Vesey's death:

"It is with profound sorrow that I have heard of the untimely death of Mrs. W. J. Vesey. A woman in the prime of life, held in the highest esteem by a wide circle of acquaintances in the trade, her death will be a personal loss to a multitude of friends.

"Perhaps no woman in the trade had a wider personal acquaintance than Mrs. Vesey, and her kindly smile and cheery word will be missed at our conventions and flower shows, where we enjoyed meeting her.

"Those whom we can spare the least we are required to give up first.

"It is those of Mrs. Vesey's type who can sincerely repeat that beautiful passage of David's twenty-third psalm, 'Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, etc.'"

Peter Warren.

The death of Peter Warren last week marked the passing of an old-timer from the gardeners' ranks at Newport, R. I., where he had resided for nearly fifty years. He was a gardener of more than ordinary ability and was employed for many years on the Jones estate, and was a quiet, honest soul, who did his work well, attended to his own business and tried to do the things of this world as they should be done.

Peter Warren was born in Virginia eighty-two years ago, a slave, and as a boy was employed about the gardens of his master's home. He earned his liberty before the Civil war and came north, settling in Newport, where he soon found employment about the estates as a gardener, and, until his death, he continued at that work. He was the only colored man in the district where he lived, but despite his dark skin all his neighbors considered him a "white man," and that is what he was in the way the expression is generally used. His funeral occurred from his home, 113 Houston avenue, April 7, and was largely attended, gardeners of Newport being present in good numbers to pay their silent tribute to the aged man.

Alfred A. Williams.

Alfred A. Williams, one of the oldest florists and greenhouse vegetable gardeners of Cranston, R. I., died at his home on Hartford Pike, April 1. Of his sons, three are identified with the florists' and gardeners' business. Mr. Williams had been in failing health for more than a year, death being due to hardening of the arteries. He was a son of Larned Williams, a lineal descendant of Roger Williams, the founder of Rhode Island, and was born in Seekonk, Mass., seventy-six years ago. He was educated in the public schools of that district, completing his education at the Lapham Institute at Scituate.

About fifty years ago Mr. Williams took up his residence in the farmhouse where he died and took a great interest in everything pertaining to horticulture and agriculture. He always held the controlling interest in the range of greenhouses on his place, run successively by his sons, Alfred H., Larned, and for the last eight years by Olney H. and the latter's sons. This range consists of about 200,000 square feet of glass, and carnations, roses, violets, chrysanthemums, ferns, bedding stock, vegetable plants, azaleas and bulbous stock were grown in great quantities.

Mr. Williams, in his younger days, was prominent in the political affairs of the town and was for several years a member of the Johnston town council and of the Rhode Island House of Representatives.

Mrs. Thomas Thompson.

Mrs. Thomas Thompson, wife of the well-known florist of Santa Cruz, Cal., died March 31, aged 63 years. Mrs. Thompson was a generous, kindly lady, with large sympathies, and her death is mourned by a wide circle of friends. She leaves two sons and two daughters, besides her husband, all of whom have universal sympathy in their affliction.

Mr. Lutz, formerly in the growing business near Far Rockaway, has established a retail business at 546 Hudson street, under the title of the Hudson Florist.

Early in June the champion Astoria bowler, John Miesem, and his wife, will leave for a pleasure trip to Europe, but with the understanding that he will return and lead his club to victory August 17 at Rochester.

Tuesday, April 12, was ladies' night at Astoria. Bowling continues there as enthusiastically as at the first of the season, and there are several high rollers in the membership. The prize last week was given by Mr. Bleckwin. At the ladies' tournament on Tuesday everyone received a handsome prize.

Thursday and Friday, April 14 and 15, John H. Taylor, the veteran rose grower of Bayside, will sell his entire stock of household furniture, prior to a European trip.

Chandler Taylor, the entomologist, representing the Kentucky Tobacco Product Co., of Louisville, Ky., was in the city several days last week.

John Mangam, for ten years in the service of Frank Millang, the wholesale florist, has undertaken the retail business on his own account at 413 Gates avenue, Brooklyn, an excellent locality and not far from the greenhouses of Robert G. Wilson.

W. A. Blaedel & Son is now the title of the firm at 402 West Twenty-third street, Mr. Blaedel, Jr., having advanced to partnership honors April 1.

Carl Jurgens, Jr., of Newport, has acquired space with Joseph A. Millang, of the New York Cut Flower Co., in the Coogan building, and will handle bulbous stock, valley and Beauties, in all of which he has a national reputation.

Alexander Smith, of Woodside, lately welcomed a visit of the stork—another sign of early spring.

The new seed firm started under the name of Buds, at 76 Barclay street, has as its manager Carl R. Gloeckner, for many years in the employ of J. M. Thornburn & Co.

J. K. Allen made an official trip into Massachusetts last week with a carload of civic boomers, in behalf of many improvements contemplated in and around Kearney, N. J., where he resides and stands "ace high" in municipal progress.

The auctions are crowded. The suburban women have heard of the bargains. Prices have not been so satisfactory in years. Many varieties of hardy roses are snapped up at $20 per hundred. The men look like landed proprietors and most of the faces are unfamiliar. The rooms are too small for the growing patronage. The streets also have merchants at every corner downtown, offering trees, plants and bulbs for sale. The seedsmen are handling great quantities of fruit trees. Prices are away up, but only where they belong.

Emil Tschupp, of the firm of John Tschupp & Co., West Hoboken, N. J., died Friday, April 8, and was buried Tuesday, April 12. Ford Bros. handle the firm's shipments.

After a three months' siege of rheumatism, Mr. Watkins, of W. E. Marshall & Co., is again at his desk. The firm is having a busy season.

E. A. Slattery, an old New York boy, now with W. J. Palmer & Son, of Buffalo, is visiting friends here.

One of the fortunate ones on Twenty-eighth street is J. J. Fellouris, whose lease of No. 52 holds good, while so many find it necessary to change their quarters. The best piece of luck, however, was the sale of the lease by one of the wholesale firms for an even $10,000, and with the luck was coupled business shrewdness, expert management and nerve.

A. L. Miller, of Jamaica avenue, Brooklyn, sold 60,000 of his own strain of pansies and says he could have sold 150,000 if he had grown them.

S. B. Wertheimer returned last week from his annual trip to the European fountains of inspiration for ribbon men.

ONE-PIECE CONCRETE BENCH.

Samuel Lum has one of the good sized places at Chatham, N. J., a town scarcely less famous for rose growing than is Madison itself. The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph taken in Mr. Lum's establishment, where the entire range is being equipped with the so-called concrete-steel benches, constructed under the Wilson-Hoyt system. The illustration shows the bench builders in the act of oiling the steel forms preparatory to pouring the concrete.

In this style of construction a steel form is used as a mold and the bench is reinforced with wires running through the concrete. The raised parts of the mold, shown in the illustration, give drainage. Quite a number of the places in Madison and Chatham have been trying out these benches and as a result are installing more of them this season. The day is undoubtedly coming when wood benches will be completely displaced by permanent construction.

CONCORD JUNCTION, MASS. — Leonard Cousins, Jr., has his pansies in fine shape. Owing to the mild spring weather so early in the season, pansies are as far advanced as they would be in May in ordinary years. They are covered with blossoms and his fine, large field of 250,000 is a sight worth going far to see. Shipments are being made daily to florists all over the country.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. W. J. Vesey.

The entire membership of the florists' profession will be startled and shocked by the unexpected news of the death of Mrs. W. J. Vesey, a former president of the Ladies' S. A. F. and one of the best known and most highly esteemed women connected with the trade. She was the wife of Judge William J. Vesey and one of the most prominent women in Fort Wayne, Ind., her home city. She was stricken by an attack of heart disease while riding on a Fort Wayne street car, and died suddenly shortly before 8 o'clock Friday evening, April 8, a moment after she had been taken from the car and assisted into a drug store at Broadway and Taylor street.

Dr. C. H. English, the family physician, stated that death had been due to arterio-sclerosis, combined with fatty degeneration of the heart, from which Mrs. Vesey had been suffering for some time, and that in all probability the fact that Mrs. Vesey had hastened in order to catch the car may have contributed to the crisis at this time. Close friends of Mrs. Vesey were aware that she had been subject to a heart weakness, but they were wholly unprepared for the distressing shock of news of her sudden death.

During the afternoon Mrs. Vesey had been a guest at a social affair, and in company with her youngest daughter, Miss Catherine, she was on her way downtown to attend the performance of "The Music Master" when she was stricken. Mrs. Vesey and her daughter boarded the northbound Broadway car at Maple avenue, and a moment after she was seated in the car Mrs. Vesey became ill and stepped out upon the rear platform to secure air.

When the car neared Taylor street the car was stopped, and a number of the passengers assisted Mrs. Vesey into the drug store. She was seated upon a chair in the front portion of the store, and a moment later collapsed as if in a faint. She was then carried to the rear of the store and attempts were made to revive her, but a physician, who had been hurriedly summoned from his office next door, found that death had intervened.

Attorney A. J. Vesey, a brother-in-law, was called from the Masonic Temple in the belief that Judge Vesey had not yet arrived in the city from a trip to Warsaw. The husband was reached by telephone at his office a little later and told that his wife was very ill. He hastened to the drug store, his brother meeting him on the way there and breaking the news to him that his wife had passed away. The coroner had been notified, and an ambulance at once removed the remains to the Vesey home, at 2602 Thompson avenue. David Vesey, a son, who is attending Michigan University, at Ann Arbor, reached the city the same evening, bringing a number of college friends to spend the vacation with him, and news of his mother's death was communicated to him as he alighted from the train.

Mrs. Vesey's age was 47 years. She was born in Decatur, Ind., a daughter of the late Judge David Studebaker, was educated at Decatur and in the Fort Wayne M. E. College, and was united in marriage to Judge Vesey July 25, 1882. Six children were born to this union, all of them, with the husband and father, surviving. The children are Margaret, Sallie, Dick, William J., David S. and Catherine Vesey. Miss Sallie is a student at DePauw and Dick at Ann Arbor, but the latter had gone to Greencastle to spend the vacation holidays. Miss Margaret is one of the vice-presidents of the Ladies' S. A. F. for the present year.

Mrs. Vesey was widely known as a florist and an authority on horticulture, and her love of flowers had led her to engage with her husband in business as a florist, the firm being W. J. & M. S. Vesey. In the Vesey greenhouses, in Fort Wayne, have in the last few years been developed some of the notable advances in the floriculture of America, and they have won recognition at all the larger horticultural exhibits of the country.

Socially, Mrs. Vesey was one of the most widely known and prominent women of her city. She was active in religious work, and was a member of Wayne Street Methodist Episcopal Church and president of its Ladies' Aid Society. In addition, Mrs. Vesey had been for several years the president of the Young Women's Christian Association. Her culture, her enthusiasm and her kindly charm made her universally admired and esteemed in a wide circle of acquaintances.

Mrs. W. J. Vesey.

The following communication from A. F. J. Baur, just received by the REVIEW, expresses well the general feeling of bereavement caused by Mrs. Vesey's death:

"It is with profound sorrow that I have heard of the untimely death of Mrs. W. J. Vesey. A woman in the prime of life, held in the highest esteem by a wide circle of acquaintances in the trade, her death will be a personal loss to a multitude of friends.

"Perhaps no woman in the trade had a wider personal acquaintance than Mrs. Vesey, and her kindly smile and cheery word will be missed at our conventions and flower shows, where we enjoyed meeting her.

"Those whom we can spare the least we are required to give up first.

"It is those of Mrs. Vesey's type who can sincerely repeat that beautiful passage of David's twenty-third psalm, 'Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, etc.'"

Peter Warren.

The death of Peter Warren last week marked the passing of an old-timer from the gardeners' ranks at Newport, R. I., where he had resided for nearly fifty years. He was a gardener of more than ordinary ability and was employed for many years on the Jones estate, and was a quiet, honest soul, who did his work well, attended to his own business and tried to do the things of this world as they should be done.

Peter Warren was born in Virginia eighty-two years ago, a slave, and as a boy was employed about the gardens of his master's home. He earned his liberty before the Civil war and came north, settling in Newport, where he soon found employment about the estates as a gardener, and, until his death, he continued at that work. He was the only colored man in the district where he lived, but despite his dark skin all his neighbors considered him a "white man," and that is what he was in the way the expression is generally used. His funeral occurred from his home, 113 Houston avenue, April 7, and was largely attended, gardeners of Newport being present in good numbers to pay their silent tribute to the aged man.

Alfred A. Williams.

Alfred A. Williams, one of the oldest florists and greenhouse vegetable gardeners of Cranston, R. I., died at his home on Hartford Pike, April 1. Of his sons, three are identified with the florists' and gardeners' business. Mr. Williams had been in failing health for more than a year, death being due to hardening of the arteries. He was a son of Larned Williams, a lineal descendant of Roger Williams, the founder of Rhode Island, and was born in Seekonk, Mass., seventy-six years ago. He was educated in the public schools of that district, completing his education at the Lapham Institute at Scituate.

About fifty years ago Mr. Williams took up his residence in the farmhouse where he died and took a great interest in everything pertaining to horticulture and agriculture. He always held the controlling interest in the range of greenhouses on his place, run successively by his sons, Alfred H., Larned, and for the last eight years by Olney H. and the latter's sons. This range consists of about 200,000 square feet of glass, and carnations, roses, violets, chrysanthemums, ferns, bedding stock, vegetable plants, azaleas and bulbous stock were grown in great quantities.

Mr. Williams, in his younger days, was prominent in the political affairs of the town and was for several years a member of the Johnston town council and of the Rhode Island House of Representatives.

Mrs. Thomas Thompson.

Mrs. Thomas Thompson, wife of the well-known florist of Santa Cruz, Cal., died March 31, aged 63 years. Mrs. Thompson was a generous, kindly lady, with large sympathies, and her death is mourned by a wide circle of friends. She leaves two sons and two daughters, besides her husband, all of whom have universal sympathy in their affliction.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—Work is progressing rapidly on the new greenhouse of Mark Aitken, on his recently purchased land on the River road.

EMAUS, PA.—Daniel B. Kroninger will offer at public sale, May 14, his greenhouses and other property on North Sixth street, including four and a half acres of ground and a stock of tomato plants.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS, MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Annual convention, Rochester, N. Y., August 16 to 19, 1910.

Results bring advertising.
THE REVIEW brings results.

NOWADAYS even cemeteries advertise.

READ the Want ads.; there's opportunity there.

ONCE more the need for experienced garden help is greater than the supply.

IT is planned to organize an international horticultural exhibition for London in 1912.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two copies.

THIS is the time of year when the daily newspapers are contracting the gardening fever; dozens of them are offering prizes for window-boxes and backyard flower gardens.

INQUIRIES must be signed with full name, and address must be given, to receive reply. Signatures are not used for publication in the REVIEW, but anonymous inquiries are not answered.

THE preliminary premium list for the fall show of the St. Louis Horticultural Society, to be held November 8 to 12, has been issued. Copies may be had by addressing Otto G. Koenig, secretary, 6473 Florissant avenue, St. Louis.

IF, as the university economists tell us, the high prices of commodities are due to the doubling of the production of gold in the last ten years, is it logical to conclude that the low prices of cut flowers are due to the fact that production has considerably more than doubled in that time?

SECRETARY A. F. J. BAUR has mailed to members the annual report of the American Carnation Society, and on request is sending the report without charge to agricultural colleges or other horticultural libraries. It is a pamphlet of 100 pages, with full report of the Pittsburg meeting, list of members, etc., gotten up in the usual style of these volumes.

DISPOSING OF THE SURPLUS.

Last week we advertised in two of our leading evening papers that we would give away, on the following day, a half dozen roses to all callers. We had no idea there would be such a general response, or that we were making such a lot of work for ourselves. The result was, we were simply swamped with applicants. Although we had extra help to serve the people and had advertised that we would give away 12,000 roses, yet we were compelled to close our doors at noon to keep out the crush, and we gave away about 17,000 roses, besides carnations, etc.

Our object in doing this was: First, to clean up an overloaded market; second, to keep the flowers out of the hands of street fakers, and third, to use the surplus as an advertising medium.

This week we are working off our surplus by turning over 10,000 or 12,000 roses to one of the leading newspapers for distribution to all the hospitals and homes for the aged in the city. In this case we work together, and the paper gets up quite an article in regard to the free distribution of roses, with illustrations, etc. THE J. M. GASSER Co.

DIFFERENCE IN EASTER DATES.

Ralph M. Ward & Co., New York, have issued a large sheet of views in the lily fields of Japan where their giganteum bulbs are grown, also illustrating the process of sorting and packing. With this Ward & Co. print some interesting comments on the date of Easter and the differences the date makes to the forcers of lilies, as follows:

"How Easter falls in chilly March or sunny April is a question of much importance to every grower and florist. The earliest day on which Easter can fall is March 22. Only once in the last century, and not once in this century, was this early date Easter day. Twice in the nineteenth century it fell on March 23, and this will be the date only once in the present century—in the year 1913. The latest possible Easter day is April 25. This was the date once in the last century, and will be once in the present—in 1943. Five weeks separate these extremes, so that the question of dates involves about two hours of daylight and a considerable difference in temperature. More Easters, fortunately, happen in April. During the next twenty years there will be sixteen April Easters and only four in March."

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

There is considerable improvement in market conditions this week, but last week on the whole was even worse than the week immediately following Easter; the average return to the growers certainly showed no improvement, even though by the end of the week there was some reduction in the oversupply. All through the week prices were at the lowest level and the waste was considerable, especially in the southern bulb stock and violets. Of these many wholesalers directed their shippers to stop sending anything to this market until conditions should change. By the end of the week the southern jonquils were pretty well over, little lilac was received, the violets amounted to only a few boxes a day and the cuts of roses and carnations began to show that the end of the glut was approaching. There was no advance in prices, except on sweet peas, but at the end of last week most of the wholesalers found it possible to clean up, something few of them had been able to do for from two to three weeks.

The steady heat ran the crops off rather quicker than most growers and wholesalers expected and at the opening of the present week there was a distinctly more cheerful feeling apparent throughout the market. There continue to be abundant supplies in practically all lines, but business is on the increase and a period of distinctly good flower selling seems to be approaching.

Some houses report Beauties still in full crop, but others say the production is lighter, that quoted prices are well maintained for anything worth shipping and that the Beauty market has already got on a fairly satisfactory spring basis. Rose crops are materially less than in the last fortnight and there is considerable improvement in their selling qualities.

NEW CROP OF FINE BEAUTIES

For years Beauty buyers have looked to us as practically without competition the moment hot weather hit the Beauties—our growers know how to hold the quality.

We are now just on with our Spring Crops. These compare specially well with any others now in market - nothing like them to be had elsewhere. A trial will convince you.

KILLARNEY

Our Killarneys are in a class by themselves.

Whatever the length you use buds better, length for length of stem, than any other house can supply. While we have the extra special for all who want them, the bulk of our large Spring crop grades as select and specials the length all stores use in quantity.

Also strong on Richmond; Bride, Maid and all other roses—fine stock in any quantity.

SWEET PEAS

We have an immense supply of Sweet Peas—Grown by specialists.

Besides the long-stemmed fancy Peas of the winter-flowering varieties, we are now getting the first large cut of the "Butterfly" sorts. Fine as our Peas have been these are much the best stock this market has seen this year. All colors. These are quick sellers wherever shown.

CARNATIONS

We are in heavy crop—we can fill large orders and many of them.

There are no better carnations anywhere than our "select, large and fancy," but if your trade requires the "common" grade (ours are as good as some houses ship as fancy), we can take care of you. Let us know what you can use—we do the rest.

Lilies

You always can get Lilies here—the best Lilies in this market.

All true giganteums—just the right kind of stock for the retailers to handle as cut flowers—they average about 3 flowers to the stalk. Just the thing for funeral sprays, also fine for church decorations for spring weddings.

Plenty of Callas at low prices.

Bulb Stock

All bulb stock in quantity; Tulips, choice Jonquils and Daffodils.

Green Goods

A full line, including the Best Ferns in the Market.

Mention The Review when you write.

Some houses make the report that short roses, stock at about $20 per thousand, are now in good request, with a proportionately larger supply of the longer and higher priced grades. Others say their situation is just reversed and that the call is for the better lengths, but that prices still rule low and the buyers are getting exceptionally good value. The long continued heat has affected the quality of practically all roses; buds are much smaller than they were. There is considerable mildew.

Carnation cuts continue heavy and wholesalers say they have more trouble in effecting clearances in this department than in any other, meaning, of course, clearances at anything except fakers' prices. It is not yet possible to do anything with callas and Easter lilies are difficult to move, the supply is so large.

Outdoor tulips are now competing with the indoor stock. The whites still fare worst.

Sweet peas dropped off as a result of the hot weather and the end of last week found the supply much lighter than heretofore. At the same time violets were so poor few stores would use them and the buyers turned to the peas. The result was a sharp advance in prices, for there was not stock enough to go around. The "Butterfly" varieties, as the wholesalers call the Spencer type, are now coming in and some exceedingly fine stock is seen. At the opening of the present week there were not enough peas to supply the demand.

The spring weddings have made a call for cattleyas which cannot be filled and there was a flurry in valley at the beginning of this week. It frequently happens that there will be a shortage of valley at the opening of the week and an oversupply in the later days, due probably to the fact that most of the weddings are in the first half of the week.

The wholesalers are interested in the fern situation. The quantity in storage in Chicago is generally considered to be not so large as usual at this date, but the eastern fern dealers have apparently large supplies remaining and letters from the south were received this week, stating that any needs can be supplied within a few days. Snowbirds from Michigan also are coming in. It looks as though the ferns would be cheaper this May than ever before.

Shipping trade already shows the passage of the glut in the surrounding cities and as local supplies go down outside demands will go up.

Club Meeting.

There was only a small attendance at the club meeting April 7. Vice-president H. E. Philpott, of Winnipeg, was present. Joe Straus, of the A. L. Randall Co., was elected to membership and one new name was proposed. A committee was appointed to represent the Florists' Club in flower show arrangements, E. F. Winterson and August Poehlmann being two of the members.

George Asmus was recommended for appointment as the club's representative on the Illinois State Board of Agriculture.

Refreshments were served as usual.

Various Notes.

Charles Bond, of Philadelphia, has bought the N. Saylor greenhouses at Naperville and will engage in orchid growing for the Chicago market. Mr. Bond was until recently gardener for Mrs. G. B. Wilson, who has one of the best known collections of orchids in this country. He has ordered freshly imported plants to stock his houses, which he considers excellently adapted to growing cattleyas, and expects the importations to arrive in a few days.

C. W. McKellar says the season for the southern bulbous stock was one of the worst within his recollection, but lays the trouble all to the heat.

Building greenhouses is a continuous performance with the Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove. Four new houses are

APHINE

The practicability of spraying, compared to fumigation or vaporizing, is being more generally recognized than heretofore among those engaged in floriculture and horticulture.

Spraying, when operated on scientific lines, is proving the most economical method of combating insect pests. Fumigation requires the filling of the house. Spraying requires application to that portion of the house only where the insects make their appearance.

Fumigation is not beneficial to flower or foliage. Spraying with Aphine does not affect them in the least; in fact, it invigorates the plants.

Chicago is to have an automobile parade May 7. The promoter says the dealers in automobile row have promised fifty machines, each one decorated with natural flowers, at an average cost of $50.

The Horticultural Society of Chicago held its regular quarterly meeting at the Art Institute April 12.

Miss Ada E. Brant will participate in the recital to be given Thursday evening, April 14, at Handel hall by the pupils of Balatka Musical College. Mrs. L. M. Noe, Madison, N. J., is a guest at the home of D. Wood Brant and family at Forest Glen.

A. L. Randall says that the Peterson Nursery has advised that if present weather conditions continue the local peonies will be in full bloom for Decoration day.

H. N. Bruns has succumbed to the automobile fever. His car is a Marion and one of the handsomest on the west side boulevards.

At Kyle & Foerster's it is reported that Frank Benthley became uncle to a bouncing baby girl April 10. The new arrival is in the family of Otto Benthley, at New Castle.

Gus Alles, of Wieter Bros., says the buyers now are taking Mrs. Jardine in preference to Maid or Killarney. Fragrance is one of the things in the favor of Jardine.

Vaughan & Sperry say they think William Dittman, at New Castle, will repeat his lucky stroke of February, when he brought in a big crop of Beauties at a time the market was lightly supplied. The crop appears to be just coming in again.

Henry Van Gelder, who manages the Percy Jones business, says that Keizerkroon is much the best seller of the outdoor tulips, now arriving in quantity.

W. W. Randall has moved this week to 2638 Albany avenue.

Kennicott Bros. Co. reports that M. Weiland, at Evanston, who had such splendid success last season with his crop of Spanish iris and who started out equally well this month, sends word that a large proportion of the irises fail to develop their flowers.

Miss Martha C. Gunterberg says the demand for violets is much better than the stock available for filling orders.

John Sinner, manager of the Flower Growers' Market, reports that work will begin in a few days on the long delayed remodeling of the market building.

Winterson's Seed Store states that April 9 was a record day for the concern in the point of sales.

Mike Tribble, who has worked in the shipping department of E. H. Hunt's for some five years, has resigned and will go west.

The John C. Moninger Co. has purchased a lot 135x150 on Hawthorne avenue, from the American Malting Co., for $19,000.

N. F. Comley, of Lexington, Mass., was one of the week's visitors.

B. Eldredge, florist and sewing machine manufacturer at Belvidere, was a passenger on the Northwestern flier that was wrecked inside the Chicago city limits April 9. He received several severe bruises.

B. F. Rubel, president of the Fleischman Floral Co., is at French Lick Springs.

Bowling.

There is a neck and neck finish in the Florists' Bowling League. The Carnations held first place until December 30, when they dropped back to second. April 7 they won four games, two from the Orchids and two from the Violets, and went back into first place, one game ahead of the Violets. Here are the scores:

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The market last week was overloaded with flowers of various kinds and qualities. The general demand moved in an inverse ratio to the supply and as a result the bottom dropped out of prices. Now and then bright spots in the demand took up some stock, but they made little difference as to the amount on hand. The blooms are showing the effect of the last several weeks of exceptionally bright weather.

In addition to the increased supply from the regular consignors of roses into this market, a large amount of extra stock is coming in, and has to be dumped. This latter is more or less salted, while the former is of good quality. The demand for American Beauties about takes up the supply at fair prices. The other roses, except My Maryland, move slowly.

There is also an oversupply of carnations, due to numerous extra consignments into the wholesale houses. The warm, sunny weather has affected the color of the darker shades. Large numbers of those of poorer quality found their way to the street fakers. Saturday many carnations were cleaned up at ridiculous prices.

Some belated bulbous stock of fair quality has found its way into the market. Callas and Harrisii of good quality are overabundant and accumulate everywhere. Lily of the valley is scarce and sells readily. Sweet peas are growing less plentiful every day and now the cut hardly meets the demand. Decorative greens, except smilax, are plentiful, especially plumosus, which hitherto has been short all year. Some double violets, that are good considering the season, are still arriving.

Various Notes.

A meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society was held April 11.

C. E. Critchell has been receiving excellent stock of all kinds, especially in green goods, including some fine plumosus from the south.

Peter Weiland is quite ill with rheumatism and left here, Tuesday, April 5, for Hot Springs to recuperate. During his absence P. J. Olinger is up at New Castle taking charge of the greenhouses. Mr. Olinger reports that everything is in first-class shape there.

Last week Wm. Murphy had on exhibition a vase of new seedling carnations from a local grower, to test their keeping qualities.

E. G. Gillett has been receiving some good Beauties from New Castle.

Ray and Louis Murphy have just finished planting out an acre and a half of Princess of Wales violets.

McCullough's are having some good valley, which finds a ready market.

C. C. Murphy is now gliding over the roads in his new auto, an E. M. F. "30" touring car.

Al. Heckman, who was on the sick list, is now around again. C. H. H.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Business still holds good, although prices have fallen off to a considerable extent and there is a plentiful supply of everything. Violets have about reached their end for the season, but a good supply of excellent sweet peas stands ready to take the place of leader. Trailing arbutus will, however, hold sway for a few days, but will hardly last long enough Already plans are being laid for outdoor work, and landscape gardening and spraying of trees will furnish more than the usual amount of work this spring. There is a growing demand for both of these lines.

Various Notes.

A petition in bankruptcy has been asked for John F. Wood, the retail and wholesale florist at 167 Westminster street. The Pennock-Meehan Co., of Philadelphia, is one of the creditors and was one of the signers of the application. Mr. Wood made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors April 6, to Charles H. McKenna, an attorney, who says that Mr. Wood's assets are more than $3,000 and that there are thirty-two creditors with claims aggregating about $1,700. He says that there are also claims for $1,600 by a former attorney and an assistant, which are disputed.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The tone of the market improved for the week beginning April 7 and ending April 13. The most potent factor in this improvement was the cooler weather that arrived on the first named day, continuing throughout the week. It took the market a day to feel the change, but by Friday everyone felt the difference, while on Saturday there was the best clean-up of all kinds of flowers since Easter. This was accomplished at buyers' prices, which means that the best stock brought fair value, while the poorer stock brought little, not nothing.

Sweet peas are the buoyant feature of the market; even on the worst day, Thursday, sweet peas sold better than anything else, while on all the other days all the good sweet peas went out nearly as soon as they arrived.

Pink roses were probably the next strongest flower on the market, Killarney leading. The better grades went quickly, the poorer not so well, but were mostly marketed at some price. Maryland did not always sell as well as Killarney. Really fine Richmond and Bride were in demand, the latter showing the effect of the hot weather in spots. When fine, White Killarney fully holds its own with Bride, while Kaiserin is increasing in popularity with the buyers who want a large rose at moderate price, regardless of shade. Beauties are much more plentiful, but business in this finest of roses is erratic, the buyers seemingly distrusting the steadiness of the crops. Experts agree that Beauties will be with us in quantity and quality until July at least.

The price of cattleyas has fallen under the influence of increased receipts of Mossiae and some Schroederiana. There is no stable market for gardenias, only the finest and but a few of these bringing listed prices. Valley is selling, but the bears have hammered it below Easter prices. Single violets are about done from the frames so far as quality is concerned, while the doubles have outlived their popularity. The statement in last week's market report that daffodils were pretty nearly over was premature; some nice flowers, particularly of Emperor, are still obtainable.

Lilies are the worst feature of the market. Their own prices had no effect on the buyers; they simply couldn't use them. One of the brightest wholesalers notified a number of churches and hospitals that they could have lilies on Saturday by sending for them, thus increasing their popularity after exhausting every method of distributing on a business basis. These heroic measures removed the surplus and will probably give a better tone to the lily market in view of the oncoming weddings. Callas are selling a trifle better than Easter lilies, at low prices. Snaps are fine, white, yellow, pink and rose-red being the leading colors; prices rule low.

Greens sell fairly well, supply and demand being about equal, except that smilax is scarce.

By April 13 carnations were recovering from the warm weather; crops were lighter, colors in demand.

Orchids.

It may not be generally known that the Joseph Heacock Co., of Wyncote, Pa., have steadily pushed to the front as orchid growers. They are recognized as leading growers of roses, carnations and palms, or if we take Mr. Heacock's axiom of having the leading representative in each class, they are growers of Killarney, Dorothy Gordon and kentias, with a moderate number of side lines. So in orchids the Joseph Heacock Co. are growers of cattleyas; as pretty a lot of cattleyas as one could wish to see. Visitors to Wyncote well remember that after they have been through a compact, well equipped range of glass filled with thrifty stock they are generally taken to a raised platform at the far end of the last house, where they can look over the stock from a vantage point. This house, something like 30x250, formerly filled with kentias, is now nearly half filled with cattleyas, as pretty a lot of plants as could be grown. The arrangement for free admission of air is particularly good. Of the cattleyas, Schröderiana and Mossiæ were in bloom, the soft pink of the last named variety being in evidence.

James W. Heacock called attention to a particularly fine spike of Cattleya Schröderiana, one stem with five large, perfect flowers, an unusual number. The success of cattleyas at Wyncote leads to the belief that further additions will be made to the stock.

Carnations.

Hatboro boasts three members of the profession, or more correctly speaking, three firms: Thomas Reading, seedsman and florist; H. M. Weiss & Son, carnation specialists, and Eugene Weiss, grower of roses, carnations and peas. The places of the brothers, Henry M. and Eugene Weiss, stand side by side a little distance out of Hatboro; the latter is a landmark, floriculturally speaking, the former a plant of recent construction. Carnation growers are especially interested in the work of Henry M. Weiss & Son for two reasons; first, they produce exceptionally fine stock in quantity; second, their place is a marvel of mechanical ingenuity.

The varieties of carnations grown are all the best; they are well propagated, well housed, and well fed. There were something like 60,000 young plants in the frames and houses last week, the frames containing pot grown stock of the bang-up varieties seen in the Philadelphia market today. In the houses were something over 5,000 plants of two of the best novelties sent out this spring, varieties worth planting out in the benches to secure growth. The houses, three in number, are now 25x300, if I am not mistaken, an additional half house having been added last fall. The feeding is done by liquid manure through the water pipes, in addition to more solid nourishment.

The mechanical ingenuity of this place must be seen to be appreciated. Everything in that line is nicely done. A recent addition is the Blake pump, installed for pumping liquid through the pipes; this pump, springless and valveless, cannot be put out of order by pebble, straw or what-not, and promises to be a source of comfort to its owner for many a long day to come.

Mr. Michell's Little Joke?

Fred J. Michell, Jr., met Phil at "ten-eighteen" one afternoon this week with a little joke. Assuming a stern expression, rather a difficult matter for him, Mr. Michell said, "We got an order from Oklahoma today through another publication. Doesn't your paper go out there?" Phil has a deep-rooted conviction that the REVIEW goes everywhere reached by any minor paper and a good many other places besides. He was trying to put this in words when Mr. Michell said, with a jolly laugh: "Never mind; the order came through the REVIEW and you may repeat that Japanese lily card for us."

Various Notes.

THE FLORISTS' SUPPLY HOUSE OF AMERICA

MEMORIAL DAY IS APPROACHING

The early spring makes it likely that your customers will drop in any time now to select their designs for Memorial Day. We suggest the importance of placing your order now and having the designs in stock when required. We are making Memorial Day designs of finer quality than ever before; we are making more of them, believing they will be required.

Metallic Wreaths are our specialty; we make them up in Roses, Pansies, Forget-me-nots or anything you please. Standing Anchors, Pillows, Wreaths, etc., our aim is to have metallic designs graceful and true to nature, so that they cannot fail to win admiration.

Our Imported Magnolia Leaves and Wreaths will be a feature this season.

Immortelles in all colors. Our factory is at your command for everything in florists' supplies. Send for our illustrated catalogue.

the evening of April 11 on "Aquatic Gardens in Small Yards."

M. Rice has arrived safely in Florence, Italy, where he has gone in quest of "the newest and best."

Jacob Becker has consummated a satisfactory sale of his property at Fiftieth and Chestnut streets, securing a handsome profit on his investment.

Victor Groshens is sending some fancy, long-stemmed My Maryland roses to the Leo Niessen Co. that rank anything in the rose line now coming into "twelve-nine."

Eugene Bernheimer is handling some exceptionally nice long-stemmed snaps in colors three.

Fred J. Michell has taken the helm at "five-eighteen" in person.

The absence of Sydney Bayersdorfer, Martin Reukauf and Stephen B. Green in Boston this week has increased the already great activity at "eleven twenty-nine." Phil.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Cut flower trade has been poor of late. Constantly growing receipts seem to have been accompanied by a slackened demand. April 8 gave us a welcome relief from the hot weather and we have enjoyed two or three days of more March-like conditions. A continuation of lower temperature would galvanize activity into the markets and be a blessing to the overworked seedsmen and nurserymen, who are having the most strenuous season on record.

Roses are abundant. While good flowers sell fairly well, large numbers are sold extremely low and street fakers are now able to secure an abundance of stock at their own prices. Some nice Carnots are coming in. My Maryland is showing up well. Mrs. Aaron Ward continues popular, but Killarney and White Killarney are the real leaders.

Carnations are a veritable glut and prices on them have sunk to a low ebb. A few select reach $2.50 to $3 per hundred, but more are sold at $1 and some at half that price. The quality continues good, although many are now showing attacks of red spider. Single violets are over, but some doubles of dwindling size will come in for a week or two longer. Sweet peas are in tremendous supply; good flowers sell well. There is a really good call for yellow marguerites, but the demand for white is poor. Bulbous stock is still hard to move and is soft, owing to the hot weather. A few more days should finish indoor supplies. There are already many kinds flowering in the open. Spanish iris meets a good sale. It ships poorly, but for local sales is found satisfactory. A few Gladiolus The Bride appeared last week.

Snapdragons are fine, but selling poorly, so is mignonette, ten weeks' stocks and a variety of miscellaneous flowers. Lilies since Easter have been a veritable glut, selling at low prices. Some good candidums are coming in, but they also are hard to move. Cattleyas are more plentiful, some good Mossias appearing, but the call for them is light. Gardenias are a perfect glut. Shipments of these from Philadelphia and other points realized little, many finding their way into the rubbish barrels. For asparagus and fern there is a fairly good demand. There are still many rambler roses and other flowering plants, but there is little call for them since Easter.

Various Notes.

There was a pleasant gathering at the home of C. W. Hubbard, Auburndale, last week, the occasion being the presentation of a watch and chain to Albert Coutts for fifteen years' service as superintendent of the Hubbard estate. T. J. Grey made the presentation and the evening was pleasantly spent with music, a collation also being served. Mr. Coutts goes to the wild and woolly west, where he will take up farming.

in Malden, April 11. He did this at the urgent request of a host of friends, who stand ready to help him make good in his new enterprise.

H. W. Vose, of Hyde Park, has just finished a successful season with violets. He is still sending in nice cinerarias, which sell well, to the older Park Street market.

William W. Edgar Co. are preparing for a heavy Memorial day trade and their houses, depleted of Easter stock, are now filled with bedding and other stock for May and June trade. They have a fine batch of Hiawatha and Dorothy Perkins now in flower.

William H. Ward, of Montvale, grows carnations well, and in Mrs. Ward no more efficient saleslady could be found.

He has for some time been picking fine lots of tomatoes. Wholesale prices for these are at present good, 40 cents per pound April 9.

E. L. Pierce, of the A. H. Hews Co., is home from Florida, looking vastly improved in health. His firm reports an excellent spring trade for flower pots.

A large automobile owned by Peirce Bros., of Waltham, ran amuck of the heavy iron railings on the Boston Common side of Beacon street about 10 p. m. April 8. The car was badly smashed, but fortunately the chauffeur and other occupants were uninjured.

William Nicholson is selling some nice made-up pans of Marguerite Queen Alexandra. He is cutting 10,000 yellow marguerites weekly, with extra long stems.

Yellow marguerites promise to be one of the best selling flowers for the next three months.

The meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, which should occur April 19, has been postponed until April 26, owing to the halls at 300 Massachusetts avenue being rented on the regular meeting night.

The T. J. Grey Co. reports the busiest seed season on record. Of late they have worked from 5 a. m. to 10 p. m. week days and a good part of Sundays to keep abreast of orders.

Vegetation is advanced here. Many varieties of narcissi are in full bloom, also some of the early tulips. Such shrubs as forsythias, magnolias, Spiraea Thunbergii, Cornus Mas and some prunus are in full flower. Lilacs are showing a wonderful wealth of flower trusses and, barring late frosts, will make a big show in late April and early May.

Alexander Barr, of Kennebunk Port, Me., was in town last week, making many purchases, and called on old friends.

W. W. Rawson & Co. have never experienced so busy a season as the present one. Long hours are necessary to keep orders filled in the seed line. The demand for dahlias and gladioli, especially of the better grades, has been remarkable.

A. Leuthy spent a few days last week visiting growers around Philadelphia and found all hustling at a lively rate.

J. P. Mossman, of North Easton, has taken charge of the orchid department for Siebrecht & Son, New Rochelle, N. Y.

George E. Buxton, of Nashua, N. H., has had excellent sales for rooted cuttings of his fine new seedling, Bon Ami,

The Market.

Business last week was not as rushing as it has been, but if we must have some dull days, they did not come amiss, as every one has had his nose to the grindstone for the last month, and a little rest will do good.

Good stock is plentiful, no doubt due to the lack of demand. Bride and Maid are showing the effects of the recent hot weather. Beauties and Killarney are coming in as good as ever. Most of the violets are the Hudson river stock and they are unsatisfactory, as they come in poor and on account of the hot weather their keeping qualities are ruined. Peas are plentiful. Some outdoor jonquils are still to be had. Easter and calla lilies are cleaned up daily, as are the carnations. The first outdoor lilacs made their appearance last week.

In blooming plants there is not a great variety, as everything was cleaned up at Easter. Some good ramblers and hydrangeas are to be seen and move well. Pansies are to be had in quantity.

Various Notes.

H. W. Rieman is showing a fine lot of hydrangeas. Mr. Rieman received a large importation of box trees recently and reports a heavy sale for them.

Baur & Smith enjoyed a fine business in geraniums this year, having sold entirely out. This firm has a nice lot of its white carnation potted up and expects to grow them extensively this fall for cutting.

The next monthly meeting of the State Florists' Association will be held on the first Wednesday night of May at the Elks' club. The question of the fall show will be up and a large attendance is expected. The meeting will be followed by a real Dutch lunch.

MEADVILLE, PA.—Geo. W. Haas & Son report that Easter trade this year was almost double that of any other year. The weather was ideal, and carnations took the lead in cut flowers with violets, lilies, daffodils and roses following closely. The best sellers in plants were azaleas, lilies, cinerarias, daffodils, primroses and geraniums. The prices in cut flowers were a trifle lower than last year, but the larger quantity sold this year more than made up the difference. Mr. Haas says they have quite a lot of orders booked for bedding plants, porch boxes, hanging baskets, etc.

The Market.

Trade last week was good, keeping the storemen on the jump. Stock has been quite plentiful, with prices fair. Carnations retail at 50 cents per dozen and roses at $1.50 to $2 per dozen. Violets are beginning to play out; what flowers there are retail at 75 cents and $1 per hundred blooms. Sweet peas of good quality sell at the same price. Callas and Easter lilies retail at $2 per dozen, snapdragons at $1 per dozen, Paper Whites, tulips and daffodils at 50 cents per dozen. Single daffodils sell at 35 cents per dozen. Double Murillo tulips bring 60 cents to 75 cents per dozen. Funeral work has been good of late, and there is a good demand for green goods. Pansies and daisies are now quite plentiful. They sell at 25 cents and 35 cents per dozen roots. In general there is a good call for these plants.

After a long, unseasonable hot spell, the weather has again turned cool. This will check the supply of flowers somewhat. The street fakers are again in evidence. One of our department stores is now handling a full line of shrubs, etc., and at greatly reduced prices, compared with those of the florists. Most of the growers around here will have their ten weeks' stocks in time. Great interest is being taken in the garden prize contest in this city for children. The Sunday Standard printed two or three full pages recently, describing plants, how to take care of them, and other things pertaining to the garden.

Various Notes.

E. H. Chamberlain has had a big rush of funeral work. He is handling some nice Murillo tulips from Mann Bros.

J. H. Cleary had a nice display of daffodils, tulips, pansies and daisies last Saturday.

William P. Peirce had a good window of tulips and flowering plants, also carnations.

MANCHESTER, ME.—William Welch, near the Outlet, has his new greenhouse completely filled with fine large tomato, celery, lettuce and flowering seedlings.

FORT SMITH, ARK.—On account of the early spring, A. A. Pantet & Co. had sold most of their stock of bedding plants before the end of the first week of April. By that time they had also completed the planting of some of the city parks; they have a contract to take care of these parks and the hospital grounds throughout the year. Business in their cut flower department was also active. Their roses for next season will occupy three houses instead of the former two. About June 1 Mr. Pantet will sail for Europe, and he expects that on his return he will introduce several plants that will be new to this country.

WEIGELIA-FLOWERED AZALEAS.

It is about twenty-five years since Waterer, of Bagshot, England, succeeded in raising a hybrid between the Asiatic Azalea mollis and the North American A. occidentalis. This hybrid appeared in 1890, and was regarded as a wonderful flower—large in size, marked with a golden blotch. It has probably disappeared in the course of time, for there appeared at about that date a number of bright-colored Azalea mollis varieties; colors which are not yet excelled. Azalea arborescens has been employed by some German hybridist for its strong habit of growth, and it will soon be noted how far crosses have been successfully made with A. mollis for its beautiful coloring, and with A. occidentalis for its floriferousness, Herr Henkel, of Darmstadt, being in the position soon to place on the market varieties resulting from these crosses. The varieties derived from the above named parents are perfectly hardy, rather later in flowering than A. mollis, and the flowers longer; the trusses, and single blooms at least of the same size as A. mollis. The colors are intermediate between white and reddish copper, but mostly tender rose, which, according to the Horticultural Trade Journal, may be best compared with those of a weigelia.

GARY, IND.—The firm of Franzen & Little was recently organized here and has opened a store at 644 Broadway. The new company will handle both flowers and nursery stock, giving special attention to landscape gardening. Mr. Franzen is the resident partner, and is no stranger to Gary, having done a considerable amount of work here in the line of trees and shrubs.

The Market.

Trade has been holding up well since Easter, with plenty of stock, as a rule. Last week there were two or three days that were a little quiet, but Saturday was an unusually heavy day and cleaned up stock in good shape, with the exception of bulbous stock, which moves slowly, so that there is a considerable quantity of it still in the market. Daffodils, tulips, narcissi and hyacinths are plentiful, and in all of these the demand is light. Roses have been in fair supply, except white ones, which have been at a premium for the last two weeks and the demand for them has been heavy. Carnations have been plentiful and for a few days it looked as though there would be a glut on them, but heavy funeral work came in time to relieve the situation. Enchantress has been arriving in great quantities and was substituted a great deal for white, which has been a little shy of filling all orders. Sweet peas have proven a good substitute for violets, and large quantities are moved daily. Some extra fine peas are seen in this market at the present time.

Violets are a thing of the past. There are few of them in the market and those there are here are far from good. The warm weather has got in its work on them about a month earlier than usual. Some lilies are still to be had, but only a few and the demand for them is light. Valley is moving fairly well, with a light supply. There are quite a few good ramblers and hydrangeas to be seen—some that were a little late for Easter.

The weather here is extremely warm and everything is about a month earlier than usual. Fruit trees are all in full bloom. Last week there was a frost, which caused considerable uneasiness to the fruit growers, but, from all reports, there was not as much damage done as was expected.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club had a fine crowd at its last dance. It was decided to give the final dance of the season April 22.

Oliver A. Munk reports everything moving nicely on his new place.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is cutting heavily on sweet peas and carnations at present.

The Riverside Floral Co. reports good business.

E. Metzmaier says things are humming at his place.

Mr. Jones, of the Fifth Avenue Floral Co., submitted to a severe operation and was in the hospital one week, but is able to be around and look after things at the farm. J. M.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Planting of outdoor shrubs and garden platting are the chief business this month, and the nurserymen ought to reap a harvest, with this remarkably fine, warm weather and time to get the work in. The greenhouses are showing a good start for bedding plants, which promise to bring good returns, as usual. Cut flowers are plentiful, including good bulb stock and plenty of roses and carnations, with the exception of white roses, which continue scarce.

Club Meeting.

The florists of Minneapolis held an important meeting April 6, at the Commercial Club. Committees were appointed and arrangements were made for the flower show next fall. The sum of $4,000 in prizes will be distributed, and the show promises to equal anything ever held in the Twin Cities in any line. Theodore Wirth was chairman of the meet-

Seed Trade NewsAMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Twenty-eighth annual meeting, Atlantic City, N. J., June 21 to 23, 1910.

REPORTS from California growers indicate a fair degree of satisfaction with the growing season to date.

R. FISCHER writes that the hard winter in California has been the cause of unusually small crops of marketable bulbs of freesia.

IN the county of Essex, in England, a large acreage of nasturtiums is grown for seed each year, much of which is exported to the United States.

W. F. PULS, president of the W. F. Puls Seed Co., Houston, Tex., also is the leading retail delicatessen dealer in that town, with two stalls in the city market.

It is said the call for sweet peas has run so largely to the Spencer varieties that some seedsmen would be glad if their growing contracts read a little differently.

MAIL orders are falling off, possibly a little faster than usual at this date, for the heat of March brought in a good many orders that ordinarily are received in April.

THE Reichardt & Schulte Co., Houston, Tex., reports that this has been much the largest season, not only for them but for the seed trade generally in Texas and the southwest.

IN opening the jubilee show of the Haarlem Bulb Growers' Association, the president, E. H. Krelage, whom many American seedsmen know, gave charming little addresses in Dutch, English, French and German, a linguistic feat provoking envy in less gifted mortals.

L. H. MURRAY, vice-president of the Springfield Seed Co., of Springfield, Mo., was recently elected president of the Merchants' National Bank of Springfield. R. R. Ricketts, president of the same seed firm, was chosen as one of the bank's directors, and other stockholders of the seed company are interested in the bank, which is said to be one of the largest institutions of its kind in that part of the state.

THE Crop Reporting Board of the Bureau of Statistics of the United States Department of Agriculture estimates, from the reports of correspondents and agents of the bureau, that the average condition of winter wheat April 1 was 80.8 per cent of a normal, against 82.2 April 1, 1909, 91.3 April 1, 1908, and 87 the average condition for the past ten years. The decline in condition from December 1, 1909, to April 1, 1910, was 15 points, as compared with an average decline in the past ten years of 4.5 points.

F. COOPER, Ltd., seedsmen, Wellington, New Zealand, send newspaper cuttings and illustrations of a new seed warehouse they have just erected, costing, including the site, some $100,000. The firm started in a small way nearly half a century ago, and now, in addition to its imports, grows seeds largely for home and export sale, and has this year 500 acres under seed peas in addition to numerous other specialties.

THE BULB SEASON.

The Holland bulb salesmen are reaching the end of their routes, closing the order books and, in the majority of cases, departing for England. Within the next fortnight most of them will have taken their departure. As a rule, they express themselves well satisfied with the season's booking of orders. While there has been for several seasons a steady cutting down of orders, espe-

AMMONIATED LAWN LIME

Kills Weeds—Makes Grass Grow

Applied as a light top dressing to lawns, it kills all flat leaved weeds, such as Dandelion, Daisy, Plantain, Sorrel, Chickweed, Moss, etc., in 48 hours and without other fertilizer produces a wonderful, luxuriant, rich green growth of lawn grass—which is distinctly noticeable 50 feet away.

The use of Ammoniated Lawn Lime supersedes hand weeding of lawns, putting greens, etc. It saves the grass from being pulled up and in many cases ruined. Grasses take a new, vigorous growth, avoiding probable trouble in future.

Quantities : If very weedy, 1 lb. to 40 sq. ft.; 25 lbs. to 1000 sq. ft. (20 x 50). Half to one-quarter amount if moderately weedy.

cially for tulips, among those who force bulbs for city markets, those who grow only for their own retail trade are more numerous than ever and are buying larger quantities. Also, the sale of bulbs for bedding increases year after year. The orders of the big seed houses are this season said to be heavier than ever, as a result of the good season last autumn. Dutch hyacinths are not now extensively grown for cutting for wholesale markets, but more are sold as pot plants, especially at Easter. There is no reduction in the quantities of narcissi forced. It is the general report among the Hollanders that the specific duty on bulbs has resulted in an increased demand for the higher class varieties of tulips and a reduction in the call for cheap sorts and mixtures.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seeds through the port of New York for the week ending April 2 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Annatto	200	$2,924	Fennel	30	$ 877
Anise	75	1,703	Millet	6,974	21,868
Celery	30	431	Mustard	300	2,801
Clover	148	4,378	Poppy	100	703
Coriander	80	270	Rape	10	71
Cummin	183	1,596	Other		1,297

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $51,803.

NEW SWEET PEAS.

Whereas hooded forms of the grandiflora type of sweet pea were the prevailing fascination with cultivators a few years ago, the Spencerian hybrids, with their waved or crenulated standards, now prevail. Doubtless size and, to some limited extent, gracefulness of aspect have been gained thereby; but they do not seed so well as their predecessors, while certainly the crosses are not so easily established. During last summer, in far California, my Eckfordian namesake was crossed by Henry Ohn with the Countess Spencer (at the nurseries of C. C. Morse & Co.), but Lester Morse is not yet quite certain if the result will prove successful, as it is usually a long period before such hybrids, always somewhat capricious and unreliable, become perfectly fixed.

Some of the finest of recently-introduced varieties have come to us from British raisers, and especially from Miss Hemus and Dobbie & Co. Miss Hemus has just given us a supreme beauty in Zero, which many cultivators regard as the most graceful, pure white sweet pea that has hitherto appeared, surely a high tribute seeing that it has such formidable rivals as Etta Dyke and the beautiful Nora Unwin. Evelyn Hemus, by reason of its distinctive color, has already attained to a unique position. The latest varieties of great merit sent out by Dobbie & Co. are Mrs. Hugh Dickson and Masterpiece, of which the latter, the only existing rival of Asta Ohn, has been raised by that renowned exhibitor and assiduous hybridist, Mr. Malcolm, of Duns. Sweet Lavender would have been an expressive name for this charming variety, which, in addition to its exceedingly refined appearance, is commanding in dimensions. Mrs. Hugh Dickson has close affinities with that charming variety, Mrs. Henry Bell, and may be characterized as the queen of the cream-pinks. Mr. Eckford has this season sent out four new varieties, of which the most popular is certain to be Picotee, a waved flower of large size and exquisite form, pure white, with a delicate edging of

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The condition of the cut flower market has not improved in the last week. All reports indicate that, outside of funeral work, trade was pretty dull nearly all the week. Those that handle plants, however, say they have been kept quite busy, as plants of all kinds have been in heavy demand since Easter.

The wholesalers are all receiving an abundance of fine stock of everything in season. They, too, say that trade has dropped off greatly during the last week.

The market opened on Monday morning, April 11, with the supply coming in heavily, and a glut was looked for in carnations and roses. Of these, the supply that comes in is of extra good quality, and the prices are not over 2 cents for the best carnations and 6 cents for the best roses. Long, fancy Beauties are fine at $3 per dozen. Harrisii and callas are far too numerous to meet with clean sales and are offered as low as $6 per hundred. Sweet peas are selling well. Violets are over for this season. Valley is extra fine and there is plenty of it. The same is true of Dutch hyacinths and jonquils. Smilax is in good demand and all other greens are plentiful.

Retail Florists' Association.

The meeting of the Retail Florists' Association on Monday night, April 4, was held, as usual, at the Washington hotel, with a fair attendance. A great deal of business was transacted and it looks as if the association had already accomplished a great deal of good.

The question now to be taken up by this association is, how to get a strangle hold on the crepe puller and put him out of business. A real, first-class florist would not resort to that way of getting business, but the practice hurts the trade in a certain way, especially when some of them use the names of first-class florists in order to obtain the orders. So, at the next meeting of the association they should take this matter up, for self-protection, which is what they are organized for.

During these warm days the plant stands in Union Market are doing a rushing business. Mr. Carr, who handles William Schray & Sons' plants, says trade in all lines—plants, seeds and bulbs—has been better than ever before.

Mrs. Charles Young and child are at present enjoying a trip to Marlin Springs, Tex., while Mr. Young has his hands full at the store.

Ernest Strehling is now acting superintendent of parks. Park Commissioner Scanlan has not as yet made any decision as to who will be the new superintendent. There are quite a few applications in for the position. The trade has no concern in the matter further than to hope that the appointee will know his business and will not be a politician.

Miss Matilda Meinhardt left Saturday morning for Fort Wayne, Ind., to attend the funeral of her friend, Mrs. W. J. Vesey, who died suddenly Friday night, April 8.

W. F. Kasting, of Buffalo, N. Y., spent a day with the trade April 11, on his way home from Hot Springs, Ark., where Mr. Kasting spent two weeks.

DISEASES AND PREVENTION.

[A paper by A. D. Selby, Botanist, Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, Wooster, O., read at the Ashtabula convention of the Greenhouse Vegetable Growers' Association.]

Only the commoner forcing-house vegetables, such as lettuce, tomatoes, cucumbers, muskmelons, radishes and cauliflower, have been sufficiently studied under greenhouse conditions to offer a basis for discussion. I will limit myself to these, and questions relating to diseases of other crops for forcing may be presented if the need exists.

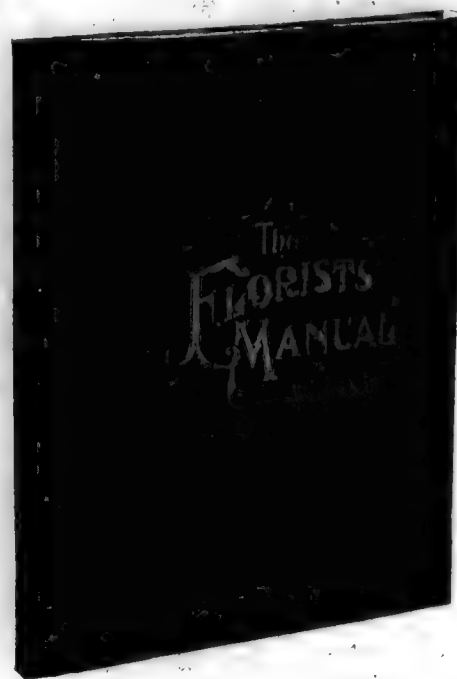

But why do the diseases of greenhouse vegetables stand out prominently? Why should men of the forcing-house have more danger from possible disease losses than growers outdoors? Is there any clear reason for forcing-house troubles in great abundance?

Conditions and Practices Invite Diseases.

In outdoor vegetable growing rotation is practiced somewhat after the custom in general agriculture. While I know that rotation is locally not followed in centers of vegetable growing, it is rather generally practiced. Whatever violations of the law of rotation may occur, rotation is the necessity that may not be passed. Continuous culture of intensive crops leads to troublesome conditions, even outdoors. Many instances may be cited. Probably the celery grower, if he is here, will not deny his recent difficulties. San Joaquin county, California, illustrates this in its intensive potato culture upon the reclaimed tule or peat lands in the deltas of the San Joaquin and Sacramento rivers. In that district potatoes are grown, or have been grown, very extensively, the area reaching 25,000 acres. Yet, in recent years, by the more or less continuous cropping, the lands have become "potato sick" through the accumulation of the fungus of potato wilt, Fusarium oxysporum.

The accumulation of soil parasites might be called nature's method of placing a limit on man's continuous culture of the same crop upon a given area of land. When man violates this law, he must reap the consequences. Soil infesting parasites are very numerous and they must inevitably become more numerous and more destructive as our culture grows older and our population increases in density.

Now, the greenhouseman has anticipated, by a century or so, our population density as expressed by cropping. He constructs glass over considerable areas and intensifies plant production. He reaps profit from this because of the growth of large cities and the American habits of luxurious living throughout the season. When the greenhouseman has made such large investment as is represented by his acres of glass, his culture conditions are highly intensive. Continuous culture in the same crops becomes a law of the business. I do not need to repeat that this law of greenhouse culture violates nature's law of rotation. Inevitably there arise soil conditions of disease which must be dealt with as another part of the forcinghouse business.

Soil Infesting Diseases to be Expected.

These soil infesting diseases are to be expected, because there is an accumulation of parasites or parasitic organisms which survive in the soil, and an entire absence of adequate relief conditions such as are offered by systematic rotation in outdoor culture. I have already pointed out in Circular No. 57 of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station what takes place under conditions like those here at Ashtabula.

Your forcing houses are built upon these areas of sand thrown up by Lake Erie in past time. While locally the sand may become enriched and darkened in color by vegetable accumulations, especially in lower levels, the soils in your benches are essentially the same. They are derived from the old lake beach deposits and are very sandy in character. This sandy character means not only a high percentage of siliceous matter, but a low amount of lime compounds. Further, having such a soil, it is the custom to add large amounts of rotted manure and to practice continuous cultivation under glass. This decomposing organic matter supplied by the manure produces considerable amounts of acid compounds. The sandy soil was acid to begin with, and this increased acidity develops soil conditions adapted to such organisms, including both fungi and bacteria, as love an acid soil. These organisms require an acid nidus.

Little wonder, then, that either should develop here in this region with a one-sided soil flora. Most of you know what this has meant in the past history of lettuce and cucumber growing in the lake shore district. Elsewhere the greenhouse problems have not been identical in character, unless the conditions were very similar. The presence of higher amounts of lime contained in the soil has checked the movement toward an acid soil. Even where this has been so, the greenhouse troubles have changed simply in character. They have not failed to appear.

Parasites Develop in Acid Soils.

While I believe that injurious or soil inhabiting bacteria are developed in great abundance in acid soils, the soil infesting fungus has been easiest found and most often accused. I refer to the sterile fungus of lettuce rosette, which we also call Rhizoctonia. It has flourished because the acid soil conditions are suited to it, and once established, its resting forms or sclerotia will survive even though the soil acidity be corrected by applications of ground limestone or ashes. Evidently some sort of soil treatment will be required and is required to meet the conditions which are brought about in the forcinghouse.

Special soil treatment to destroy parasites is seldom practicable in outdoor culture. In cases of clover-sick soils we are able to overcome the soil sickness by applications of lime, preferably in form of ground raw limestone. We do find soil treatments necessary in plant beds of many kinds. In tobacco growing districts where the same plant beds are occupied from year to year or in any plant growing business where similar methods are followed and even in hotbeds, the conditions which prevail are essentially those developed under glass. Under these circumstances methods of soil treatment have been used with great advantage. These methods, for the most part, are merely adaptations of those employed in greenhouses. One exception may be noted, namely, the old practice of burning the brush heap where cabbage plants or tobacco plants, etc., were to be grown. This is probably the oldest method of soil treatment and it is of historical as well as of practical value.

Special Soil Treatment Required.

Our friends, the florists, with their systems of raised benches have developed a practice of changing soil each year. In this, both the rotation and outdoor freezing of the soil help to keep down soil parasites. However, all will admit that this method is impracticable in vegetable forcing. The soil parasitism brought about by the continuous, intensive culture may be met profitably in the greenhouse. What is the object of such greenhouse soil disinfection and how may it be secured? Obviously, we first need the correct principle to guide us. I wish to impress upon you that this correct principle is really an important thing. The methods to be followed in securing results will vary according to the particular needs and appliances available. The principle will never vary—it is the law which underlies the practice.

In this case, soil disinfection means that some method of destroying soil parasites must be employed. At the same time these methods must leave the soil in the proper condition to yield profitable crops. Soil disinfection under these circumstances is just as essential as the disinfection of rooms that have been occupied by persons ill from scarlet fever, diphtheria, smallpox, etc. The end sought is the same, namely, the destruction of the injurious organisms with a minimum injury to other things.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

An unusually interesting meeting of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society was held recently in the rooms of the Poughkeepsie Club, in Market street. A considerable number of practical flower growers were present. Clarence Reynolds was in the chair, and N. Harold Cottam acted as secretary.

An instructive paper on the growing of violets was read by Peter T. DeVoy, of the firm of Thomas DeVoy's Son, on Worral avenue.

Mr. DeVoy has just perfected a new violet which has a most beautiful blossom of a light wistaria shade, and which is considered particularly suitable for use in corsage bouquets. Mr. DeVoy has been two years at work developing this violet, and he feels that it is now in a perfect and permanent state.

Florists at the meeting who examined the new bloom pronounced it exquisite, and the society not only gave Mr. DeVoy a vote of thanks for his well written and informative paper on violets, but moved that a certificate of merit be awarded him by the society for developing the new violet. Mr. DeVoy has named the new violet after his little five-year-old daughter, Marie Elise.

The meeting of the society seemed to be generally helpful to those in attendance, and most of the florists present took part in the discussion which followed the reading of Mr. DeVoy's paper.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Officers for 1909-10: Pres., F. H. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; Vice-pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-fifth annual meeting, Denver, June 8 to 10, 1910.

THE Rock Island railroad finds itself in the nursery business this week, through the refusal of a shipment of some 80,000 fruit trees.

THE celerity with which the present season is passing is again demonstrating the importance of having large storage capacity for autumn dug nursery stock.

It is reported that J. M. Yates, manager of a nursery near Sherman, Tex., will plant a large quantity of nursery stock on a tract of land near Tyler, Tex.

THE Greenbrier Nursery Co., Greenbrier, Tenn., recently incorporated, has $25,000 capital stock. R. R. Harris is president and U. S. Pribble secretary. Specialties will be made of peach, plum, cherry and ornamentals.

THE Valdesian Nurseries, Bostic, N. C., report an extremely large call for Amoor River privet and say that shipments have been made to thirty-four different states this season. Last year they sent shipments into twenty-eight states and to Canada and have had no reports of winter killing.

THE big packing shed of Stark Bros. Nurseries and Orchards Co., Louisiana, Mo., has been a hive of industry the first days of April. With the prospect for one of the shortest seasons in the history of the nursery trade, new records were made on the number of orders and quantity of stock dispatched within a given time.

C. D. OTIS, florist at Lake Charles, La., has become manager of the newly incorporated Port Arthur Nursery Co., Port Arthur, Tex. The officers of the company are: President, J. W. Gates; vice-president, R. H. Woodworth; secretary-treasurer, Fred Clark; general manager, C. D. Otis. Work on the nursery is progressing rapidly and "of course we expect great things" is the way Mr. Otis puts the prospect.

PROPAGATING BETULA.

Please tell me how to propagate the birch, Betula alba pendula laciniata.

C. W. K.

Betula alba pendula laciniata and other allied forms are best propagated by tongue or cleft grafting on plants in pots in a cold greenhouse, using preferably B. nigra or B. alba for stock. You will find this a more satisfactory method than budding in summer, which is also practiced to some extent.

COST RECORDS.

The Bookkeeper, a magazine published in Detroit, printed in its March issue a lengthy illustrated article, "System of Accounting in the Nursery Business," by John S. Gallagher, which observes:

"It is an old story in the nursery business that a man may sell stock at a loss when he thinks he is making a profit. Nurserymen with a large volume of trade sometimes manage to remain poor—all because they do not know what it costs to produce the stock they sell. As in many agricultural pursuits, a lump sum after the season has passed and its expenses are paid is apt to be looked upon as profit, while it may represent a loss. The land may have lost much valuable fertility, the entire equipment have undergone depreciation, the cost of unsold and diseased stock be more than the

Prices upon application

Ramblers and Other Climbing Roses

CRIMSON RAMBLER. American Grown. The only stock for forcing. Large heavy plants, two years old, mossed and packed in bundles of 10, 3 to 4 feet, $1.25 for 10, $12.00 per 100; 4 to 5 feet, $1.75 for 10, $15.00 per 100; 5 to 6 feet, extra heavy, $2.25 for 10, $20.00 per 100.

PAUL'S CARMINE PILLAR. Flowers large and free; color rosy carmine. Two-year-old, field grown. 85c for 5, $15.00 per 100.

DOROTHY PERKINS. Lovely shell-pink color. $1.25 for 10, $12.00 per 100.

TAUSENDSCHON. The new Rambler Rose. The name translated means a "thousand beauties." Color beautiful rose, shading to pink. $2.25 for 10, $20.00 per 100.

LADY GAY. A seedling from the popular Crimson Rambler, which it resembles in habit and general effect. The flowers are of a delicate cherry-pink color, which fades to soft white. Strong plants, field-grown, 4 to 5 feet. $1.75 for 10, $15.00 per 100.

Flower of Fairfield The Everblooming Crimson Rambler

This variety is a sport from the beautiful Crimson Rambler, is similar in color, more brilliant and lasting than the old favorite. It also possesses the further advantage over the Crimson Rambler in the fact that it flowers profusely on the young wood the first year. Flower of Fairfield is a vigorous grower and free bloomer. It starts to bloom early in the Spring and continues until late in the Autumn. It is rightly termed "perpetual blooming." 40c each, $3.50 for 10, $30.00 per 100.

Veilchenblau (Violet-Blue)

It has long been the desire of rosarians to secure a blue Rose. In Veilchenblau we have practically approached this color. The steel-blue flowers of this new Rose appear in large clusters, are semi-double, of medium size and keep in bloom a long time. The showy yellow stamens, contrasting with the blue flower, give the whole a striking appearance. 60c each, $5.75 for 10, $55.00 per 100.

Baby Rambler Roses

BABY DOROTHY. The same in habit as Baby Rambler, but the color of the flowers is similar to Dorothy Perkins. It makes an excellent pot plant for forcing. Price for strong, field-grown plants, 85c for 5, $16.00 per 100.

CATHERINE SEIMETH. A White Baby Rambler Rose, larger and better flowers than the type. White with yellowish center. 85c for 5, $15.00 per 100.

MRS. WM. H. CUTBUSH. Color intense crimson and exceptionally free-flowering. 85c for 5, $15.00 per 100.

MME. NORBERT LEVAVASSEUR (Baby Rambler). Strong, field-grown plants. 85c for 5, $15.00 per 100.

THE TREE BABY RAMBLER. (Grown as a Standard.) The popularity of the Baby Rambler has suggested the growing of it as a tree or standard. 40c each, $3.75 for 10, $35.00 per 100.

BABY DOROTHY. (Grown as a Standard.) For description, see above. 75c each, $6.25 for 10, $60.00 per 100.

We also have a fine stock of Hybrids and Hybrid Teas, standard grown.

Something New in Roses for Florists HALF STANDARD BABY RAMBLERS

These are Baby Ramblers, grown on stems or standards about one and one-half feet high, and will be a novelty for your trade you cannot profitably overlook. They are offered for the first time in this country in the following varieties:

BABY DOROTHY (Half standard). Deep pink. 60c each, $6.00 per doz., $45.00 per 100.

BABY RAMBLER (Half standard). Crimson. 45c each, $4.50 per doz., $35.00 per 100.

BABY CATHERINE SEIMETH (Half standard). White. 45c each, $4.50 per doz., $35.00 per 100.

BABY "STARS AND STRIPES" (Half standard). White and red grafted on the same plant; most attractive. 50c each, $5.00 per doz., $40.00 per 100.

profits gained, and the losses through frost and drought have further decreased the chances of gain. This sometimes happens until at last the nursery yields barely enough to support its owner.

"A nurseryman may easily, and often does, sell some varieties of his stock at a loss because he has no knowledge of accounting systems and detests anything that savors of 'red tape.' Nothing but simple and accurate accounting systems applied to the business can give growers of nursery stock that true business perspective that makes for steady and true advancement.

"While the general accounts of the nurseryman resemble those of the usual business, there are a few special ones which owe their origin to the agricultural basis of his vocation." These are described briefly, since the filling in of details depends to a large extent upon the person handling them, and the article concludes:

"Only the general aspects of the subject have been treated here, but enough has been said to make the main idea clear, namely, that the cost of producing every variety of stock in the face of all expenses and losses must be known. Specific details can be filled in only when it is known what conditions the system is to meet. Now that a period of prosperity has come to nurserymen, it behooves them to conduct their business on a strict accounting basis, in order that they may reap full benefit from the increasing trade."

THE POMOLOGICAL SOCIETY.

The American Pomological Society passed its sixty-second milestone at the time of its last meeting in St. Catharines, September, 1909. The formal meeting which brought this historical organization into existence was held in New York in September, 1848, although that meeting was preceded by a preliminary conference held by those interested in the organization some time previous in the city of Buffalo.

In view of the many inquiries regarding the scope and purposes of this society, the secretary makes the following statement:

The society is non-sectional, and is as comprehensive in its aims as the broadest interests of fruit growing demand. Its purpose is to coördinate, unify and further the interests of the various horticultural societies by stimulating the best methods of culture, popularizing scientific advances, and urging the planting of varieties characterized by high quality.

The society has no limitations in regard to membership. It is open to the amateur as well as to the commercial grower of fruits, to the nurseryman as well as to the orchardist. The fees are light, being $2 for the biennial period. The reports are exceedingly valuable, as well to the teacher as to the practical fruit grower.

Life membership in the society is of two kinds: to institutions, it is secured for a thirty-year period on payment of a twenty-dollar fee. Individuals may secure life membership on payment of the same fee. In addition to the forthcoming reports, the society gives each life member, on entering, copies of as many of the back volumes of the Transactions as are now available. These are becoming rare and consequently valuable.

The society is of special interest to the fruit breeder. It promotes development of improved varieties by offering prizes for distinctly worthy new kinds. To this end it maintains a committee whose duty it is to examine and report on new originations and make such recommendations as in their judgment are appropriate. One of the earlier presidents of the society, the late Marshall P. Wilder, left a fund which is used to provide silver and bronze medals to be awarded to originators of worthy new fruits.

The officers are: President, L. A. Goodman, Kansas City, Mo.; secretary, John Craig, Ithaca, N. Y.; treasurer, L. R. Taft, East Lansing, Mich.; executive committee, C. L. Watrous, Des Moines, Ia.; W. C. Barry, Rochester, N. Y.; C. W. Garfield, Grand Rapids, Mich.; G. L. Taber, Glen St. Mary, Fla.; W. T. Macoun, Ottawa, Can.

STANDARD WISTARIAS.

There is a growing demand for wistarias grown in tree or standard form. The Japanese are adepts at growing wistarias in this way, but as there are no special difficulties to master in order to secure them, there would seem to be no good reason for their culture, being as yet somewhat restricted. While they may be kept in standard form outdoors if the necessary summer pruning and pinching is attended to, it is as specimens in tubs for piazza adornment that they are specially fine. In order to secure a batch of this type of wistarias, purchase field grown plants. Prune away all but the strongest shoot. Tie this up securely to a stout stake. The stem should not be less than four feet and one or two feet over this is better where big heads are ultimately desired. Grow these outdoors undisturbed for a couple of seasons, carefully removing all side shoots and keeping the growths on the head pinched. Place in tubs of suitable size after two years of outdoor growth. Lift the roots as carefully as possible when transferring

Plants with a head diameter of eight to ten feet, carrying thousands of racemes, are to be found on some estates and these are a glorious spectacle. It takes some years to secure plants of this size, but in four or five years nice heads can be had. The best varieties to grow are W. Chinensis and its white form, Chinensis alba. Pink Climbing Rose— Dorothy Perkins

Without doubt the most valuable of all the new Climbing Roses of comparatively recent introduction. The beauty of the double pink flowers is admirably set off by the rich green foliage, which is free from the attacks of insects.

In addition to this charming kind, we have all the popular varieties in climbing and bush Roses. Our General Catalogue, which will be mailed on request, contains descriptions of all the best Roses—also

PACIFIC COAST.

SANTA CRUZ, CAL.—Two florists of this city lost their wives by death during the last week of March, and there was an interval of only two days between the two sad events. The death of Mrs. W. E. King, which occurred March 28, was reported in the obituary column of last week's REVIEW. Mrs. Thomas Thompson died March 31, as reported in this week's obituary column.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Market conditions are again normal. Easter week showed a remarkable gain over former years. The fine weather preceding Easter was all that could be wished. Stock was brought along in fine shape. Easter lilies were of a higher grade than usual and therefore brought better returns. Azaleas, rhododendrons, ramblers and basket arrangements were in favor. In fact, when the rush was over, there was nothing of good quality left. Cut flowers were abundant. Carnations and roses were in greatest demand. On account of the warm weather, violets were practically out of the market.

Outside work is progressing rapidly, as is evidenced by the demand for roses and shrubbery. The catalogue trade is unusually active in the rural districts.

The funeral of Judge George Williams aided in reducing the surplus stock. Some elegant floral arrangements were in evidence, and local as well as telegraphic orders called only for a high class of work.

Lilac and cherry blossoms are becoming more plentiful and are used effectively for window arrangements.

Various Notes.

Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, is calling on the local trade. He was somewhat overdue, as he had been detained several weeks in California on account of sickness.

T. M. Barrett, of Rutland, Vt., has bought the store of the Art Floral Co. and will continue it as a general retail establishment. E. R. C.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The several weeks of rainy weather enjoyed during Easter time have been followed by bright sunshine and rather warm days. Flowers as a consequence are more plentiful than they have been at any time this year. This is especially noticeable with carnations and roses and the prices on both these articles have dropped to a minimum. Many thousands of Easter lilies, scheduled to blossom on time, but delayed by the dark weather at that time, are now being brought into town and are being fairly well used for funeral orders. Other kinds of bulbous stock are showing the effects of the late season and will soon be a thing of the past.

Wild flowers of several varieties are eagerly bought by the public and the street hucksters are devoting most of their time to handling them. Fruit blossoms also find great favor with the flower-buying people, and these, together with green stock, form a large percentage of the retailers' daily sales. Valley has been scarce since Easter and sells better than almost anything in the line of small flowers. Lilac has made its appearance and moves well. The great bulk of it is shipped into town from the interior country by the green goods men and is one of their chief sources of income during the month. Trade is fair, considering the low prices received for stock, but in a couple of weeks this will be changed to a great extent and better business should result.

Various Notes.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

Business with the retail florists last week was rather quiet. It looks as though the public spent most of its money at Easter time and now is trying to save up for the future.

Nurserymen and seedsmen are working to the limit, and are unable to keep up with orders. The exceptional weather conditions make customers say "send it now," and every person around the establishments is trying to make good by rushing the orders. W. T. Logan, of Crosman Bros., reports an April business in March. James Vick's Sons are working their force evenings to keep even with orders, and have a larger number of girls in the order and packing rooms than ever before.

Club Meeting.

A well attended meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association was held April 11. After the usual business was finished, Prof. L. B. Judson, of the Agricultural Department at Cornell University, spoke on "The Etherizing of Plants and Bulbs," giving detailed explanation of the method of using the ether, the results obtained on early and late blooms, and the effect on color of the flower. Prof. Judson also urged on the florists the importance of supporting a bill recently introduced in the state legislature appropriating $50,000 to construct green-

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Business continues to be about what it should be and everyone is getting enough to keep him busy, and those who handle seeds have been getting more than enough. Flowers continue to come in just about right and are bringing fair prices for this time of the year, nothing going to waste except violets, which are poor in quality; however, they did much better this season than last, so there should not be much complaint.

Sweet peas have been more popular and have brought better prices. Never were they in so great demand as this year, especially since violets have not been so good. There are quantities of fine American Beauties coming now and bringing fair prices considering everything.

Various Notes.

Well, we had the expected frost last Wednesday night, which damaged the magnolias and some of the early fruit, such as cherries, peaches and pears, which were in full bloom in the vicinity.

Joseph Thomas was a visitor at the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. last week, looking over one of their big houses, as he is going to put up one of that kind this spring.

Ernest Zieger has retired from the Zieger Co., having sold out his interest. He will probably be heard from along some other line before long, as he is too full of energy to remain long inactive.

Arthur Hall, of the A. W. Smith Co., is confined to his home and it is feared his trouble will develop into pneumonia.

Some of the visitors last week were Theo. Malbranc, Johnstown, Pa., and John Murchie and daughter, Sharon, Pa. It was the amateur athletic meet Saturday that brought Mr. Murchie to the city, as he is too good an old sport to let the good things get by, although his game is golf, in which Andrew Carnegie has nothing on him when he is on the links.

Davis & Britton report that they are going to extend their greenhouse 75x100 feet, using all cement construction. LENOX, MASS.

The annual rose and carnation exhibition of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held Saturday, April 2, and was a decided success. The members turned out in full force and were amply rewarded for their trouble. Seldom, if ever before, have roses and carnations of such high quality been seen in Berkshire county.

Upwards of fifty vases were staged for competition in the various classes. As a scarlet, Beacon was strongly exhibited, while White Perfection, Enchantress, Winsor, Bay State, Rose-pink Enchantress and Octoroon were well represented in their respective colors.

An exhibit on which special praise was bestowed consisted of two magnificent vases of Mrs. C. W. Ward and Alma Ward carnations, shown by the Cottage Gardens Co., of Queens, N. Y. These were unanimously awarded first-class certificates, the society's highest award.

Another exhibit which was greatly admired was an exceedingly fine vase of fifty flowers of the new carnation, White House, exhibited by Dailedouze Bros., of Brooklyn. This variety was shown in the best of condition, which speaks well for its shipping qualities. The flowers were borne on long, stiff stems and measured fully three and one-half inches across. This was also awarded a first-class certificate.

The following is a list of the principal awards:

Elm Court Farm, first for twenty-five Enchantress, Winsor, twelve American Beauty and Richmond roses.

A. H. Wingett, first for twenty-five Beacon, twelve Bay State, and twelve President Carnot roses.

S. Carlquist, first for twelve White Perfection, Beacon, Enchantress, Octoroon and Rose-pink Enchantress.

J. J. Donohoe, first for twenty-five My Maryland and second for twelve American Beauty roses, Winsor, Beacon, M. A. Patten, and Rose-pink Enchantress. He was also awarded a certificate of cultural commendation for an extra fine vase of Queen Alexandra stocks.

The judges were E. Jenkins, R. Speirs, W. Jack and A. J. Jenkins.

G. Breed read an interesting paper on "The Orchards of the Berkshires," dealing with the best varieties, the soils, pests, general management, etc. Considerable discussion was created, many of the members asking questions, which Mr. Breed answered in an able manner. He was accorded a hearty vote of thanks for his instructive lecture. G. H. I.

SANGAMO BRILLIANT PINK

Experienced carnation growers who have visited our place, and have carefully watched Sangamo this season, claim it will produce twice as many blooms as any other variety grown today. It is not only the most prolific carnation, but the calyx does not burst, and the stem is always long and stiff; therefore, Sangamo increases your profits more than two-fold. We not only invite growers to visit our place to see for their own satisfaction, but we will pay your railroad fare from Chicago to our place and back again, if you will only come. It is not too late for Sangamo. Our best plants were propagated in March and April last year.

Strong, healthy, well rooted cuttings ready.

LOUISVILLE.

The Market.

Stock of all kinds is plentiful. Several growers have big crops of carnations on, and the prices have been cut to 75 cents per dozen. Several special sales were held and they sold on these occasions at 40 cents. Roses are a little less plentiful, but still there are enough.

Ten weeks' stocks are in full crop and are a glut. These flowers have been quite a disappointment, as the majority of them are singles. With some growers as many as ninety per cent come single, and as these growers buy the best strain of seed, they cannot understand why they should have such results.

Outdoor lilacs are coming in and are being sold on the streets for little or nothing. The same is true of jonquils and other early flowering shrubs.

Several of the carnation growers have planted their young stock in the fields and the others will get their stock out soon, as the soil and weather conditions are favorable. Pansy beds are about all planted. Ivy and roses are being planted daily. Geraniums and other bedding plants are coming on nicely.

Various Notes.

William Walker is cutting carnations galore. He will have an extra fine bench of My Maryland roses in full crop in a few days.

Jacob Schulz gave his annual banquet to his employees in recognition of the good work done during Easter week. There were twenty-one present. After supper, which was enjoyed by all, dancing was begun and was kept up until midnight, when a few songs were sung and the crowd went home, feeling sure that their employer was a "good fellow."

DETROIT.

The Market.

Trade was not quite as lively last week as was anticipated.

Stock is quite plentiful, but the demand, so far, has been well equal to the supply. Sweet peas seem to be quite popular. Violets are getting poor and will, no doubt, be but a remembrance in a few weeks.

Various Notes.

Located on a 40-acre farm four miles northeast of Birmingham, Mich., George Reynolds is busy growing asparagus, strawberries and raspberries for the Detroit market. Mr. Reynolds was for many years gardener to William E. McWilliams, at Grosse Pointe Farms, and a most active member of the Detroit Florists' Club.

H. R. Hughes, of Chicago, paid Detroit a visit last week. He had with him an album containing many photos of some of his beautiful windows, which proved most interesting to the retailers here who were given an opportunity of seeing it.

The news of the sudden death of Mrs. W. J. Vesey, ex-president of the Ladies' S. A. F., was received with much regret by her many friends here. Mrs. C. H. Maynard, secretary of the ladies' society, with Mr. Maynard, left Detroit on the midnight train on Monday to attend the funeral.

Herman Dailey, for many years at Schroeter's, has accepted a position as foreman of J. F. Sullivan's greenhouses.

Greenhouse help is at a premium in this city this spring, several good positions remaining unfilled. H. S.

WOBURN, MASS.—Mrs. David Fisher has sold her home and greenhouse plant, on Hill street, to Mr. Flood, who will continue the business. Mrs. Fisher will reside in Wollaston, where her daughters are employed as teachers.

AMHERST, MASS.—A. Foster Johnson will engage in growing plants, flowers and vegetables, under the name of the Union Gardens, at 5 and 6 Woodside avenue, the products to be sold both at wholesale and retail.

PANSIES.

PANSY PARK PERFECTION, the best strain of giant pansies. The growing of pansy seed has been one of my specialties for 37 years, and this strain is the result of many years of breeding, and selection. Flowers of the largest size, most perfect form and greatest variety of rich and rare colors and markings. One of many reports: "The pansy plants did finely last year and were the best collection of colors anywhere around here." A. B. J., Florist, Three Rivers, Mass. Fine, stocky, well rooted, hardy field-grown plants, just right to transplant and grow on to bloom and sell in May, $3.50 per 1000; 500, $2.00; 5000 or more at $3.00 per 1000. Cash with order.
L. W. Goodell, Pansy Park, Dwight P. O., Mass.

500,000 PANSIES.

Best market strain grown; grown from seed of our own raising. This strain is the result of over 25 years' careful selection, and for size, form and substance and wide range of color in clear, brilliant selfs and novel shades and markings, they will be found unsurpassed. The colors are very evenly assorted and the growth is very strong and stocky. Fall transplanted plants, ready to bud and bloom. Price, $10.00 per 1000. Larger sizes, $15.00 and $20.00 per 1000. Express only. Cash with order.
I. E. Coburn, 291 Ferry St., Everett, Mass.

Ready now. 250,000 fine large fall transplanted pansies, in bud and bloom, superb strain. A trial order will convince you that these are the best you ever handled. Price, $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000. Cash with order. You need these superb strain pansies for your particular trade.

DAHLIAS FOR FUNERAL WORK.

What are the best pink and white dahlias for bouquets and funeral work?

O. E. K.

Among cactus dahlias, Kriemhilde, soft pink; Countess of Lonsdale, salmon, tinted apricot; Keynes White. In decorative, Henry Patrick, pure white; Mme. Van den Dael, shell pink. In peony flowered, Baron G. de Grancy, pure white; Glory of Baarn, soft pink. In double show varieties, A. D. Livoni, soft pink; Grand Duke Alexis, white, tinted pale lavender. The little pompons are extremely useful; among these Guiding Star, pure white; White Lady, pure white, and Little Beauty, shrimp pink, can be highly recommended. C.

Greenhouse Heating.

PIPING IN WYOMING.

I am building a range of greenhouses and intend to use a tubular, horizontal boiler, which was procured from an electric light plant. I do not know the exact dimensions of the boiler, but it is rated at eighty horse-power. How many feet of glass is it capable of heating in this climate? Last winter the thermometer registered as low as 45 degrees below zero. How many 1-inch pipes will be required to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees, with steam, in a house 21x100, seven feet to the eaves, with glass in each end and two feet of glass in the south side? The north side is boarded.
 L. M. B.

A boiler with a rating of eighty horse-power will heat 16,000 square feet of glass, even under the severe conditions mentioned. For a house 21x100 feet, about 800 square feet of radiation will be needed, and this can be supplied by twenty-four 1-inch pipes. It will be better, however, to use eighteen 1½-inch pipes.

While it is always advisable to have a boiler of ample size, to use one so out of proportion as in this case will not be economical in the amount of fuel consumed.

A NORTH CAROLINA RANGE.

I have three greenhouses and expect to build another. House No. 1 is 16x60 feet and four and one-half feet to the eaves, with a foot and a half of glass in the west side. At the front, or north end, of this house is a new addition, 14x16, with 6-foot walls and three feet of glass all around. At the south end of this house is the boiler-room. Extending south from the boiler-room is house No. 2, which is 16x56, with a 4½-foot solid wall all around, except that there is glass in the south end. House No. 3 is a separate house, 21x48 and five and one-half feet to the eaves. This house is west of house No. 2, at right angles with it, and has two and one-half feet of glass in the north side and east end. The proposed house will be south of house

No. 3 and will be 22x48 feet in size.

I wish to rearrange the piping and should like to use about 400 feet of 1½-inch pipe which I have on hand. How many runs of pipe and what sizes would you recommend, to maintain a temperature of 55 degrees when the outside temperature is 18 or 20 degrees above zero? What size of boiler would be needed to heat this range, including the proposed house? Would a coil built in bricks answer for a boiler and how should it be constructed?
 G. J. S.

For house No. 1, 16x60 feet, if to be heated by hot water, it will be well to use two 2½-inch flow pipes and six 2-inch returns. The flows could be run along the purlins and extended through the 14-foot addition. To furnish the extra heat required on account of the glass in the side walls and in the ends of this house, the coils should extend along the end walls, beginning close to the door on each side. The same number of pipes will be needed in house No. 2, 16x56 feet. For house No. 3, 21x48 feet, eight 2-inch returns will be required, in addition to the two 2½-inch flow pipes.

To supply heat for these houses and for the proposed house, 22x48, it will be well to have a boiler rated for 1,500 square feet. While the first cost may be slightly higher, it is generally more satisfactory in the end if one of the regular greenhouse hot water boilers is used, rather than a coil such as G. J. S. mentions.

THREE CONNECTED HOUSES.

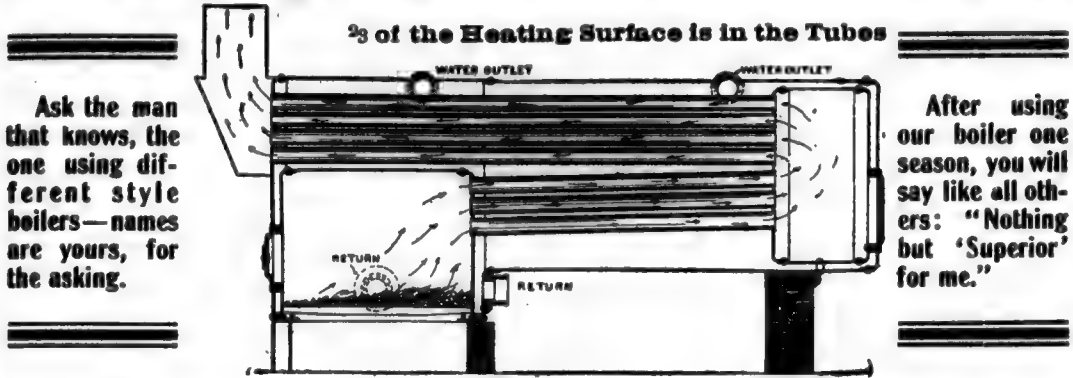

We are building three connected houses, each 20x100, twelve feet to the ridge and four feet to the eaves. How many lines of 2-inch returns will be required to heat these houses to 50 degrees with hot water, in zero weather? We intend to run two 2½-inch flows along the purlins and place the returns on the sides. What capacity of sectional boiler will be needed? We are located in the state of Washington.

Each of the houses will require seven

The Market.

Beyond a doubt summer has come on us all at once, for we have had no spring weather to speak of. The fruit trees are all out in full bloom and present indications point to large crops of fruit, if Jack Frost doesn't come along and spoil the prospects. Such weather as this for the time and season has not been experienced in many years. Many are already complaining of spring fever, but it is impossible to give vent to their feelings, as this is another busy season, getting ready for Decoration day. If this weather continues, beyond a doubt flowers will be extremely scarce and high, while peonies, which come in so nicely when filling Decoration day orders, will be coming in much too soon. Lilacs are now in full bloom. The powerful heat of the sun is beginning to have a telling effect on roses and carnations, as they are diminishing in size.

Business last week was fair and no one seems to be complaining. There seems to have been plenty of all kinds of stock except carnations, and while crops were large on these, the demand was greater. The market is quite crowded with Easter lilies at present and there seems to be a good demand for them, but the supply is so large that the quantity consumed is not noticeable. Daffodils, Romans and narcissi have seen their day for a while, as the sun is getting too much power for them. Valley is coming in good, and sells well.

Various Notes.

The Dayton Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting April 4, at the establishment of Mrs. E. Young. An interesting feature of the meeting was the report of the banquet committee, which consists of Horace M. Frank, George W. Bartholomew, J. W. McNary and John Boehner. They reported that the date for the banquet was April 14, place Hotel Phillips, and that all the arrangements were complete. They also extended a cordial invitation to the ladies to partake of the feast, which invitation was gladly accepted.

We are glad to report that the condition of Miss Minnie Johnson, who has been seriously ill for many months, is now improving. Since her illness Miss Lucy Johnson has had full charge of their business.

The little son of Joseph Furst, who has been critically ill for the last few weeks with lung fever, is able to be up.

W. E. Judy, representing W. E. Judy

& Bro., of Greenville, O., was in town last week, introducing to our local tradesmen a new elastic glazing paste, which seems to be a good thing. It is applied in the same manner as liquid putty, but is frost-proof and water-proof. It is a glossy black in color, adheres to any surface, will not crumble, and is flexible at all times. They report that all who have tried it speak highly of it.

Mrs. B. Haschke has been suffering from a bad case of poisoning in her hands and face, which she got from handling Primula obconica during the Easter rush. About the first of May she intends to erect a new house, 28x150. Five years ago Mrs. Haschke embarked in the flower business, putting up a small range of houses. Her business rapidly increased and she has since enlarged her plant extensively. The new house will be given up to chrysanthemums until after their season is over, and then will be used for miscellaneous stock. Mrs. Haschke will this fall introduce to the trade a red seedling chrysanthemum, which is considered by all who have seen it to be the best red chrysanthemum on the market, it being a deep, velvety red.

Joseph N. Hodgins and Oscar Acton, of Richmond, Ind., and Mrs. Schadt and Conrad Schadt, of Cincinnati, O., were guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Bartholomew, April 10.

Mrs. L. D. Johnson and her son, William, left April 9 for a two weeks' visit in New Orleans, La., where they will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. M. Cook.

Thomas A. Poole, formerly in business as Poole & Purllant, at Washington C. H., called on the Dayton florists April 11.

Miss Ruby Bartholomew, Mrs. Ray G. Bartholomew and her son, Kenneth, spent April 10 as the guests of Mrs. Edgar Thompson, Covington, O.

"There are tricks in all trades but ours," you often hear the florist say, but it was only a few days ago that a nurseryman was in town soliciting orders among our residents for crocus bulbs for immediate delivery. He was successful in getting several orders, but in filling them small gladiolus bulbs were used.

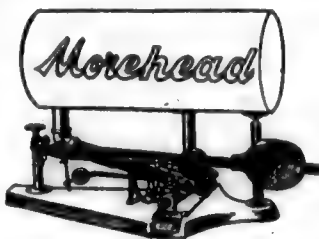

Mrs. E. Young was called upon one day last week to make up a vegetable bouquet, which was to be presented to a young bride. Mrs. Young, equal to all occasions, scoured the market and picked up every vegetable in season. For a centerpiece she used a small cabbage; other vegetables were tomatoes, radishes, turnips, carrots, lettuce, etc., and for streamers she used small pretzels, prunes and "weiners."

The Miami Floral Co. had an exceptionally large week at funeral designing.

Mr. Cassell, representing the Central Rubber & Supply Co., of Indianapolis, Ind., made his rounds among our florists last week. R. A. B.

CANAJOHARIE, N. Y.—Joseph Traudt was present at a recent meeting of the board of trustees of the Prospect Hill cemetery and gave some valuable information in regard to ornamental trees, a number of which will probably be planted in the cemetery.

BELVIDERE, ILL.—John W. Lyon has sold a half interest in his greenhouses and business to Herbert Anderson, his son-in-law. Mr. Anderson was formerly with Mr. Lyon at the Fairview Greenhouses, but of late has been with M. C. Sadewater, at Rockford.

DENVER.

The Market.

The week following Easter is generally apt to be quiet and this year was no exception to the rule. There has been plenty of stock of all kinds coming in since Easter and the market was not such as to keep it cleaned up.

Roses are coming in freely and carnations have been more than plentiful, so that prices are lower and excellent values are offered, some going as low as $1 per hundred. Beauties are also more plentiful and a little down in price. Violets are nearly gone, but sweet peas and pansies are taking their place.

The plant trade has naturally fallen off since Easter, but there is still some business doing in the smaller and desirable flowering stock.

Various Notes.

The Colorado Florists' Club will give its first ball and card party Thursday evening, April 21, at T. M. A. hall. They are making great preparations for a fine time, having a good working committee, who have selected an excellent program. Every member is invited to come and bring a lady friend.

Ed. Johnson, of Colorado Springs, was a recent visitor.

Emil Glauber, of the Montclair Greenhouses, is making a month's visit to California.

Fred Hall expects to leave the first of the month for England, to visit his mother.
E. S. K.

HARLAN, IA.

While the unseasonably warm weather has had a bad effect on the flower market, the summer call for flowers will be heavy. Everything in the way of shrubbery is out one month too early and is in danger of being injured by frost. Snowballs and bridal wreath will, from the present start, all be gone before Memorial day, if they are not wiped out by a frost.

Wet fall weather made all outdoor roses soft and they winter-killed over a wide range of country from Missouri to Minneapolis.

Peonies are early. Most common sorts may be in full bloom on Memorial day and may interfere with the demand for carnations and roses, but disastrous frosts are yet possible, which may wipe them out.

The outlook for early summer demand is, I think, good and will make up for present losses and discouragements.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

NEW YORK BELTING

PACKING CO. LTD
91-93 CHAMBERS ST. NEW YORK

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

THE MASTIN AUTOMATIC WHITEWASH AND SPRAYING MACHINE IS RELIABLE, PRACTICAL AND DURABLE

The tank is made of galvanized sheet steel, and in brass. The pump is of brass throughout, simple and powerful. The mixing device keeps the contents of the tank well stirred up from start to finish.

When the machine is filled to within six inches of the top, a few strokes of the pump will compress enough air in the tank to produce a continuous mist-like spray for 15 minutes.

All parts are made to gauge and may be had for repairs. Ask your dealer about our Extension Hose, Extension Rods and the Mastin Whitewash Nozzle for Bordeaux mixture.

BUFFALO.

Business last week was rather quiet. Stock is plentiful in all lines and prices to suit the purchaser. Plants are scarce, owing to the extremely hot weather, which brought everything out with a rush.

But few social functions were booked last week, and funeral work was about the extent of the trade.

Never in the history of the trade have Boston ferns been so scarce as they are this year. The demand for this fern has grown every year as the spring trade approached, and this year the Bostons appear to be scarce everywhere.

Spring trade has opened rapidly this season and cemetery work has started early. The landscape men have had excellent weather and all report an active trade. R. A. S.

ALVIN, TEX.

Mrs. P. E. Nelson has sold her business here to Mrs. Ralph W. Woodward and removed to Galveston, where she expects to establish a retail flower store in the near future. Mrs. Woodward will continue the business of raising flowers for market. Mrs. Parker reports from Galveston that she is growing stock on a small scale prior to starting her store and had sweet peas in the open ground blooming in season for the Easter trade. The seeds were planted the day after Christmas.

Easter stock shipped in was poor this year, all the florists in this section losing more or less, because the extreme heat made the stock soft and it shipped poorly. One lot of 500 Easter lilies even resulted in the loss of two-fifths.

The social season is at its height in this section just after Easter and business has been good, but the warm weather will soon make flower buyers fly to the mountains.

The cape jasmine crop, for which Alvin is famous, will be in good season this year, owing to the mild winter and early spring.

The strawberry crop along the Alvin coast country has been seriously damaged by red spider, but the farmers are fighting it in dead earnest now and perhaps will save a part of the crop.

TORONTO.

The Market.

Easter business was the best the trade has ever known in this neighborhood. Everything was cleaned up except a few azaleas and carnations. Lilies were short after Saturday noon. Violets were small and the supply was somewhat short, owing to the strong sun and warm weather here all through March. Valley and sweet peas were to be had in abundance and were sold out clean. Roses were not equal to the demand. Bulbous stock, both cut and potted, was plentiful. Cat-tleyas were scarce and were only to be seen in a couple of the stores.

Various Notes.

Miller & Sons, of Bracondale, sent in large quantities of lilies and spiraeas, and also some extra fine carnations.

Grobba & Wandrey, of Mimico, sent in well flowered lilacs and a lot of lily of the valley in pots. They also had a fine lot of longiflorums.

Frank Duffert had some extra fine Hydrangea Otaksa and lilac plants.

John H. Dunlop was sending his lilies down from the greenhouses in large moving vans. His azaleas and rhododendrons were the best to be seen in town.

Geo. Gard had a nice lot of cinerarias, primulas and azaleas.

August Urbach had a number of churches to decorate, which kept him busy most of the week. He gives special attention to this class of work.

Jennings sent in a quantity of English primroses in pots. There seems to have been quite an increase in the demand for this during the last two years. MAC.

HOUSTON, TEX.

The reports of what is being accomplished by some of the florists indicate a healthy condition of the trade in this city. For instance, it is stated that the Robert C. Kerr Floral Co., at 2415-17 Travis street, is planning to double the capacity of its greenhouses, because the increase in trade demands the increased facilities. This firm traces its origin to Sherman, Tex., where, in 1885, A. W. Kerr founded a business, which he sold to his son, Robert C. Kerr, five and a half years ago. When the establishment was started here, it included only one greenhouse and covered the space of only two city lots; now twelve acres are in use, being largely occupied by outside stock, and there is a prospect of doubling the glass area soon, as already stated.

Robert Luepke, who has greenhouses at 16 to 18 Spring street and a store at 905 Main street, is a skillful designer and decorator and his work is greatly in demand for the more important banquets and other functions, including the annual memorial receptions given by the Elks. Mr. Luepke has won a number of first prizes at exhibitions in this state and Oklahoma.

ORANGE, N. J.

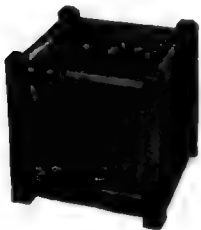

The regular monthly meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held April 8. George Smith addressed the society on "The Florist vs. the Gardener." The usual floral display was composed of contributions from various private estates and was considerably increased by the offer of thirteen silver cups. A letter was read from Hitchings & Co. making an offer of a silver cup, which it was decided to offer in the dahlia section for competition next October.

Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., staged one of their inimitable collections of orchids, in which cattleyas, dendrobiums, miltonias and phalenopsis figured. Most noticeable was a Dendrobium nobile, Ainsworth variety, with pure white flowers and exhibited for the first time in this country.

Thomas Jones, of Summit, exhibited a fine vase of wallflowers.

The judges for the evening were John Hayes and Edward Eccles.

Materials For Our Houses

In the first place, in their raw state they are the very best materials we can buy—in the second place, they are worked up in a new factory that has every advantage of up-to-dateness—in the third place, we thoroughly understand greenhouse building, and the kind of materials that build the best houses.

We don't claim to be the "cheapest on earth," but we do know there are no better materials at any price. Besides, you will like our way of doing business.

THE EASE of ERECTION of OUR PIPE-FRAME HOUSE

(OR "SEMI-IRON")

Getting started is always the hard part, but it is simple enough with this construction. Set your Wrought Iron Posts in concrete, and then bolt on the Galvanized Angle Iron Eave Plate. When once you get the plate lined up, the rest comes along easy enough. With the Giant Arch next up, you have a complete scaffolding for the putting up of bars and ridge. The bars are fastened to the Eave Plate by the Bar Clasps, making their spacing absolutely accurate, so you will have no trouble about that. The Wrought Iron Ridge Brackets are bolted to the ridge, and each bar screwed to the Bracket, and that does the trick there.

With the Gable Rafters bolted to the iron posts, which extend to the height of the eaves all around, the gable framing is greatly simplified. Now practically all that remains to be done are the sides and glazing.

So you see it is a construction with its strongest structural points so worked out that it is the easiest possible house to erect.

Next to our Sectional Iron Frame Construction, it is certainly the best house to buy and the easiest to build.
